Was Given Forty Years.

Special term of the Lincoln county circuit court was held at Troy during the whole of last week for the trial of Edgar Parish on a charge of murder, for the killing of George Rider, December 24, 1908, at a Christmas entertainment held at the Christian Church near Louisville.

The case was held before Judge Barnett of this city and resulted in a verdict of murder in the first degree. The punishment was assessed at forty years in the penitentiary.

Parish's defense was that he killed Rider to save his own life, that he was a smaller man than his victim and felt justified in using a weapon.

He cut his throat and slashed him several times with a razor.

Judge Barnett returned from Troy last Friday night.

New Idea Woman's Magazine For December.

The first magazine article of consequence ever published about the wonderful Mrs. Potter Palmer of Chicago, appears in the New Idea Woman's Magazine for December. It shows with striking clearness all of her many sides and will appeal to all women who have ever given a passing thought to "Chicago's First Lady."

Rebecca A. Inslay gave a delightful glimpse of "Christmas at the Vatican," showing how the Pope worships in his utter simplicity. Another article of appeal to women is "My Struggle to Become a Star" by Olive Fremstad, a Minneapolis girl, who without money or influence has risen to first rank in grand opera.

Two features especially appropriate for the holiday season are "Camping in the Snow" and "Problems of the Village Hostess." The former describes how a family gained its health by spending the winter in tents in the open country. In the "Problems of the Village Hostess" Margaret Vandercok tells how women in small towns may entertain to advantage when difficulties must be faced.

LEVEES AND ROADS.

Farmers Brave Weather to Organize Branch of Missouri Highway And Waterway Association.

The first county convention to be held in all the counties of Missouri in connection with the present booming of the good roads and levee movement was held at Clayton, St. Louis county, Monday, the 18 of this month, and, in spite of the rain which poured down upon the county all day long, the meeting was charged with an enthusiasm and a spirit of "up and doing" which bespoke a great future for the present move. More than 200 farmers answered the call of their county court and came through the blinding rain to the court house, where the meeting was held, and listened attentively to the things which were told them by the prominent speakers who were there.

Each of the bodies to be considered before the final work can be done on levees or roads was represented at the meeting. Congressman Bartholdt of the Tenth district spoke of the attitude of Congress in the past toward the Missouri river and how that attitude, unfriendly and cold as it was, could be changed in a very short time by the urgent insistent clamoring of an organization as powerful as the Missouri Highway and Waterway Association promised to be. He promised to do all in his power—and here he hinted at the official position which he held as chairman of the committee on public buildings—to prevent the very large and rather useless appropriations which were being made for other things which, in his opinion, were not as necessary as the improvement of the Missouri river.

While Congress was powerless to appropriate money for the direct protection of farm lands, there was no reason, said Mr. Bartholdt, why it could not appropriate money for the improvement of the navigation of the river, which would indirectly but effectively aid the farm lands.

State Senator A. E. L. Gardner spoke from the standpoint of the Legislature, and said that, while he was not informed as to what steps were to be taken as to the financing of the levee building, he was sure the legislature would not hesitate to do all in its power to aid, by necessary legislation, any feasible plan.

Col. J. C. Kiskaddon, a lawyer of extraordinary skill and experience in organizing drainage districts, spoke of the details of the work and the feasibility of such a plan in connection with the saving of the river banks and the farm lands.

These speakers were followed by Mayor E. G. Lewis of University City, head of the great Lewis Publishing Company, who mentioned the organization of the Highway and Waterway Association at Sedalia and complimented the plan and told of the incalculable effects of persistent and well-directed publicity and a general campaign of education such as the association contemplated.

George B. Logan of Clayton, secretary of the Missouri Highway and Waterway Association, spoke of the organization and objects of the association and explained that, in accordance with the plan, each county was to be organized into branch associations, the members of which were to be members of the state organization as well. The scope of the plan was enthusiastically received and was accepted, and before the meeting had adjourned there were 325 members of the St. Louis County Highway and Waterway Association, who were also the first 325 members of the state association.

The officers of the St. Louis county body who were elected and who will direct the work of organization are: Gortlieb Bayer, president; Albert Wehmeier, vice-president; Fred E. Mueller, secretary; and Herman Lueck, treasurer. All of these men are very prominent in the county, all of them are vitally interested in the subject of levees and good roads. There was also an executive committee provided for, to have seven members in all, four to be the officers of the association, the other three to be appointed by the president.

