SOCIETY NEWS.

[Any items of interest suitable for this department from Sedalia or neighboring places, are respectfully solicited. We want a vivacious, active and cheery lady correspondent in all the neighboring towns tributary to Sedalia. Address all such communications to Rosa Pearle, society reporter, Bazaar office, Sedalia, Mo.]

—Men and women by association are made companions, and when once the idea of sharing a society is developed, irrespective of each other, a great bond is struck at the foundations of the social structure itself.

—Miss Alice Dyas returned, last Wednesday, from a pleasant visit with friends in St. Louis.

—Miss Jennie Kennedy will spend the holidays in Warrensburg, with her friend, Miss Julia Coffman.

—Mrs. D. I. Holcomb and little son, Freddie, arrived last week, and will, in the future, reside in this city.

—Mrs. Dora Pattison and Mrs. Maggie Stewart will leave to-morrow for Kansas City, on a short visit to friends.

—Mr. Martin Conklin and wife, of New York, passed through this city last Thursday, on their way to Lexington.

—Miss Harvey and Miss Lillie Byler are guests of friends in Kansas City. They will return to this city, this evening.

—Mrs. A. E. McNeese, of Calhoun, is visiting her mother and other relatives in this city. She will remain until after the holidays.

—Mr. James H. Barnhardt, of Schenectady, N. Y., is the guest of his cousin, Mrs. Van Brunt and his sister, Mrs. Danbar, of this city.

—Miss Sallie Potter, who expected to return from her visit to Ohio directly after Christmas, has decided to remain until about the middle of January.

—The ladies of Grace Episcopal Church at Carthage are making arrangements for a grand Bazaar at the armory in that place, beginning next Wednesday evening.

—Capt. and Mrs. A. J. Sampson, who formerly resided in this city, and have been spending a few days with their brother's family, here, left for their home this morning.

—Miss Lillie Bruner, who left here to accept a position in the seminary at Kirkwood, and who has a large number of friends in this city, will spend the holidays here.

—Mr. C. G. Chalfe will be married at the residence of Mr. T. J. Hughes, near Longwood, next Wednesday. Rev. Duncan, of this city, will be the officiating minister.

—Miss Mollie Whittlinger, of this city, will be united in marriage, at the residence of her parents, on West Fifth street, next Thursday evening. The happy man will be Mr. Lou Kahrs.

—Cards are out for the reception and marriage of Mr. James Deatherage, near Fayette, and Miss Octavia Booker, daughter of Mr. John A. J. Rooker, of Charleston, on the 20th.

—Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Mollie L. Mason, of this city, to Mr. C. M. Shepherd, of Stella, Nebraska, next Thursday, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Mason, corner of Fifth and Montgomery streets.

—Mrs. J. J. Frey, who, with her two children, is at present guests of Mr. John Hall's family, will visit Mrs. J. B. Elliott, near Miss Laura Speed, during this week. She will be accompanied by her sister, Miss Belle Hall.

—Miss Elsie M. Beiler will be united in marriage, the 20th of this month, to Mr. W. G. Carroll, both of Philadelphia, Pa. Miss Elsie is a sister of Mr. Will Beiler, of this city, but business engagements will prevent him from attending the wedding.

—A large family re-union was held at the residence of Maj. Van Brunt, last Friday. The occasion was a very pleasant and enjoyable one. There were ten individuals present who were true natives of Schenectady, N. Y.

—The Misses Cress, of Dresden, were in the city, yesterday, buying Christmas presents. They found time to make a pleasant call on Miss Dora Kagley and Miss Mollie Peffley, and were as charming as ever. Miss Flora, the eldest of the sisters, is reputed as a famous housekeeper.

—Miss Ella Beck, of this city, yesterday reached the mile post of time, which bears upon its record, "sweet sixteen," and to fittingly commemorate the day, she was made the recipient of a number of presents. The one which gave the young lady the most pleasure, however, was an elegant violin, presented by her father. If Remyen doesn't look to his laurels after this, he will, in the parlance of the day, "get left."

—One of the most beautiful results of the artist's skill which has been in this city for some time, is a mirror framed in an exquisitely arranged design of wild roses, with their attendant foliage and buds. The roses are raised by the use of the palette knife until it seems as if the natural roses were themselves lain upon the frame. It is something entirely new, at least in Sedalia, and challenges the admiration of all who have the pleasure of seeing it. The work is from the brush of Miss Ella Hall, of present of this city, and the mirror is designed as a present from Mrs. J. J. Frey to Mrs. J. B. Elliott, of Boonville.

