A "MASH."

A cunning too too girl,
A naughty, saucy elf;
As artless (?) as a little child—
She understands herself.

NOTES, PERSONALS, FASHION.

—Sandpaper will become ivory knife handles that may have yellow with use or age.

—Tidies have been replaced by a bow of broad ribbon, which looks very well in the place usually occupied by the tidy.

—The first child born to Chinese parents in Boston came into the world Saturday. Its mother, Mrs. Tam Wah Kee, is only sixteen years old.

—Julia Ward Howe says "poor people cannot be kept out of good society." No, but they can be made most awfully uncomfortable while they are in.

—Mrs. J. M. Griffith, who recently died at Dubuque, left $250,000, of which the Episcopal church and the Home for the Friendless will receive $25,000 each.

—Young ladies in Italy wear eighteen petticoats. What the dickens of a picnic a mouse must have when he gets started among 'em!—Burlington Free Press.

—Porcelain plaques should be hung against a dark background, but that background should preferably be a diamond shaped panel covered with plush rather than a frame around the plaque itself.

—Chinese matting has so far forgotten its original purpose, and become so elevated by its introduction into a decorative material, that it is capable of almost anything and now aspires to be used for portieres.

—Blouse waists are causing the revival of belts. Belts are seen with all kinds of dresses. They are made of either broad ribbon or velvet, and are fastened at the side with a rosette or bow. Cloth or leather belts are useful, and are usually black or brown.

—The velvet brocades for handsome wraps are manufactured in Paris and cannot be duplicated here. Many of these have threads of color running between the satin or silk cords, giving them a changeable effect of color which is very pretty.

—The broad brimmed brown felt hats are very becoming and stylish for little girls; they may be faced with soft surah of any desirable shade, with a twist of the same around the crown, and a bunch of Marabout feathers at the side.

—A screen of home manufacture may be made by joining two clothes-horses together, forming thus four panels; over one side stretch cretonne of a quiet pattern and color, and over the other a tea green serge, which latter may be embroidered as taste may dictate.

—A woman can go to church and afterward give an incomprehensible synopsis of the minister's text and address, but if the texture of a dress is wanted worn by any woman in the congregation she can tell you all about it without hesitating.—Boston Courier.

—A mantel lambrequin may be tastefully arranged by using a strip of plush or velvet the length and depth desired, which is put on straight with gilt tacks or invisible nails, and at the corners looped gracefully with bows of ribbon to correspond in color with the lambrequin.

—A smart man has discovered that up to the age of twenty-three a woman looks for a man under the bed in fear and trembling; from that age to thirty it is more of a matter of habit than anything else; but after thirty a relentless, cruel expression haunts the eye, that bodes no good should the man be found.—Philadelphia Call.

—The latest Newmarket coats have two full plaits in the back, instead of one, and are left open down the front and show the dress beneath. A few imported coats of this description have, instead of plaits, the fullness gathered just below the waist line, with ornaments to cover rough shirring. These come in all the dark colors.

—Very dressy small bonnets can be made of dotted lace, arranged in full plaits or folds, over a crown of satin, matching the dot of the lace in color. Iridescent beads in various shades, arranged around the front with several ostrich tips tastefully placed at the top, make sufficient trimming for this inexpensive but neat little bonnet.

—A style of coiffure which is almost universally becoming has the appearance of being carelessly arranged. The back hair is drawn up rather high and loosely plaited. There is an almost indistinct parting noticeable in the front, while the locks at the side being shingled, a high and full effect is given. The frizzes are half rings worn high or low, according to fancy.

—The heavy ottoman silk, with chenille flowers, new this season, is much used for handsome wraps. Recently there has been quite an improvement made in the manufacture of jet for trimming these cloaks. Formerly a single row on a wrap would exceed the entire weight of the other materials; now the beads are made hollow, but are just as nicely cut.

—Plush is seen in many of the winter suits, combined with ottoman silk. With these costumes the suitable outside garment is a tight fitting jacket of the plush, with fullness in the back like a position basque. A broad revers collar is faced with ottoman silk, and the revers may be, if desired, extended the length of the jacket in the form of a vest.

—The rough, knotty surface of cloth resembling Astrakhan fur has been revived and will be very fashionable during the winter for cloaks. These are particularly nice for misses and will answer for the street, for school cloaks and general wear.

It also comes in different width stripes for trimming redingotes, colonnades and jackets. It is just as effective and handsome, as it has a fine silky look, as the real Astrakhan and is much lower priced.

—Round hats for stylish young ladies are often made of dark red or blue velvet. One of this kind lately shown had rather a high crown with the right side of the brim rolling from the face. Rolls or twists of velvet, the same shade as the hat, were used around the crown, and several handsome ostrich feathers fell over the drooping brim on the left side. Underneath the rolling brim were clusters of dark red or scarlet cherries which matched the color of the hat.

—A useful addition to the autumn dresses is the pelerine cape. One pretty style is the fichu pelerine, which reaches to the waist in the back and has the appearance of a jacket. The short fronts are almost concealed by a jabot of lace which is long enough to reach to the belt. Another pretty style becoming to slight figures, is short and round behind, and has long pointed ends in front. These capes are made of sicilienne or satin, and are trimmed with chantilly or Spanish lace.

