CLUB ROOM WANTED FOR THE NEWSBOYS

What Has Been Done and Ought to Be Done for Them

If there is a charitably disposed person in St. Paul who wants very much to spend some money where it will do the most good he ought to do something for the newsboys. There are few cities the size of this one which have not a club house or room which these street boys can call their own. Last year a committee of women of the Manufacturers' auxiliary tried to organize a newsboys' drum and fife corps, and went so far as to have bi-weekly meetings at one of Dr. Ohage's buildings on the island, which were attended sometimes by over 200 boys. When winter came on and they could no longer meet on the island the problem stood and in the face of finding a place where they could come together. This they have never been able to discover, up to date. The public halls and buildings do not want a crowd of lawless boys tramping their floors, and the only rooms obtainable are in buildings which would not be safe for drills. Consequently, though the women still stand ready to do what they can for the boys, there does not seem to be any place of meeting available.

Saturday night some of the women of the auxiliary gathered at Christ church guild hall for the purpose of receiving a flag presented by the District chapter, D. A. R., to the prospective newsboys' band and invited all the newswomen of the city to come. By 8:30 there were a dozen women on hand, two large freezers of ice cream and cookies without number. The boys marched in headed by representatives of the circulation departments of the different papers to keep them in order.

They were seated amidst a general noise and commotion, about ten boys deciding on each seat at the same moment. Finally order was established, or something like it, and they were told why they had come, whose guests they were and that their being entertained again would depend on their good behavior this time. The degree of appreciation of whose guests they were could be imagined, when after they had been told they were there by invitation of the Manufacturers' auxiliary, one small voice piped up and said, "Who's he?" One little boy sang some verses very well and was applauded deafeningly by the audience.

The only disturbances during the programme were when one sweet little boy would pound another dear little boy on the head, and a wild rush would be made for their corner in hope of a fight. When they were separated and sat down hard peace would be restored for a moment. Towards the end of the evening something was said about refreshments, and pandemonium broke loose. Suddenly a mob of yelling, nooting, struggling boys was assaulting the kitchen door where the ice cream was to come from. After a great deal of work and discipline they were finally separated and ranged round the hall, where, with awful threats, they were told to remain.

When one of the young women appeared in the doorway with a tray in her hands upon which were plates piled high with ice cream it was a signal for another outbreak, yelling and a threatened onslaught, which was only quelled by force. Long before the ice cream had gone round the room those who served first were ready for more and many hid their plates and departed most piteously that they had not had any. The young men were at last compelled to serve the cream, as no one else seemed to be willing to do so, whether or not they were telling the truth, but before very long all the boys were served and some of them two and three times. A few of them declared that many "doubled on 'em," as they expressed it, before others had been served at all. It was a most amusing and at the same time terrifying spectacle, and some of the young women present found their enthusiasm for newsboys oozing out before the evening was over.

These boys certainly need a civilizing, humanizing influence, and if some man of this city wants to do a good work he could not do better than to furnish a room with games, books and pictures, have a gymnasium attached, if possible, and let the newsboys use it as a club. But it must be done by men, and a man who has been one of them can do it better than young women. They need a strong hand, and a mind somewhere near their level. One little boy the other night sought out one of the women who had given him ice cream and said "Thank you." That was an astonishing and gratifying incident.

FASHIONS FROM VOGUE

Prepared Specially for THE GLOBE

One of the noticeable features of the new styles is the almost general use of a yoke or gimp in dresses of every description. The yokes are made of sheer materials that are inset with lace and daintily tucked or gathered, or they are of all-over embroidery or lace, and in dresses where a long sleeve is desired the yoke material is used for tight fittings under sleeves.

This style is universally becoming and gives a very charming finish to gowns of a dark color, as well as to those of more airy appearance. Many lovely fabrics suitable for this purpose are shown in the shops at prices ranging from $1.50 a yard up, and, as the materials are wide, it takes but very little to make a yoke and sleeves.

Embroidery will be more than ever used this summer, and never before have such exquisite designs been shown in all-overs, insertions and edgings, and the prices, fortunately, are extremely moderate when one considers the amount of work required to manufacture this fine needlework.

Besides being used for yokes and trimmings for dresses, delightful little bolero jackets are made of all-over embroidered linen and batiste that are quite the newest and daintiest garments imaginable. Sunshades may also be had in these fine embroideries, and when lined with pale pink, blue or lavender silk, it is hard to conceive of anything more lovely.