—A very interesting feature of the Kansas City "Bazaar of all Nations," was the game of chess played with living pieces. Ladies and gentlemen costumed to represent the kings and queens, knights, bishops, castles and pawns, were moved as in an ordinary game of chess. The hosts, glittering in crimson and gold, and black and gold, with burnished spears, and jeweled crowns and miters, were ushered in with strains of martial music to take their position upon the board, and the game was played in the presence of a large and admiring audience. Mrs. Hugh L. McElroy, the well-known Kentucky beauty, was queen of the red, and Mrs. Bernard Donnelly was queen of the black. Mrs. McElroy's dress was of ruby-tinted plush, with long court train, over a petticoat of pink moire, bordered with deep ermine; the long flowing sleeves were lined with pink moire and bordered with ermine. In addition to her own rare jewels, she wore a crown, girdle and pendant of rhine stones. Mrs. Donnelly wore an elegant dress of black satin de Lyon, en traine, over a petticoat enriched with broderies of cut jet, and bordered with ermine. Magnificent diamonds, with jeweled crown.

—Twenty-five years ago, Jno. M. Danie and Miss Sarah Potts were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by Eld. Wiggins. They have never had cause to regret this step and last Sunday it was elegantly celebrated. A large company was present and many rich presents received.

—The Kensington society met, Friday evening, at the residence of Mr. Ira E. Barnes, corner Fifth and Lafayette streets. Friday afternoon. The occasion was a very pleasant one, as Miss Lou and Fannie Barnes are exceedingly pleasant hostesses. A number of pretty designs in fancy work were in the hands of the ladies, and the time was rapidly whittled away. One of the sensible rules of the society is that no refreshments will be served. Present were: Mrs. J. D. Russell, Mrs. A. T. Fleischman, Misses Mary, Bettie and Eva Geisly and Miss Lizzie Shelton.

—Miss Hattie Belle Trader entertained a number of her young lady friends, yesterday afternoon, at her residence, corner of Fifth and Osage streets, very handsomely. A very nicely arranged tea was served to the guests and the time was pleasantly whittled away with music and the happy conversation, which is usually the result when a "garden of girls" is brought into communion. The guests present were: Misses May and Julia Cobine, May Jaynes, Jessie Smith, Anna Barnett, May Cummings, Katie Arnold, Mattie Kennedy and Belle Herold.

—There is a pure delight in beholding useful articles, especially when they are so combined with the beautiful that it is difficult to tell where the one leaves off and the other begins. Some of the most beautiful articles seen during this season are Prang's exquisitely designed Christmas cards, card and cabinet albums covered with the richest old gold and scarlet plush quaint inkstands in colored crystal and bronze; also one representing a boat with the penholders in the shape of oars resting in the row locks, elegantly bound books of the late publications, pictures, picture frames, work boxes of plush, fancy paperies and so many choice selections of ornamental articles it would be difficult to particularize. However, if the public generally will call at Sanborn Bros., on Ohio street, they will be satisfied of the truth of this notice.

—The young People's Society met at the residence of Mr. Wm. Bard, on Fourth street, last Friday night, and held an unusually pleasant meeting. The band was under the leadership of Mr. D. W. Talbot, and the following interesting programme was the result: Scriptural reading, Mr. Edgar Tussey and his sister, Miss Rebecca Tussey; selected reading, entitled "Our Preacher," Miss Mattie Bard; selected reading, "The Modern Belle," by J. M. Dalby; selected reading, entitled "Evil Speaking," Miss Maude Christie; selected reading, entitled "Leisure Hours," Rev. Mr. Duncan. The feature of the evening was the reading of an essay, entitled "The Temptation of the Savior," by Mr. D. W. Talbot. The entire meeting was a successful one, and the attendance was good. The next meeting will take place at the parsonage of the Christian church, two weeks from last Friday. In conjunction with the meeting, there will be a young people's sociable.

—Society Elsewhere.

—Miss Vania Houck has been visiting relatives and friends here, this week.

—A large number of ladies and children attended the matinee, yesterday afternoon.

—Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Houts returned, Sunday evening, from a visit to friends in Washington township.

—Miss Ada Greenwood, of Kansas City, will give an elocutionary reading at the Cumberland Presbyterian church, next Tuesday evening.

