HEALTH DEPARTMENT AFTER MILK DEALERS

Dairymen Who Visit the Pump to Be Checked

The vendors of adulterated milk and cream in Minneapolis are to be prosecuted by the health department. During the past week samples of milk and cream have been secured from the various dealers and will be tested to see if they measure up to the legal standard. In every case where the tests show that milk has been adulterated prosecutions will follow. Of thirty samples that have been tested already, but one was found that stood the test. Many of the samples show that the milk and cream have been watered, while gelatin and other substances have been added to maintain its consistency. Of the numerous cases which have been prosecuted in the past year many dairymen have boldly pleaded guilty to diluting their product with water. Some have laid the blame for milk and cream to quality of water.

VETERAN IS ROBBED

Old Soldier and Wife Almost Destitute Refuse Aid

Women of Minneapolis are interested in the case of an old soldier and his wife who have found an extreme case of the need of such aid. The old soldier, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Stieh, 2219 Third street north. The story of the Stiehs is one of the most touching. Coming to this country from Germany in 1851, Mr. Stieh began working at his trade as a bricklayer. When the Civil war broke out he enlisted in the Union army and served throughout the time of the great struggle. Once it was over he returned to his wife and again they started upon the course of a struggle against a rainy day. The rainy day came with old age. But in the meantime they had acquired a home and sufficient of money to last them well through the declining days. Then came the tempest in the life of the old soldier, one Linser. He told them that they should spend their last days in their native Fatherland. They took his advice and sold their property, securing $10,000. They had a few dollars money, with their implicit faith in human nature, they gave to Linser for safe keeping. Then Linser disappeared and they found themselves of a sudden reduced to pennilessness. But they were proud, this old couple, when the blow fell, nine years ago. The old patriot was receiving $12 per month pension money from the government, they set out to live. They rented a little four-room cottage where they now reside and ever since the old soldier, who, scornful of offers of assistance from the poor department and fort yet, they have their own means of support. In their adversity they have the comfort of knowing that their misfortune followed and constantly overtook the Rev. Mr. Linser. In an accident, shortly afterwards was killed. His wife, before he was killed four months ago in a railway accident.

PUBLICITY AND THE BALANCE SHEET

When the average man looks at a piece of cloth he values it on its quality, and wonders whether the price is not a little too high. When an expert on cloth looks at it he traces it back to a flock of sheep, grazing on a hillside. His mind goes back to the days of primitive looms, and he thinks again to these times of well hinged machinery. He sees the gradual growth of knowledge about dyes, and he thinks of the first Indian painted his cheeks with red ochre the first days when we prefer the hues of the rainbow. He sees the generations of men at work at the looms, each bringing increased skill to the task of making cloth. The merchant should see as much in his balance sheet as the cloth expert sees in the piece of cloth. He should see other things than the figures which represent "net profit." He should understand the causes which have operated to "grind out these figures." And while the balance sheet and profit and loss should interest him, the expenditures of the year for publicity should have the most thorough consideration. For these figures regulate all other figures on the balance sheet as surely as the moon regulates the tides. Assuming that his appropriation for publicity has been wisely expended, he can see where there is a profit. The figure three in the advertising bill would have "around out" a figure eight instead of a figure four in the "profits" column. His mind should travel back to certain days of the year when his stock is weakest and scantiest—when stocks seem anchored to shelves and counters, and clerks all get restless and friendly with one another. The final history of these days is written in the balance sheet. He can recall other days when his advertising was electric with interest—when publicity reached flood-tide and the store was "raided" by patrons. And, thinking of these days, he wonders how the ebbs and flows have traveled so far and turned so reluctantly in the "days that were dull." In substance, the balance sheet should teach him, as the best business and the best advertising "happened" to come for the same time in the coming year, he will raise the standard, secure the inviolable continuity and increase the space occupied by his store advertising.

In the municipal court next Friday Judge Waite will be called upon to determine whether a stakeholder in a bet may be made to return stakes to the loser after he has turned over an equal amount of money to the winner. Charles Rinders, a barber in the Nicolet house, is suing Edward Baker, a Hemetep avenue saloonkeeper, for $100 which he claims to have given to Baker as his side of a bet upon the recent gubernatorial election. Rinders made a $100 bet with F. E. Nobles, traveling salesman for Noyes Bros. & Cutler, St. Paul, he taking the Johnson end of the money and Rinders taking the other. On Nov. 10 Rinders decided that the bet was not a good one. He is said to have turned over to Baker the money he had bet. But A. B. Dowdell, agent for Nobles, had been there before Rinders and had taken the whole pot. Then Rinders was angry and decided to sue.

ACTOR NEAR DEATH

Barnstorming Tragedian Wanders in Bitter Cold

Special to the Globe. SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Feb. 12.—Exposed to the elements until his eyes were frozen shut and bewildered while out on the open prairie, with a fierce northwest wind blowing and the temperature considerably below the zero mark, was the experience of a Spanish tragedian who was entertaining the people of some of the smaller towns of the state. The tragedian gave a "show" in the Epiphany opera house, but the proceeds were not sufficient to pay his way on the cars to the next town, so he set out on foot, notwithstanding that the day was one of the coldest of the winter. The Spaniard wore a slouch hat, with no protection for his ears, was without an overcoat, had no covering for his hands and a very light pair of mittens. He carried a satchel. Some hours after his departure two farmers, Antoz and John Krempegs, while driving home along the road, saw at some distance near a slough a man who was running around in a circle. Attracted by the peculiar actions of the stranger they went to the spot, a glance telling them that the man was freezing, and that he was entirely out of his mind. The cold wind made the tears run from the Spaniard's eyes and the intense cold caused them to freeze. As he could not see he lost the road and was wandering helplessly about when discovered. The two farmers bundled him into their wagon and took him to their home, where they finally succeeded in thawing him out. The Spaniard's escape from death was a narrow one, for had he not been discovered just when he was he would without doubt have frozen to death.

DIVORCES IN OPEN

South Dakota Judge Will Discontinue Privacy

Special to the Globe. SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Feb. 12.—Judge Whiting, of the Ninth judicial circuit, when shown a recent dispatch from Sioux Falls stating it was rumored he was seriously considering the discontinuance of the practice of hearing divorce cases in chambers, instead of in open court, confirms the accuracy of the dispatch. Judge Whiting states that in future all divorce cases instituted in his circuit will be tried in open court at regular terms of court in the counties for divorce purposes. In cases where he is satisfied that there are reasons why certain cases of this kind should be tried in chambers, instead of in open court, he will continue to do so. As the hearings in chambers aids Eastern society people who come to South Dakota for divorce purposes to keep their cases from becoming public, which is their chief object in establishing residences in South Dakota for divorce purposes, they will in future institute a boycott against the circuit presided over by Judge Whiting.