A smart light blue batiste gown is shown by the illustration. The skirt is in five goes, shirred in three clusters around the upper part and simply finished with a deep hem at the bottom, and the bodice has a tight fitting back of gathered batiste and round bolero-like front that overlap and fasten at the bust by a large silver button studded with turquoise.

There is a noted yoke of sheer white, all over batiste embroidery, and large square revers and flaring cuffs of heavy white and blue embroidery. White sheer batiste ruffles finish the sleeves and fall in front over the pointed pastel pink satin grille.

The large hat is of white straw trimmed with pale blue feathers and one large pink rose.

GOSSIP FROM GOTHAM

It takes the little towns to make the really startling innovations. Here is Indianapolis with a Chinese society woman who is at the tip-top of its and in a private hospital here, admirably, too. Pretty Mrs. Moy Kee holds her place among the leaders of the Hoosier society by right of birth, as well as position, for she is a mandarin's daughter and her husband is a nobleman in his own country—a cousin of Prince Pu Lun and a distant relative of Li Hung Chang. Mrs. Moy took in-

Stanton. For many years her gentle soul was grieved by the cruel caricatures of her sweet womanliness that appeared in pictures, prose and verse. She was the butt of the paragraphers—the mother-in-law joke breed—and an object of genuine hatred to the more bitter opponents of the suffrage movement. Yet she never retaliated in kind, and it is to the serenity of her disposition doubtless that she owes the fullest and truest of the great American artist. Mrs. Abram's aunt, Mrs. Oscar Turner, has a portrait of West painted by himself and given to her great-grandfather, Benjamin West and the governor were warm friends. The three pictures are of deep interest to art lovers because portraits by West are not too plentiful, particularly those in good condition. Many of his best works of that kind have been destroyed by unusual accidents—several of them being lost in the Civil war.

Two of the best West portraits in existence, those of Gov. Winthrop Sargent, of Mississippi, and his daughter Caroline, who became Mrs. Fielding Turner, may be seen here in the Lenten season, for it is said their owner, Mrs. W. J. Abram, of Louisville, intends to lend them to an art exhibit for charity. Both pictures are in excellent preservation, showing clearly the master hand of the great American artist. Mrs. Abram's aunt, Mrs. Oscar Turner, has a portrait of West painted by himself and given to her great-grandfather, Benjamin West and the governor were warm friends. The three pictures are of deep interest to art lovers because portraits by West are not too plentiful, particularly those in good condition. New Insurance Measure

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 27.—Senator Dryden, of New Jersey, introduced a bill in the senate today to curtail the power of the administrator of insurance for the regulation of insurance by the federal government.

The bill will distinctly set forth that policies of insurance are articles of commerce and instrumentalities thereof, and that the delivery of contracts of insurance by a corporation of one state into another territory is deemed a transaction in interstate or foreign commerce, as the case may be, and therefore subject to the laws of the federal government. Suitable provision is made for granting licenses by the federal government to corporations doing interstate or foreign business.

"It may not be a perfect measure in all its details," Senator Dryden remarked tonight, "but it is in the right direction, and, having met the general approval of many eminent constitutional lawyers and the administrative authorities, I shall take pleasure in presenting it, believing, as I do, that any delay would be a serious loss to the country."

"Briefly, I may mention some of the direct benefits to be derived from the passage of the bill in question. "First, increased security to 20,000,000 policyholders. "Second, decrease in cost of insurance. "Third, increased returns to policyholders. "Fourth, decrease in the burden of taxation. "Fifth, diminution of a vast amount of needless clerical labor to meet the requirements of some fifty different states and territories, and consequent decrease in expense rate. "Sixth, the stamping out of fraudulent insurance enterprises."

Senator Dryden has no hope of any action on the bill during the remaining days of the present session, and his purpose in introducing the bill at this time is to invite criticism of its provisions and to obtain an interchange of views.

Attacks Trusts

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 27.—Circuit Attorney Siger today filed suit against 162 corporations that have failed to make returns to the secretary of state at Jefferson City, certifying that they are not connected with any trust. In all the suits the forfeiture of the $1,000 penalty is asked for, and in many the circuit attorney requests the forfeiture of the charter.
