WATERMELON TIME.

The watermelon days have come, the gladdest of the year, when we can rip the long green slice that spreads from ear to ear, when we can grab the luscious meat in each expectant fin and feed our face until the juice shall dribble from our chin. I prize the watermelon as it lolls about the store but on its native heath is where I love it all the more and when the summer lingers in the lap of early fall and the moon is brightly shining I can almost hear its call. It isn't half bad eating when you take it off the ice but if you want a melon that is sweet and crisp and nice, pick out some pleasant evening when the sun has ceased to shine and go down in the melon patch and yank it from the vine. A knife is quite superfluous and only in the way; its use is not permitted by the educated jay. Just ascertain that it is ripe by giving it a thump, then pluck it off and hit it on a rock or on a stump. This shock will crack the rind apart and loosen up the core, for that is all that's fit to eat when there are plenty more. The watermelon days are here but soon will pass away, so let us be industrious and eat them while we may; let's save the rind and make preserves to swell the cupboard's store and keep the flavor in our mouths till melon time once more.—Albert Stroud.

CAN NOW FOR WINTER USE

Cut Cost of Living by College of Agriculture's Directions

Whole tomatoes, green peppers, spinach, and corn on the cob every day next winter! Doesn't the thought suggest a pleasant departure from too much meat in the diet?

Every woman on the farm should can surplus fruits and vegetables during the summer months for winter use, according to Miss Addie D. Root of the Missouri College of Agriculture. By so doing, the cost of a valuable food will be decreased and meals during the winter will be made more appetizing. Fruits and vegetables give variety to the diet and supply certain food materials which are necessary to maintain health. They do not leave us in need of spring tonic.

In the day our grandmothers the canning of vegetables was little understood and results were seldom successful. We know today that foods spoiled from the action of small organisms called bacteria, which float in the air around us and we know how to kill them. If these are killed in the process of canning and the jars sealed air-tight, food will keep indefinitely. Different kinds of bacteria are found in different kinds of foods. Some kinds require a higher temperature to kill them than others and for this reason some fruits and vegetables must be cooked longer than others during the canning process.

For the beginner the water-bath canner is recommended as the simplest form. It can be arranged in any home with but small expense. It consists of a containing vessel with a rack and a cover. A wash boiler may be used. A rack may be made of thin boards or heavy wire. It should be raised three-fourths of an inch from the bottom of the boiler or enough so that water can circulate freely under the jars. This prevents the jars from getting too hot. Water should be an inch over the tops of the jars.

Before placing the jars in the boiler, screw the top down as tightly as possible with thumb and little finger. If screwed too tightly, expansion will cause the jars to break. The cans are removed most easily by means of a can lifter.

Miss Root has recently issued a circular containing directions for canning all the common fruits and vegetables. It can be secured by writing to the Missouri College of Agriculture, Columbia, Mo.

PRESIDENT OUTLINES HIS PEACE TERMS IN STATEMENT TO PUBLIC

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—While the railroad presidents were in conference with President Wilson today the President gave out a statement outlining his plan of settlement and saying:

I have recommended concession of the eight-hour day—that is, the substitution of an eight-hour day for the present 10-hour day in all existing practices and agreements. I made this recommendation because I believe the concession right. The eight-hour day now undoubtedly has the sanction of the judgment of society in its favor and should be adopted as a basis for wages even where the actual work to be done cannot be completed within eight hours.

Concerning the adjustments which should be made, in justice to the railroads and their stockholders in the payments and privileges to which the men are now entitled (if such adjustments are necessary), there is a wide divergence of opinion.

The railroads which have already adopted the eight-hour day do not seem to be at any serious disadvantage in respect of their cost of operation, as compared with the railroads that have retained the 10-hour day, and calculations as to the cost of the change, must if made now, be made without regard to any possible administrative economies for readjustment.

Only experience can make it certain what rearrangements would be fair and equitable either on behalf of the men or on behalf of the railroads. That experience would be a definite guide to the Interstate Commerce Commission, for example, in determining whether, as a consequence of the change, it would be necessary and right to authorize an increase of rates for the handling and carrying of freight (for passenger service is not affected). I therefore, proposed that the demand for extra pay for overtime made by the men and the contingent proposals of the railroad authorities be postponed until facts shall have taken the place of calculations and forecast with regard to the effects of a change to the eight-hour day; that, in the meantime, while experience was developing the facts, I should seek and, if need be, obtain authority from Congress to appoint a small body of impartial men to observe and thoroughly acquaint themselves with the results, with a view to reporting to Congress at the earliest possible time the facts disclosed by their inquiries, but without recommendation of any kind and that it should then be entirely open to either or both parties to the present controversy to give notice of a termination of the present agreements with a view to instituting inquiry into suggested readjustments of pay or practice.

This seems to be a thoroughly practical and entirely fair program and I think that the public has the right to expect its acceptance.

THE INATTENTIVE CHILD

Never scold a child who is dull or heedless, nor one who seems to refuse to pay attention. Take such a child to a physician for an examination, for many times there will be found explanations for his conduct—his ears may be diseased or filled with impacted wax which dulls or prevents his hearing. His eyesight may be so defective as to keep him from fixing his gaze upon anything.

Children who are normal and well are bright, alert, attentive and responsive. Those who are ill or suffering from disease of the nervous system, some defect of hearing or vision, are unable to do anything as it should be done, and deserve pity and never blame.—Philadelphia Record.

"I am bothered with liver trouble about twice a year," writes Joe Dingman, Webster City, Iowa. "I have pains in my side and back and an awful soreness in my stomach. I heard of Chamberlain's Tablets and tried them. By the time I had used half a bottle of them I was feeling fine and had no signs of pain." Obtainable everywhere. Adv.

Just the Thing for Diarrhoea

"About two years ago I had a severe attack of diarrhoea which lasted over a week," writes W. C. Jones, Buford, N. D. "I became so weak that I could not stand upright. A druggist recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. The first dose relieved me and within two days I was as well as ever." Many druggists recommend this remedy because they know that it is reliable. Obtainable everywhere. Adv.
