

IN THE WORLD OF SPORTS

BRITT AND WHITE TO FIGHT NEXT MONTH

Contest Will Virtually Be for Championship of the World

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29.—James Britt of this city and Jabez White of England have been matched to fight twenty rounds before the Yosemite Athletic club on April 25.

When Jabez White fights Jimmy Britt it will be virtually for the lightweight championship of the world. A thousand men have asked me to pick the winner, but I am free to confess the task is too much for me, says Charley White in the New York World.

Fighting on his native heath will give Britt the advantage, but on a stage, Britt looking for easy money in taking on the champion of England had better study the public form of the fighters. Britt's record and his abilities are well known to American sportsmen. Jabez White is recognized as his home as one of the best men at his weight in England ever produced. He has won the strongest, gamest, fiercest men in the business, and I must say that I have great respect for this pale young Englishman.

White was born in Birmingham thirty years ago. He began to box in public when he was little more than a child. He was no bigger than a jockey when he started up the ladder that leads to championship. From the first he has had to contend with the best of the best, more rugged than himself, so the fast, rushing tactics of Britt ought to suit him exactly.

When White came up to London half a dozen years ago the cockneys laughed at him. His pale face and long, skinny figure made him seem anything but a fighter. He was called "The Box of Tricks." White fought Palmer and beat him by featherweight then, and so fast and clever that they called him "The Box of Tricks." White fought Palmer and beat him by featherweight then, and so fast and clever that they called him "The Box of Tricks."

White is Thin and Pale

When Jabez White strips in the ring the people of San Francisco will be surprised. He looks like a small kid, but very much paler. His skin is dead white, his hair brown, his eyes large and prominent and very blue. In fact, they look like the eyes of a fashionable tenor until he begins to fight. Then they blaze all right. In build White has the same coffin chest and long, lanky legs that are characteristic of the best fighters in the world. He has the power to hit a blow that will drop any man it lands on.

Before speaking of White's style of fighting I want to call attention to the school in which he developed it. He began as a mere lad, hardly more than a child, in the four round bouts in boxing tournaments in Birmingham. There he had to meet boys older and stronger than himself and quite as fast as he was. The result was that he soon developed a wonderful style. He worked by his defense, and his left fist much further forward than that of the average boxer. His foot work was always fast. He never let the enemy rush him into a mixup.

Defensive work was not enough. In order to win a four round bout you must knock out your man or hit him oftener than he hits you. White did not shine as a knockout artist, but he developed a wonderful punching power that long left arm of his. It flew in or over the other fellow's guard so fast and so often that no one could stop him. His left fist today is a wonder. He can land it on any man of his weight, fast and hard enough to hurt.

Like all boxers not of the brawny, slug-type, Jabez White has always been a hard student of the game. Between fights he doesn't spend his time drinking and telling how great he is. Instead of this he takes care of his health and keeps looking out for chances to improve his style. Therefore he went out of his way to box with all the best Americans who visited England. He set to at his training quarters in the village, Eddie Connelly, Dick O'Brien, Mike Sears, Mysterious Billy Smith and little Eddy Curry.

Learned American Style

From these men White learned about the fast, rushing, slugging American style of fighting. He worked by his defense to meet it and developed his attack and counter hitting so that he could do his share of the punishing. The result of his career...

PSORIASIS AND ECZEMA

Milk Crust, Tetter, Ringworm, and Scalded Head, and Every Form of Torturing, Disfiguring Humors from Infancy to Age.

CURED BY THE CUTICURA REMEDIES

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalded head; the facial disfigurement, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of nursing parents, as in milk crust, tetter, and salt rashes; all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No statement is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty of speedy and permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy have made them the standard skin cures and humor remedies of the civilized world.

CAPT. GRAHAM'S CURE

Of Distressing Humour.

Captain W. S. Graham, 1321 Eoff St., Wheeling, W. Va., writing under date of June 14, '04, says: "I am so grateful I want to thank God that a friend recommended Cuticura Soap and Ointment to me. I suffered for a long time with sores on my face and back. Some doctors said I had herpes, and others that I had barbers' itch. None of them did me any good, but they all took my money. My friends tell me my skin now looks as clear as a baby's, and I tell them Cuticura Soap and Ointment did it."

Full study appeared when he fought Spike Sullivan in 122 pounds before the National Sporting club in London in coronation week. Once in the fight, he was not champion of America, of course, but he was one of the greatest, ruggedest men, fast and aggressive, and as plucky as you'll find in all the world. Spike went at White from the start, and the nearest he could get to the ring, but he always walked in a moment, and went after White as fast as ever.

Well, White bested Spike Sullivan in the fifteen rounds the fight lasted. Spike couldn't understand it. He was a great up, but he had been the aggressor all the way through, and he felt sure he could whip the Englishman. He challenged White, and they were matched again for fifteen rounds at the National Sporting club in London. Spike was so badly beaten that the referee stopped the fight before the limit. And the Englishman came out as though he had been hit by a sledge hammer. Spike was so thoroughly convinced that White was the best he had ever met that he offered to be his manager and bring him to America. But White wasn't ready just then.

