

STILL SHOT AT.

The Marshal of Holden Fired Upon by a Drunken Contractor.

The Ball Takes Effect in the Ear of the Lengthy Policeman.

Special to the BAZOO. HOLDEN, Mo., August 13, 1883. A shooting affray occurred Sunday morning, just as the bells were calling the worshippers to the various churches in this city. A one-legged man named Beatty who, has contract for the stone work of the new school house, was confined in the calaboose Saturday night for drunkenness on the streets. Marshal Still liberated him Sunday morning, soon after which he commenced hunting the officer with the avowed purpose of killing him. They met on the crossing of Second and Market streets. Beatty made some insolent remarks, at the same time drawing a .32 caliber revolver, and fired at the Marshal at a distance of twenty yards, missing him. Still replied in the same manner when Beatty again fired, the ball this time grazed the officer's right ear. Still was, in the meantime, advancing upon his enemy, and after the last shot was fired took hold of him and forced him to the ground. He was taken to the calaboose. Beatty is a hard character. He was taken to Warrensburg yesterday.

CRUEL CYCLONE.

A Wind Storm Near Warrensburg Causes Considerable Loss of Property.

Houses Blown Down, Fences Carried Away and Window Glass Broken.

Special to the BAZOO. WARRENSBURG, August 15. A heavy storm of wind, accompanied by rain and hail, visited Union Prairie neighborhood, three miles east of this city last night, causing considerable uneasiness and much loss of property. Union Prairie is situated on a high prairie, on the dividing ridge, or "back bone" between Blackwater and Bear creeks, and is quite thickly settled. There are a number of large and handsome dwellings and well cared for farms. Up to yesterday no cyclone or heavy wind had ever devastated this populous section, and the people, though knowing themselves in a chosen spot for wild winds, have congratulated themselves on their escape. The storm of last night came from the northwest, passing over half a mile of open country after leaving the Blackwater timber, and struck near the district school house, tearing it down and scattering the timbers all over a large field. The school building was an old one, and was to have been torn down in a few weeks to give place to a new one, so that beyond the trouble of gathering it up for firewood no loss was sustained. At the residence of C. A. Marks, a few yards east of the school house, the damage was more severe. Mr. Marks has a new dwelling in course of erection, and had moved his old one to a new foundation just north of the site for the new one. This old house was moved more than a foot toward the east, and came near going over. Fences were blown down and some damage was also done to his growing corn. Mrs. Abigail Robinson lives about half a mile east of the school house, and lost her corn cribs and several yards of rail fence by the wind. Hail stones, as large as hen eggs, were found in the yard at daylight this morning. The old Jewell farm house, now occupied by C. C. Delaplaine, was lifted about four inches from its foundation. Fences were blown down, corn stripped of its fodder, and apples beaten from the trees by wind and hail. Windows were broken, fences blown down and apples beaten from the tree of the Gowdy farm house, just east of the Jewell place. At Moses Elliott's farm, south of the school house, a hay stacker was blown to pieces, no two pieces being found together. Hay stacks were blown down and scattered all over the meadow. After reaching the wooded ridge on the south side of Bear creek, no further damage was done, the storm being broken. The track of the storm was not more than a mile wide, but was as severe on the edges as in the middle, the damage at the school house, on the western edge, and at the Jewell farm, on the eastern, being the greatest. The storm here in town was not extraordinary, and no especial uneasiness was manifested.

Encounter With a Shark.

By the arrival at Newcastle, N. S. W., of the barque Albena information was received of the terrible encounter which one of her crew had with a shark, from which he escaped by fighting the monster with his jack knife. The sailor was William Hyde, who, together with another seaman, was aloft bracing the yards during the prevalence of a heavy gale. Hyde was flung into the water, and notwithstanding the fearful sea and wind, the mate and two sailors put off to his rescue in a small dingy. It was three-quarters of an hour before the craft came near the poor fellow, and it was then seen that he was in a partially nude state. A shark was also seen near him, and was making desperate efforts to secure its victim. Hyde had his jack knife and with it he managed to keep the monster at bay. When the shark saw the boat approaching it appeared to realize that it was about to be deprived of its prey, and consequently made increased efforts to close with Hyde. The nearer the boat approached the more desperate became the shark, and while one of the men was hauling Hyde into the dingy the other two had to beat the voracious animal off with their oars. The poor fellow was at last safely landed in the boat, and shortly afterward reached the Albena. It seems that the shark never got sufficiently close to bite Hyde. His partial nudity was caused by the fall, as immediately he struck the water his clothes split almost in two.—London Standard.