—An electric alarm is to be placed in the house of every member of the fire department, so that the boys can be summoned quickly and simultaneously. It is a grand enterprise and should add to the efficiency of our fire department.

—The authorities have commenced to do what the BAZOO has been urging for some time—locking up the prostitutes and filthy negro vagrants who make night hideous in Boonville. Fifteen of them have been put in the catcubes this week, and "still there's more to follow."

—We saw the other day, on a furniture factory wagon, a section of a walnut tree which grew on the farm of D. L. Keiger, five miles south of Boonville. The section was twelve feet long, four feet and eight inches across one end and four feet and two inches across the other. It was the second cut from the ground, the lower section being the same in length and much larger in circumference.

—John O'Bryan, until to-day a compositor in the Topic office, has purchased the meat shop of the Wrangler boys, and will take possession the first of December. We hope John will have an excellent trade, and no doubt he will, for if there is a young man that knows how to keep a good butcher shop, where everything is neat and clean, it is John O'Bryan. Success to him.

—There will be a joint debate at Mt. Sinai school house, next Friday, November 30th, between the T. P. C., of this city and speakers from Mt. Sinai. The question for discussion will be: "Resolved that the mind of woman is equal to that of man, and capable of equal development." On the affirmative, Walter Williams, Will Shelton, Charlie Swap; on the negative, Robt. Sloan W. A. Smiley, J. B. Mr-dor. All are cordially invited to attend, and a good time is expected.

—There was considerable excitement in Boonville Tuesday night and yesterday over the report that a mob had been formed by the negroes to kill some of the white people and avenge the killing of David Jett, which was chronicled by the BAZOO Friday. Luckily for the negroes, however, only a few of the more hot-headed were engaged in talking up such a mob, and there was nothing rash done. Rayland's action was wholly justifiable, and any attempt to array the races against each other on such trivial grounds will and ought to fail. Jett has no one but himself to blame—that he is not now alive.

—Hon. John Cosgrove, member of congress from this district, left for the east this week. He goes first to Watertown, New York, to visit his aged parents and thence to New York city. From there he will go to Washington to take his seat in the national house of representatives. The BAZOO correspondent endeavored to find out who was his candidate for speaker, but he would not state. He was for Clark, for clerk, and would do all he could for him. If Randall was for Clark, he was for Randall, the same with Carlisle and Cox. Col. Cosgrove favors the old ticket of Tilden and Hendricks in 1884.

—Though the Advertiser took a very strange plan to effect its purposes in the fire department matter, the BAZOO is glad to note that the trouble is finally settled, I believe, to everybody's satisfaction and without bloodshed. "All is quiet along the Potomac."

—An electric alarm is to be placed in the house of every member of the fire department, so that the boys can be summoned quickly and simultaneously. It is a grand enterprise and should add to the efficiency of our fire department.

Kansas and Texas Mishaps.

The K. & T. palace dining coach, Glasgow, was brought in on the delayed north bound train with one end completely stove in and otherwise badly damaged, the result of a collision at Chili Station, Texas, at 5 o'clock Tuesday morning.

The passenger train which had just stopped, was being followed by a heavy freight train drawn by a Mogul engine.

Owing to the dense fog and the fact that Chili is not a regular stopping point for this train, the engineer of the freight failed to discover the situation until it was too late to prevent a collision. He, however, had sufficient time to call for brakes, reverse his lever and with his fireman leap from the engine before the crash came. The dining car, as stated, the engine and the platform of the rear sleeper, were all badly wrecked by the concussion, but fortunately no one was hurt, though many were badly frightened and for a time a general panic ensued.

The train which was somewhat delayed by the accident was still further delayed yesterday by the wrecking of a freight train three and a half miles south of Vinita, where the engine struck a cow, derailing itself and ten cars of merchandise, and tearing up the track for fifty yards. Although this wreck was a bad one, no one was hurt, and beyond the delay and loss of property, no damage was done.

The Meetings.

The children's meeting yesterday afternoon was well attended, and considerable interest manifested by those present. Rev. Mr. Duncan conducted the services, choosing as his topic, "There be four things on the earth that are little, but exceeding wise." These he gave as the ant, coney locust and spider, and with these he gave illustrations and applications to the child's life.

After the meeting the pastors held their adjourned session of the day before, to hear the report of the committee that was appointed to obtain a hall for holding a series of revival meetings, under the direction of an evangelist. The committee, Rev. Beattie, reported that the meetings could not be held during the next two weeks, as the hall was engaged until the middle of December. Owing to the report the matter was allowed to drop for the present.

Friday's meeting closed the third week of the protracted union meetings. Beginning with to-day, the services will be held at the Ohio Street Methodist church, Rev. A. W. Nesbitt conducting the services. The next children's meeting will be Tuesday afternoon after the adjournment of the union meeting.

The night meetings of the various churches have varied in attendance according to the interest the congregation of each church takes in them. Some have had more converts than others, but on the whole the attendance has been fair.

Owing to the fact that the Cumberland Presbyterian church are interested in the matter of raising sufficient funds with which to construct a new edifice the night meetings of that congregation have been abandoned but their pastor, Rev. A. H. Stephens, still continues
