Jasper Boy in Arkansas.
Myron Truss, who with his parents moved to Sloan Springs, Ark., in the early spring, has joined the Boy Scouts and sends to his friends here the following description of one night at camp:
"There was only one disturbance during the night; about 1 a.m. we were awakened by what we thought to be a cow in the grub box, but upon striking a light we found that one of the boys with the nightmare had got over among the pans and skillets and was having a charivari party all by himself. We put him to bed and enjoyed another nap, leaving camp at 4.30 through a light rain for Watts on the return. The scouts are having a fine time and there was no storm and very little rain in camp."