—The ladies of the Cumberland Presbyterian church gave a 'New England' supper at the court house Friday night. It was a very pleasant affair, and a financial success.

—Miss Jennie Morrow and Dr. Gus Cress won the prize at the skating rink, Saturday evening week ago. It was a splendid toilet set—brush, comb and hand-glass, in a satin-lined, double-hinged case.

—Married at the residence of the bride's parents, on Broad street, this city, Wednesday evening last, Miss Laura Redford and Mr. Ernest N. Johnson, of the drug firm of Johnson & Son. Only a few friends were present.

—Mrs. Carrie Burge, of Clinton, is visiting her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Beebe, in Holden.

—Mr. E. E. Halsey, son of Major T. J. Halsey, who has for several months been in Michigan, returned home last week.

—Miss Mattie Jaquith returned from East Lynne, the latter part of last week, where she had been visiting ten or twelve days.

—Mr. W. H. Snyder, a prominent insurance man of Davenport, Iowa, was visiting his father-in-law, W. M. Coventry, Esq., in this place, the first of the week.

—Mr. Joseph Holdsworth and Mr. M. G. Trefis, of Coulterville, Ill., uncle and cousin of Miss Mary and Mr. Hillary Holdsworth, made a short visit and left for their home Monday.

—Mr. W. W. Vaughan, with his family, left Wednesday evening for Miami, where he is to engage in the drug business. Mr. Vaughan has been for years a prosperous merchant here, and with him are associated some of the earliest and kindest recollections of Brownsville.

—Mrs. M. M. Marmaduke left last evening, for a visit to relatives and friends in Kentucky.

—Mr. William Paie and bride arrived home, last Saturday, from their wedding tour "way down in Dixie." They had a delightful trip through the sunny "land of cotton."

—Miss Tuttle, sister to Frank Tuttle, left, last week, on a visit to Noblesville, Indiana.

—The ladies of the First Presbyterian church gave a mince pie sociable at the residence of Dr. Humphrey, on Clark street last Friday evening.

—The B. R. L. Club opened their entertainment season Friday night, with a programme of literary delicacies that were a rich banquet to all who have an appetite for what is both instructive and edifying. The caterers on the bill of fare were representative of the best talent of the city, and were greeted by a large audience.

—Nelse Tritch one of the handsomest young bachelors of the city entwined himself in the labyrinth of matrimony, Wednesday and in the evening entertained his numerous friends in honor of the occasion. Many of the leading citizens were present and attested their kind regards and high appreciation of the bridegroom and his lovely bride.

—Last Wednesday night being the first anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wigginton, a few of their friends were invited to wish them many happy occasions. After several hours of amusements, the merry crowd were checked in their mirth to partake of the elegant supper prepared by the hands of Mrs. Wigginton, which was enjoyed by all present.

—Dr. Kimball returned from Fairbury, Ill., accompanied by his wife and family.

—The Qui Vive club, of this city, will give a dance at the Talmage house, Monday evening next.

—Miss Maggie Wells, sister of Mrs. F. E. Kellogg, of Ohio, is visiting in the city. She will remain during the winter.

—A grand concert and supper will be given at the court house on Christmas night under the auspices of the Methodist Sunday school.

—Miss Amanda Dooly, who has been visiting the family of Mr. Jake Jobe, near this city, for the past month, returned to her home near Schell City, Vernon county, on Sunday.

MANY MEN Prove to be of Many Minds on Prohibition.

Some Interesting Interviews on the all Absorbing Topic.

That the question of the submission of an amendment to the constitution, prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic liquors as a beverage, in this state, is the most prominent and important one now before the people for settlement, none will deny. That it is the battlefield on which a hot fight is to be made, at Jefferson City, during the session of the next legislature, is also conceded.

The forces on both sides are being marshaled, and the tocsin of war has long since been sounded.

Yesterday, a BAZOO reporter started out on an interviewing tour, to find out from representative men in the professions and callings, and trades, just what they thought about this question, and such are laid before the readers of the paper published for the people now on earth, this morning.

REV. DR. H. G. JACKSON, pastor of the Ohio street M. E. church, was first called on. To the reporter's inquiry as to his views on the subject, he said:

"I am in favor of a constitutional amendment, prohibiting the liquor traffic; because I believe that to be the most effectual way of suppressing intemperance, which is the greatest curse of our land."