In the very near future Governor Hadley will issue calls to the county courts of all the counties in the state to call meetings in their counties of all persons interested either in levees or the roads, and similar organizations will be formed. The leading citizens of the communities will address these conventions, with, if possible, an officer of the state association, and in this way the association will be extended over the whole state and the work of saving the farm lands and of providing good roads will have been launched in the systematic fashion which spells ultimate and complete success.

BOONE'S MONUMENT.

Rev. McQuie of this City received a Letter Throwing Some Light on the Lost Stone that Marked the Famous Pioneer's Grave.

The following letter received by Rev. R. E. McQuie of this city, explains itself:

Kansas City, Mo.

November 2, 1909.

Rev. R. E. McQuie, Montgomery City, Mo.

Dear Sir:—I noticed an article in the Kansas City Star of last Sunday relative to the grave of Daniel Boone and your committee not being able to locate the grave stone.

About fifteen years ago I was talking with Dr. Samuel Jones, who came from Warrenton, and he said that he had the top of Daniel Boone's monument, and he went down to the house and brought it up. It had been broken off the top of the slab, and had the words "Daniel Boone" chiseled on it in about two inch letters. This piece of stone was about 14 inches long, eight or ten inches deep and three or four inches thick. I do not remember what kind of stone it was, although, I think it was probably a hard sand stone.

The Doctor at this time lived in Deep Water, Missouri, and he told me that he intended to send it to the museum at the State University at Columbia. Whether he did so or not I have never been able to learn.

The Doctor died some eight years ago, and if he did not send the stone to Columbia it might be found among some of his relatives in the neighborhood of Deepwater.

Hoping that this information may be of some benefit to you, Yours Truly,

A. W. Highnole.

ANNUAL TEACHERS' MEETING.

Held in Montgomery City Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week. Large Attendance. Good Interest.

The Annual Teachers' Association of Montgomery county was held in the Court House here on November 4, 5 and 6, 1909. County Superintendent, W. F. Hupe, by virtue of his office presided, and Miss Dora E. Iams was elected secretary of the association. Elder Melan delivered the invocation and Rev. Boon made the welcome address which was appropriately responded to by Prof. Fowler.

Time and space will not permit us to comment on all of the many speakers and discussions, but the teachers responded faithfully to their duties and the visiting speakers and school men afforded us much help and inspiration. Dr. Black's lecture on the education, training and file work of the "Egyptian Lad" was masterful, eloquent, and wonderfully inspiring to the teachers.

Vast and rapid progress has been made along lines of material development; but unfortunately educational progress has not kept pace with these material advancements.

It is as these teachers' associations that we study and discuss better means and methods and higher standards of education. Teachers come in touch with one another and with educators from other parts of the state, and thus are inspired and stimulated to better efforts and higher ideals in their work.

The attendance was the largest we have ever had. Only four teachers in the county were absent. The enrollment was 104. This bespeaks better teaching in the schools of Montgomery county because it shows that teachers are becoming more interested and wherever teachers become interested and take advantage of these means of self improvement, we will have better teaching and better schools. The county superintendent says he has faith in the teachers of this county, and sees in their response to duty and their earnest desire to do their best, better things educationally for the boys and the girls of the county.

Following is a list of resolutions adopted by the association:

Resolved:—First to the lecturers, Montgomery County teachers, children, and others, who helped in the entertainment of the association, we extend our thanks.

Second, We commend County Superintendent Hupe for the successful management of this, the best meeting ever held in Montgomery county, from the standpoint of both pleasure and profit.

Third, We declare that County Supervision has already shown that it is worth while, and we feel proud of the law.

Fourth, We urge that all teachers, introduce Agriculture in the schools as soon as possible and that practical work, thoroughly done, be stressed.

Fifth, That the teachers work for the enforcement of the compulsory attendance law, and that we strive to have a full term requirement enacted.

Sixth, We commend the present text book law in that it secures for each county and city the books best suited to local conditions.

Seventh, That we thank Mrs. Wheeler for the gift of books to the libraries of the county.

Eighth, That the teachers strive to live so as to be a potent factor in raising the moral standard of the school.

Ninth, That it is the sense of this association that competent educators be secured for two days instruction at one meeting, and that one day be given to general discussion of local school topics and conditions.

Tenth, We recommend that all teachers read the Missouri School Journal and attend the State Teachers Association. Committee.