A WIFE'S INFIDELITY

Resulted in a Ten Years' Sentence for James McDougall.

False Testimony Brought About The Result—A Pardon Procured at Last.

Gov. Cleveland, in the reasons given by him for granting a pardon, recently, to James McDougall, who was sentenced to imprisonment in the Auburn prison for ten years, in October, 1877, for burglary in the first degree, outlined a very romantic case. The facts fill the outline of strange human experiences. It appears that McDougall, who emigrated to this country when young and settled in Brooklyn, where he was an industrious and temperate laborer for fifteen years, fell in love with a young woman whose associations were much lower than his, and whose religious belief was contrary to his own. She was a Catholic, while he was a Protestant. They were married, when she developed into a veritable virago. Her temper was such, it is said, that when she failed to induce a disturbance with neighbors, her husband was compelled to become second party to a brawl. However, McDougall WAS THOROUGHLY INFATUATED with his wife, and during their quiet periods lived happily for a time. A son was born to them, but the wife's temper did not improve, and McDougall occasionally sought the solace of an asylum from her tongue. His life was so regular, however, that his employment was steady, and during his absence from home one day his wife, in a pet, sold out their household effects and left for parts unknown. McDougall's affliction for her had not abated, and he set out to learn her whereabouts. He was told that she had gone to Oneida county, her native place. Proceeding there, he found her and the child at the house of William M. Brown, a wealthy farmer of Verona. Brown's wife was a helpless lunatic, in confinement in a state asylum. Mrs. McDougall was ostensibly employed by him as a domestic. McDougall besought his wife to leave Brown and return to Brooklyn with him, and on her refusal to do so, engaged as a laborer in the vicinity for the purpose of being near her and his little son. He had not remained there long before he HEARD WHISPERS OF IMPROPRITY. It was rumored that his wife was in a wrong relation with Brown. He visited Brown's house, and it is claimed that Brown consented that he might speak with his wife on condition that he (Brown) might be present at the interview. It is alleged that Brown sat between McDougall and Mrs. McDougall during this visit, and that on another occasion, when McDougall called, Brown coaxed the little boy to him, took the child on his knees and schooled him to call him "papa." This was bitterness indeed to McDougall, who left the house in a disconsolate mood. Soon after, it is said, McDougall visited his wife and Brown in a field, where they were picking berries, and pitiously begged Mrs. McDougall to return to him, and entreated Brown to discharge her. Brown ordered him from the premises, with threats of shooting. Exercised by exasperating things told him by neighbors relative to the conduct of his wife and Brown, McDougall started for Brown's house one night at about 11 o'clock. IN AN INTOXICATED CONDITION. He entered a rear door, which was unlocked, and proceeded to his room occupied by his wife, having been informed of its location. Opening the door, which was secured only by a wooden button, he approached the bed, and laying his hand on his wife's shoulder, awakened her, at the same time revealing his identity. He requested her to return to Brooklyn with him. She asked him if he had a home prepared for her. He replied that he had. While they were quietly conversing Brown appeared upon the scene in night clothes, and fired a revolver at McDougall. The ball struck a buckle on McDougall's braces and glanced harmlessly away. The men then clinched, when Brown fired a second shot, which took effect in McDougall's side, and he fell to the floor apparently dead. It is claimed that Brown and Mrs. McDougall lifted the unconscious body of her husband and bore it upon the front stoop, and that McDougall remained there like one dead until the morning, when he was discovered by a neighbor and the alarm given. A physician PRONOUNCED THE WOUND FATAL yet upon Brown's complaint, charging him with burglary, the unfortunate man was handcuffed and taken to the jail at Rome, where he languished for a long time. Upon his partial recovery, he was indicted by the grand jury and committed for trial. It is said that the indictment was based on the evidence of Brown and men in his employ. On the trial, however, Mrs. McDougall was added to the witnesses for the prosecution. Her testimony is claimed to have little reference to the facts, and it is said that she has several times since, in moments of repentance, admitted its falsity, while pleading fear of Brown as paramount at the time of the trial. Several burglaries had been committed in the neighborhood a short time before, and in the excitement which they occasioned McDougall was easily convicted. His full sentence would not have expired until Oct. 14, 1887; with deductions for GOOD CONDUCT IN PRISON. it would have terminated April 14, 1884. His behavior in prison has been good, but he is said to be a heart-broken man. Steps were taken to secure his pardon several years ago, but they availed nothing. The gradual development of the facts in the case, together with the openly shameful conduct of the prisoner's wife and her paramour, at last led the officers of the law instrumental in his conviction to join in a movement for his release that had been unavailingly pursued for years by the prisoner's broken and aged mother and friends, who had known him when a hard-working and industrious citizen.—Albany Argus.