"I am opposed to the license system altogether. To license an evil is to legalize it; thus making the state not only authorize, but protect, a manifest wrong."

"Besides, no license tax, however high, will stop the evil, nor materially lessen the sale of liquor in the state. We are told that 'prohibition does not prohibit,' because men will evade the law; the same argument may be used against a high license; men will evade that law, also."

"The revenue derived from license of which we hear so much is a delusion. I hope no one is so foolish as to believe that the liquor dealers are going to put that amount out of their own pockets; their customers will have to pay it in the increased price of drinks. This increased price will not cause any one to quit drinking, for when the appetite is once acquired a man will drink, no matter what it costs—he will spend less money for bread in order to meet the extra charge for drinks. A high license is simply a tax imposed on the wives and children of inebriates, which they must pay at the expense of their own food and clothing."

"Suppose that a sufficient revenue would be derived in this way to run the state government; who wants to be relieved of taxation by such a method? It is not fair to make the liquor drinkers pay the entire expense of the state government. But that is just what a high license proposes to do."

"The issue before us, now, however, is the submission of a prohibitory amendment to the public. Certainly the people ought to be permitted to express their will at the ballot box on a question of such vital importance as this."

"I don't know whether it will carry, if submitted at the next general election or not, but I do know that a defeat will not bury the question forever, as some seem to think. This question is like Banquo's ghost, it will not down at anybody's bidding. The discussion and agitation that will result from its submission to the people will greatly strengthen the cause of prohibition, so that, even if defeated at first, it will, in the end, be victorious."

"In common fairness, the question ought to be submitted apart from all party issues, for it is not, in this state, a party question."

J. H. BOTHWELL.

"I hardly know how to express myself on this question. I believe that if nine-tenths of the people were in favor of prohibition, it could be enforced; but not otherwise. As to the submission of the amendment, I am not in favor of it, for it will only be an expense for nothing. That is, I do not favor it unless the majority of the people want it, and that I don't know. One thing is sure, this prohibition movement will kill any party that takes it up."

A LOGICAL STATEMENT.

The reporter called upon Rev. A. W. Nesbit, the scholarly pastor of the Old School Presbyterian church, at his study. Mr. Nesbit gave the following logical statement of his views on the subject:

1. A matter of expediency. That is to say, it is not a matter of obligation per se. It may be brought to the point of being obligatory, but it has to be brought there—it is not there to begin with. I take a strong stand in favor of the privilege of every man to use wine that he wishes to. The denial of this privilege, in my estimation, involves our Lord, and has done great injury to the cause.

2. It is a matter of right. Instead of the question, in this case, being the right of the individual and the privilege of the state, it is the privilege of the individual and the right of the state. All this outcry that men make about 'personal right' is really an outcry about 'personal privilege.' The 'right' is on the side of the state. Moreover, it is a fundamental right. If a man can't defend himself—his life—what can he do? And if a state can't prevent its own dissolution what can it do? Moreover, if there be any conflict of rights at all, which ought to suffer—those of the state or those of the individual? If any portion of this people rises up and demands the submission of this question, and that submission be refused, it will be one of the greatest outrages that was ever perpetrated in the name of liberty.

It is a matter of necessity, necessity, that is if it be understood merely of the present state of things. I do not believe that primarily necessity exists—that is to say, that it exists merely because strong drink exists. Strong drink might still exist, and men might still continue to drink, were it not that a state of things has been superinduced that calls for, at least, a temporary abolition of the whole. The whole trouble is with those to whom the privilege of selling has been accorded. They have abused that privilege. In their grasping, heartless disposition they have dragged their drinks until they can no longer be trusted. They have cut their own throats.

It will not now do to say to them, 'quit this and you may live.' They will never quit it. They must be compelled. After twenty-five years of prohibition something less radical must be submitted. Dr. Crosby's method, for instance, but not now."

ELDER J. H. DUNCAN

was seen by the BAZOO reporter, and asked what grounds he thought the legislature would have for refusing to submit the question of prohibition to a direct vote of the people. He replied, that he did not think they could, in justice, refuse to submit the question, if they were the servants of the people.

There were, certainly, no constitutional restrictions which would justify a refusal to give the people a chance to express themselves.

"Do you think prohibition will come?" asked the reporter.

