MANAGERS OF FAIR PLAN AMUSEMENTS

Board Meets to Hear Proposals for Evening Entertainment Features

An important discussion of amusement features for the next Minnesota state fair occupied a large part of the day yesterday afternoon. The board in the secretary's office of the fair grounds. Representatives of several concerns which produce fireworks spectacles were present to present plans to the board and much time was given to the consideration of these proposed performances. Although no contracts were authorized, it was decided to make the evening entertainment stronger than ever, and the final decision as to particular engagements was left to the chairman of the entertainment committee, C. N. Griggs of St. Paul and Secretary E. W. Randall.

Liberant's Grand Military band was engaged to furnish music for fair week and will be one of the drawing cards for this year's fair.

During the day the board looked over the ground and selected sites for the newspaper headquarters, which is to be constructed from material used in the Minnesota building at the Louisiana Purchase exposition. Space was also assigned to the A. O. U. W., which will put up a handsome little headquarters building for use during the fair. Other building matters were considered, including a new barn for race horses, which will be erected immediately.

Several proposals for the construction of the tunnel under the race track were received and after some discussion the board referred the whole matter to a subcommittee for further investigation. It is expected to commence this improvement at once and complete it not later than June 1.

President George McKerron and Secretary John M. True of the Wisconsin state fair were present at the meeting by invitation to discuss amusement features. The Minnesota men present were President C. N. Griggs, First Vice President B. F. Nelson, Second Vice President C. N. Griggs, Secretary E. W. Randall, J. M. Underwood and W. M. Liggett.

TREE PLANTING IS SELECTED

Gov. Johnson Fixes April 21 for Observance of Custom

Gov. Johnson yesterday proclaimed Friday, April 21, as Arbor and Bird day, in addition to the usual planting of shrubs and trees the governor this year recommends that the teachers of the public schools model the lessons for the pupils on the long lines calculated to imbue a love of nature. The proclamation follows:

In compliance with the requirements of the law, and following a custom, long established but increasingly popular, I hereby designate Friday, April 21, 1905, as Arbor and Bird day, earnestly urging as a national observance to the end that the natural beauties of the state may be enhanced and preserved for the comfort and pleasure, not only of ourselves, but of our children's children.

With the wonderful endowment of climate, forest and field there is no reason why Minnesota should not become the garden spot of the great northwest watered by lake and river and nourished by sunshine that is at once tropic and temperate in its sweet luxuriance. But the steady depletion of our timber area calls for constant reinforcing and nature, with Hebraic exactness, demands that for a tree, a shrub for a shrub, it should fall the place of another in making the wilderness rejoice and blossom as the rose. Surely, then, it is meet and proper that at this season of springing blade and bursting bud, our people should seek to further her purpose and their own interests by the planting of trees and shrubbery for civic and rural adornment and shade. And especially should the children in our schools be incited by programme and example to supply the lacking, foster the weak, and train the strong, among our friends the tree folk.

I therefore recommend that on this day reading, recitation and exercise in the public schools have one common object, teaching that it is useless and unprofitable to destroy the good, necessary and beautiful to heal and protect the injured, god-like nature, and that the nature of mutual interest to man and bird to enter into an alliance friendly and protective, for the benefit of the human race and the propagation of the feathered songster.

The day should be largely one of practical activity. Let the children and their teachers for quiet absorption and contemplation on the part of the latter, and the love of nature holds communion with his visible forms. This should be devoted to what may be termed utilitarianism in nature—to an inventory of our resources, and an honest attempt to make a part payment on our obligations.

BUGGY IS AVENGED

Wrecker of Baby Carriage Goes to Workhouse

While laboring under the delusion that a baby carriage was a patrol wagon, a man who drove it to the station, Allen Swanson, 60 De Soto street, picked it up Thursday afternoon, carried it to the Payne avenue bridge and there threw it over. It was shattered to pieces on the rocks below, and Swanson tacked on up Payne avenue, believing that he had obliterated his only source of danger. But he hadn't. There was still a big bluecoat to contend with and Swanson soon discovered another patrol wagon on the highway. He rode in to the police station, then, yesterday morning, in another to police court; and there, in still a third, a few moments later he was taken to the workhouse, where he will remain for ten days and a night. The baby carriage he found in front of a drug store at Wells street and Payne avenue.

HOLDS BOOKS MAY BE USED AS EVIDENCE

Supreme Court Decides Bankers' Indictments Are Valid

A decision by the state supreme court rendered yesterday upholds the decision of the lower court in sustaining the validity of the indictments against H. Burton Strait and Henry Schreiner, officers of the defunct Scott City bank of Jordan, Minn., which failed about a year ago.

Schreiner and Strait were indicted by the grand jury after an examination of the books of the bank. Both then demurred, alleging that as the bank was a private concern the evidence taken from the books was in the nature of a secret testimony against themselves and therefore a violation of their constitutional rights.

The lower court held that the use of the books in receiving the indictment was not illegal, and the supreme court sustains the decision.

The syllabi follow: State of Minnesota, plaintiff, vs. H. Burton Strait, defendant; State of Minnesota, plaintiff, vs. Henry Schreiner, defendant.

In a criminal prosecution against a private banker for receiving the assets of a bankrupt bank, the supreme court held that such trustee with his books had been turned over to the trustee, held that such trustee with his books had been turned over to a grand jury upon a subpoena, and that the grand jury was not bound to examine the books of the bank and that such examination did not involve any unlawful use of his private papers in violation of his constitutional rights.

It is with a sound discretion of the trial court to excuse members of a grand jury from sitting in the hearing of a matter being considered by that body and in its judgment such a juror would not be impartial and asks to be excused, although not challenged by the accused.

Orders of the trial court sustained. -Lovely, J. Cyrus Webber, respondent, vs. J. A. AxteLL et al., appellants.