Now White is champion of England, thirty years old and among the best fighters in the world. He feels that if he can beat Britt he will practically gain that title, and he is anxious to do it. He holds the championship he made such a wretched showing against Britt that he is really out of it. Although a testotator, White keeps a public house. If he can retain his championship he will make a fortune. In England these things are remembered. Therefore, when White fights Britt, it will be a real battle. It will be a man who sees a fine fortune ahead if he wins. He is anxious to win that fortune and enjoy it with his wife and children.

It may seem unnecessary to recall the details of Britt's victory after showing what a formidable fellow the Englishman is. I want to go on record as saying that Britt is one of the best men America has ever produced. I think him the best lightweight since Jack McAuliffe. He has the look of a champion, not only in generalship, coolness and the matter of timing his punches so as to make the enemy coming in, which, of course, made the blows hurt twice as much.

Chance to Develop

Britt may develop into a great man as McAuliffe, for he is bright, clever, quick to learn and always studying the game. He represents the best of the men you find in the ring—the men with strength and speed and unlimited courage; but above all, with great intelligence. If he is not a great fighter he would be a great business man. He has shown marked ability in the matter of timing his punches for each man he fights. He was up to the mark in four rounds, and then works out a plan to win. He can fight any style.

Many unscrupulous people are sneering at Britt just now, saying that he ran away from Battling Nelson in their fight and calling him a "tin snuff" and "a foolish criticism, or rather not criticism at all. What Britt wants in the ring for is to win that fight. He did not run away. He was not his duty to rush into a wild mix-up with Nelson and get his head wrapped in smashes until one or the other dropped to the floor. That isn't boxing at all. Britt's performance in the Nelson fight stamps him as a fighter of the highest class. But that isn't his only great battle. He was the first man in the world to show that Young Corbett could be beaten down. His victory over Frank Erne, taller, heavier, stronger than himself and one of the cleverest in the business would also show that he is an able pugilist.

But in this battle between White and Britt will meet new conditions. Frank Erne, Eddie Hanlon, Young Corbett and Battling Nelson all carried the best of him. White won't. Britt will find White away back behind that old defense of his, always alert, cool, ready to jump on an opening the moment it shows, yet so good at blocking and so fast on his feet that it is almost impossible to hit him effectively.

Interesting Clash of Minds

Britt will not only have to make the pace, but he must make it so fast as to keep White from getting on his feet. He will have to use the typical English style—cold, calculating, trying above everything else to avoid being hit, yet courageous and persistent to the end, no matter what happens. Britt is equally the typical American—strong, quick, impetuous, fearless, always dashing in, seemingly to do or die, yet with good generalship if only he can keep his head cool. It will be England against America. And that reminds me that in the important matter of rules Britt will have a big advantage. In England the referee makes the men break the moment they are clinched. In this country the man who is not holding is allowed to punch away and make the other fellow let go. This is the strict, true interpretation of the rules. In America the referee never allows it. He will be a great advantage to White, who has always fought under the easy going English interpretation.

To sum up—these men are the greatest lightweights of England and America, and the one who is really the best of the two is a matter of opinion. But what a battle it will be!

Monte Attell Put Out

PHILADELPHIA, March 29.—Monte Attell of San Francisco was carried from the ring tonight after a six round bout with the champion of the world, the national Athletic club. After more than two years of fighting in the sixth round, Attell was hit by a right hand and followed the blow with a right and left to the foul blow. He was not knocked out, but he was carried to his dressing room and physicians were summoned. It was some time before he could be revived. Wash had the better of the bout from the start. It was a fast contest, but Wash was not the equal of his opponent, though he would doubtless have been on his feet at the final bell for the accidental foul blow administered by Wash.

FAIL TO AGREE ON MINERS' WAGE SCALE

As a Result 65,000 Men Will Suspend Work

ALTOONA, Pa., March 29.—Operators and miners of the central bituminous district of Pennsylvania, after being in conference since March 15, endeavoring to agree on a wage scale, failed to do so on April 1, adjourned finally today without coming to an agreement. This means a suspension of work by 65,000 organized miners of the district at the end of March. The operators stood on their proposal for a 10 per cent reduction for the first half of the approaching mining year, and the present scale, based on 62 cents for pick mining, for the second half of the year. The miners' ultimatum demanded a renewal of the present scale for the full year.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few people know how useful it is in preserving meats and beautifying the complexion.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value in the kitchen.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it distinguishes between the good and the bad, and carries out the bad.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in the daily use of the "Winnipeg" brand.

The "Winnipeg" brand is composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in a form that is palatable and pleasant to the taste.

The daily use of this preparation will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood.

It is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, to clear the complexion and to compose of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in a form that is palatable and pleasant to the taste.