Did She Die?

"No; she lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years, the doctors doing her no good; and at last was cured by this Hop Bitters. He papers say so much about it. Indeed! indeed! how thankful we should be for that medicine."

FOUND AT LAST.

Marsh's Golden Balsam, for the Throat and Lungs, is the Right Remedy.

"Twenty-four years ago my wife and I were out on Lake Ontario in a sail boat during a hard wind storm, and were capsized and thoroughly drenched with water and chilled through. She took a severe cold and cough, from which she never recovered. I have spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and patent medicines, but all in vain. A short time ago I was given a sample bottle of MARSH'S GOLDEN BALSAM FOR THE THROAT AND LUNGS. It seemed to help her. I purchased a large bottle, and then another, and then two more—for at last I had found the right remedy. It has cured her."—J. W. Brown, carriage manufacturer, Kansas City, Mo. MARSH'S GOLDEN BALSAM, for the Throat and Lungs, and MARSH'S GOLDEN BLOOD AND LIVER TONIC are for sale at Thos. J. Fletcher's Gem drug store, Sedalia. Large bottles 50 cents and $1.

R. T. Gentry.

Among the numerous visitors at Fayette, last Thursday, who participated in the laying of the corner stone of Centenary Chapel, we noticed Mr. Richard T. Gentry, of Sedalia. Mr. Gentry has been frequently mentioned recently in connection with the office of state treasurer, and we will say now if the Democracy should decide in the next state convention to clothe him with the honors of this office, it would be a gift worthily bestowed. He is a young man of fine business habits, strict integrity, with a very large experience in financial affairs, and a democrat of the strictest faith; in fact, he possesses all the essential qualifications for making a good and faithful guardian of the people's funds.—Fayette Advertiser.

JEFFERSON CITY.

Increased Salary for Circuit and County Court Clerks.

Filing of the Constitution of the Ex-Confederate Association.

The Object is to Render Assistance to Unfortunate Comrades.

Lieut. Gov. Campbell Doing Remarkably Well as a Pardoner.