"Well, I think the fact that the opposition are aroused on the subject, indicates that there is strength on the side of temperance; and again, nearly all the churches have, in state conventions and associations, declared in favor of prohibition. These indicate that the question was a live one, and a strong influence would be found in its favor, even from those who sometimes drink."

of the German Evangelical church, said: "As to temperance, prohibition etc., I can only say:

1. The only antidote which can successfully and effectively counteract the poisons corrupting our human family, is the gospel of Jesus Christ.

2. All vicious habits can be fully overcome by a change of heart, and by that alone.

3. Try, with the help of God, to convince men of their error and to lead them to the Savior and Redeemer, Christ, and you will have christian, and therefore temperate, men and women."

THE PASTOR

of the Baptist church, Rev. J. B. Fuller, had just returned to the city from Burlington, Iowa, and begged to be excused from an expression of his views. He said, however, that he believed in total abstinence, though he desired more time in which to state his views on the question of prohibition.

THE FIRST LAWYER

met by the reporter, was Captain L. L. Bridges. To pertinent inquiries, he said: "I am in favor of prohibition for myself and believe it would be a good thing for all men. If the law could be made effectual it would be well, but I do not so think it can be done. Still, I am in favor of it as an experiment, although I fear that it cannot be enforced and that would bring contempt upon it, and such contempt would extend to other laws. If the people want to vote on the question, let them."

WHERE HE WILL BE FOUND.

Mr. B. G. Wilkerson thought the people should be allowed to vote on the question if they wanted to, this is their right and privilege. While not a strict temperance man, in the accepted meaning of the word, Mr. Wilkerson said he would be found with them, if the lines were squarely drawn. He said he thought the whisky element were afraid the measure would carry, if submitted, judging from the opposition they were making. "I don't see how any party or paper can oppose the submission of the question to the people."

Judge Shirk was seen, but was too busy to talk upon the subject as he wished. He thought the people should be allowed to vote upon the settlement of the question, and believed it would be, eventually, submitted to them.

E. J. Smith didn't hesitate a moment to say that he would vote for the amendment when it was submitted.

NOT THE BETTER WAY.

Postmaster Blair said he did not think prohibition the better way to suppress the liquor traffic, but thought the question should be submitted to the people.

Mr. John Montgomery, jr., said, very emphatically, that he was in favor of prohibition.

Rev. G. A. Beattie was met on the street, but as he was just about to leave the city, he could make no full statement. "You may say for me," he said to the reporter, "that I am for prohibition first, last and all the time. And I believe it is coming."

Elder George H. Plattenburg, one of the most eminent divines of the Christian church, was met by the reporter, and to the inquiry propounded, replied that he was not prepared, just then, to state his views. "You may say, however, that I am not opposed to prohibition," he said to the man of news.

"THERE ARE MANY WAYS,"

said Col. Ritter, to the reporter, "in which the money now invested in the liquor traffic, could be used with great profit. To say that prohibition would be a financial injury to the community, is silly. There are forty things in which the money could be invested, any one of which would prove profitable. We need a linseed oil mill, factories and manufactures, and no loss would ever accrue to the country by the stoppage of the liquor traffic. I am not a teetotaler but I'll be hanged if I wouldn't vote for prohibition, for I believe it a good thing, and there are hundreds of drinking men who will do the same thing when they get the chance."

Mr. D. H. Smith was found waiting for his mail, at the post office. He said he thought it doubtful that the people wanted the question submitted, but if they did, it should be. He, however, did not believe it would carry; not at the present, at least.

of the Congregational church said: "Good men differ in their views on the question of prohibition. Some genuine temperance men think it encroaches too far on personal liberty, and therefore do not advocate it, but oppose it. There are temperance men who are honest in these opinions, and they should not be denounced or ridiculed. Every man has a right to his sincere opinions and convictions, and is not to be persecuted for them. All harsh epithets, and calling of hard names, is to be frowned upon as unmanly and unchristian. Prohibition will fail if its weapons are personal abuse. Nothing wins now but argument and right. I think that prohibition is not unconstitutional nor an infringement on the rightful liberties of the individual. The rum traffic is, without question, a curse to our land and people. The sale of liquors as a beverage brings only harm and misery. Government, society, home, commerce, all suffer from this traffic. The man who sells liquor as a beverage, is harming all the interests of the community. And on this ground, I do not see why the majority of the people of a state have not a right to say that no man in our state shall engage in this business of selling liquor. We have laws prohibiting other evils, and their rightfulness is not called in question. Why should rum selling be an exception? If it can be shown that liquor is not harmful to the individual and society, then prohibiting its sale is wrong. We have no right to deprive our fellow citizens of a harmless liberty. Moral suasion has been tried. Temperance lectures and literature have been tested. Temperance societies and pledges have tested their influence, and all have been mightily blessed. But still intemperance is raising thousands of men—blasting thousands of homes. Is it not time to see if prohibition will not do its part in driving this evil from our land? If it is worthless why do our brewers and saloonists fight it so relentlessly? In the spirit of kindness and true brotherhood let prohibition be tried by all the states."