Special to the BAZOO. JEFFERSON CITY, August 16. The state auditor, in a letter to the county clerk of Phelps county, yesterday, decides that an act passed last winter increasing the pay of deputy clerks of circuit and county courts, which contained no emergency clause, was intended to take effect from the first of last January, and clerk's are entitled to its benefits from that time on. The auditor bases his opinion on the fact that the act was of the nature of an appropriation bill. The attorney-general concurs with the auditor's opinion. A statement of increase of capital stock from $200,000 to $450,000 has been filed with the secretary of state by the Kansas City Smelting and Refining company. The Ex-Confederate association of this state has filed with the secretary of state its constitution with pro forma declaration of the St. Louis court attached, and its charter was issued this morning. The officers are: J. S. Marmaduke, president; H. H. Leuder, secretary; Edward Cunningham, treasurer. The object of the association is to provide as far as possible by voluntary contributions, the means of assisting those of its members who have by war or misfortune been rendered incapable of providing for themselves and their families. Second, to acquire and hold the necessary bond, established and provided for maintaining a cemetery in the state of Missouri, wherein the remains of ex-Confederate soldiers and seamen may be interred. Third, to faithfully preserve the records of the events in which its members participated, and to correct the spurious reports, too often set forth under the name of history. Fourth, to preserve those bonds of esteem and friendship which properly unite those who fought and suffered for a common cause. Memberships in this association shall be granted to all ex-Confederate soldiers of Missouri, together with those of other states resident in Missouri, and all naval and civil officers, who served the confederacy, now being in good standing. The constitution provides that the officer of the association should be a president, secretary, treasurer, sergeant at arms, and secretary from each district. Nathaniel Cofer, who was sentenced to the penitentiary at the January term, 1883, of the Cape Girardeau circuit court for fifteen years on the charge of rape, had his sentence commuted to seven years and six months imprisonment by Lieutenant-Governor Campbell this morning. Cofer's full pardon was remonstrated by the circuit judge, prosecuting attorney and a number of citizens; but this the governor declined to grant, and compromised by commuting the sentence. Visitors to the Louisville Exposition should remember that the Ohio & Mississippi railway is the only line from St. Louis to Louisville under one management; that the time by this route is hours the quickest; that there is no change of cars; that no other route furnishes as good accommodations, and that the Ohio & Mississippi railway is the popular route, as demonstrated by the fact that ninety-nine out of every hundred passengers go by the O. & M. railway. Rates always as low as by inferior lines. WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15, 1880. GENTLEMEN—Having been a sufferer for a long time from nervous prostration and general debility, I was advised to try Hop Bitters. I have taken one bottle, and I have been rapidly getting better ever since, and I think it is the best medicine I ever used. I am now gaining strength and appetite, which was all gone, and I was in despair until I tried your Bitters. I am now well, able to go about and do my own work. Before taking it, I was completely prostrated. MRS. MARY STUART.

Resolutions of the County Court. Whereas, There seems to be an almost universal desire on the part of the taxpayers of Pettis county that there be submitted to the voters of said county a proposition for raising a revenue for the purpose of building a court house; and Whereas, There seems to be a diversity of opinion among the voters of said county as to whether said revenue should be raised by the issuance of bonds or by the levy of a direct tax; And, whereas, the court is desirous of submitting that proposition which shall be to the best interests of the county, and which will meet the views of a majority of the citizens thereof; Now, therefore, be it resolved, that this court recommend to the voters of Pettis county that a delegate convention be held in Sedalia, on MONDAY, THE 3D DAY OF SEPTEMBER, 1883, at 11 o'clock a. m., in the building leased as a place for holding court, for the purpose of determining and recommending on that day to the county court that proposition which shall be to the best interests of the county and conformable to the desire of a majority of its voters. And the court, for the purposes of this convention, have decided upon the following apportionment upon a basis of one delegate for every one hundred votes, and one for every fraction of twenty-five or more votes thereafter, cast for supreme judge at the last general election, held in November, 1882, provided that each township shall have at least one delegate, to-wit:

Table with 3 columns: Townships, Votes, No. Delegates. Includes Hughesville (153 votes, 2 delegates), Longwood (182 votes, 2 delegates), Heath's Creek (174 votes, 2 delegates), Houstonia (118 votes, 1 delegate), Blackwater (134 votes, 2 delegates), Lamonte (298 votes, 3 delegates), Dresden (198 votes, 2 delegates), Cedar (213 votes, 2 delegates), Bowling Green (151 votes, 2 delegates), Smithton (209 votes, 2 delegates), Sedalia (2254 votes, 23 delegates), Prairie (131 votes, 2 delegates), Elk Fork (159 votes, 2 delegates), Green Ridge (183 votes, 2 delegates), Washington (114 votes, 1 delegate), Flat Creek (185 votes, 2 delegates), Lake Creek (66 votes, 1 delegate).

Total.....4922 53 And the court further recommend and request that the voters of the different townships of the county meet at their respective voting places at 2 o'clock p. m., on Saturday, the first day of September, 1883, for the purpose of electing the delegates to said convention as aforesaid, to be held on Monday, the third day of September, 1883.