WARRENSBURG WISDOM.

Chunks and Stivers from the Quarry City, Lifted by the BAZOO Derrick.

—Business is booming.

—Plenty of corn coming in.

—Criminal court has adjourned.

—The skating rink has closed for the present.

—Felix Bibb, of Knobnoster, was in the city, this week.

—Warrensburg shipped two thousand car loads of stone this year.

—The Western theatre will play "The Phoenix" here, next Thursday night.

—Mr. Dan Hout has moved into his new and handsome Market street residence.

—The performing bear man has struck town, and is "drawing" as well as the theater.

—The wheat crop of Johnson county for 1882 was worth more than two million dollars.

—The Journal-Democrat appeared, Friday, as a triple sheet, and is correspondingly happy.

Judge Hunt, of the county court, has been elected cashier of the bank of Warrensburg, vice J. H. Kinsel, resigned.

—The building boom is almost over for the winter, but will begin again with the return of spring. Several business houses will be erected.

—The Forhan Comedy company closed their engagement here, last night, and will dedicate the new opera house at Higginville, Monday night.

—Sheriff Shaw went down to Jefferson City, Thursday night, having in charge the prisoners sentenced to the penitentiary at the last term of criminal court.

—All storage capacity in the mills and elevators is exhausted, and still the corn comes in. The dealers report their inability to get cars for shipment greater than ever before, and the prospects for a "gorge" are good.

—In the case of the state against Freeman and Charles Burden, for the killing of William Warren, in a saloon at Holden, in August last, the grand jury ignored the bill as to Charles, and found a bill against Freeman for murder in the second degree. Bail for his appearance at the next term of court was immediately given. Logan & Robertson are his attorneys.

Joele's Thanksgiving.

There was a very happy Thanksgiving at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Miller, of No. 319 East Fifty-second street, New York, and as the hitherto moderately furnished apartments were freshly furnished up with the addition of two cozy arm chairs, a reporter inquired how she had been able to make so many comfortable changes, to which she replied: "It is all due to our dear little daughter, Josie; she is a great pet and solace to me and her father, and although only 15 years of age, has worked very hard as a seamstress, earning but a modest pittance to help us pay the rent."

"I was afraid," interrupted Mr. Miller, and the little tears came to his eyes as he spoke, "that the little darling would overwork herself, and I encouraged her to save a few dollars for a dark day. About the beginning of November I was surprised when told that she had sent a dollar by mail to M. A. Dauphin, New Orleans, La., with the expectation of making a large fortune. I did not approve of it at first, when she said she had done the same thing before, and had implicit faith in the Louisiana State Lottery Company. Imagine what an agreeable disappointment we received on the 14th of November last, when we were notified that the ticket numbered 52,116, which she held, was entitled to one-fifth of the capital donation of $75,000."

"Did Miss Josephine collect her share promptly?" queried the reporter.

"Oh, yes indeed; Mr. Dauphin paid over to the express company $15,000 to the order of Miss Josephine Miller, and she got the money last week."

"Was she elated with her success?" suggested the reporter.

"The little darling was so crazy with joy that I asked her to take a little vacation," and the old gentleman smiled, as he thanked the reporter for congratulating him upon his daughter's good fortune.—Philadelphia Record, Dec. 6.

—It is related that a San Francisco lawyer fell in love with Adelaide Neilson, and was taken behind the scenes for an introduction after Miss Neilson, as Juliet, should come down from the balcony scene. With her eyes moist with affection's tears, her voice trembling, and her bosom heaving with young love's emotions, she was bidding farewell to Romeo. The lawyer loved her madly as she rose from her kneeling position; was more than ever enamored as she leaned against the window-casing; and glared at her until she stepped inside, grabbed her train with one hand and her handkerchief with the other, and
