

IN TWOS.

Some Transcripts. Somewhere in the world there hide Garden gates that no one sees Save they come in happy twos— Not in ones, nor yet in threes.

THE AGE OF ICE.

One-half a million years ago the world was a time when the world was as hot as it is now. Ages ago all North America and all Northern Europe lay sleeping within a covering of ice.

Just such a solid, frozen wall as reared its front around the coasts of Europe and North America is seen to-day, on the northern limit of the Antarctic continent.

For several years American parographers have been using the term Southern expression, "ta-ta," as a term of humorous farewell, thus giving it a meaning entirely different from that it started out in life with; and how it ever came to be applied in that way is a mystery.

The beginning of disease is a slight debility or disorder of the organs, the stomach, the liver or the bowels usually. There are dyspeptic symptoms, the liver is troubled, the skin grows lusterless and unhealthy looking.

up, and anchored to an ice-floe. Afterward it got so hot, however, that the temperature of the water a little ways down into the ocean was only one degree below zero.

They spent a jolly Christmas with the thermometer only—35 degrees. Indeed, it never went lower than 46 degrees below zero.

Fogs of brilliant ice-crystals hung over the ground during April. In Cincinnati it is observed that 101 degrees above zero in the shade has the same effect.

For really cool and refreshing reading in hot weather, however, we can not do better than to turn to Capt. C. E. Hall's Arctic explorations. He mentions sitting up in bed, in his snow-house, and writing in his journal when the mercury in Cincinnati is down to 33 degrees below zero.

During the time they took this sleighing party over the frozen continent, a terrific storm came up. Great cracks of ice yawned beneath them. The wind whistled in a desolate state of mind, and heaved off chunks after chunks of ice.

For several years American parographers have been using the term Southern expression, "ta-ta," as a term of humorous farewell, thus giving it a meaning entirely different from that it started out in life with; and how it ever came to be applied in that way is a mystery.

The whole interior of Greenland presents to-day the same appearance the present civilized world did during the glacial period. It is wholly buried underneath a great weight of ice and snow, which levels up valleys and sweeps over hills in its creeping, mysterious progress toward the ocean.

Human foot has scarcely left a track in the snow in this deadly cold interior region. "All is one dead, dreary expanse of white," says DeGale. In a space of country six times as large as the whole British empire, not a live creature, man, beast or bird, is to be seen.

A really good man had rather be deceived than be suspicious; had rather forgive his own fault than run the venture of doing over his hand things. This is the temper of that charity which the Apostle says it shall fail.

The Prevention of Disease.

"Prevention is better than cure and far cheaper," said John Locke, two hundred years ago; and the history of medicine since has shown that it is more probable that, in a stricken sense of the word, prevention is the only possible cure.

Nature, a sound constitution can be easily preserved, but, if a violation of those laws has brought on a disease, all we can do by way of "curing" that disease is to remove the cause; in other words, to prevent the continued operation of the predisposing circumstances.

Drugs are not wholly useless. If my life depended upon a job of work that had to be finished before morning, and the inclination to fall asleep was getting irresistible, I should not expect to defy Nature, and keep myself awake with cup after cupful of strong black coffee.

On a part of the story is tolerably stiff, as our friend's region. The Captain wore a long, heavy beard. His breath coated his whiskers with frost. Finally they froze in a solid mass together, hard and unyielding as a poker.

For several years American parographers have been using the term Southern expression, "ta-ta," as a term of humorous farewell, thus giving it a meaning entirely different from that it started out in life with; and how it ever came to be applied in that way is a mystery.

The whole interior of Greenland presents to-day the same appearance the present civilized world did during the glacial period. It is wholly buried underneath a great weight of ice and snow, which levels up valleys and sweeps over hills in its creeping, mysterious progress toward the ocean.

Human foot has scarcely left a track in the snow in this deadly cold interior region. "All is one dead, dreary expanse of white," says DeGale. In a space of country six times as large as the whole British empire, not a live creature, man, beast or bird, is to be seen.

A really good man had rather be deceived than be suspicious; had rather forgive his own fault than run the venture of doing over his hand things. This is the temper of that charity which the Apostle says it shall fail.

The beginning of disease is a slight debility or disorder of the organs, the stomach, the liver or the bowels usually. There are dyspeptic symptoms, the liver is troubled, the skin grows lusterless and unhealthy looking.

Uniformity in Education.

But uniformity is objected to, by Mr. Herbert, as an evil in the English system; and, if so, it would be the same in any other country. Such a system, however, is not sufficiently elastic, and does not yield readily enough to improved methods of instruction.

There is no thing that has so much authority, and is entitled to so little, as custom. It rules all the people with a rod of iron, and threatens even the wise.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. Kites rise against, and not with, the wind. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm.

Here, again, the law of progress is misread. "Nothing is more certain than that it has resulted in cutting down state sovereignty to a room for individual rights. Man's freedom has never been an acquirement of rights against the state, and in all political advancement, the state has consequently become less and less, and the citizen more and more.

For several years American parographers have been using the term Southern expression, "ta-ta," as a term of humorous farewell, thus giving it a meaning entirely different from that it started out in life with; and how it ever came to be applied in that way is a mystery.

The whole interior of Greenland presents to-day the same appearance the present civilized world did during the glacial period. It is wholly buried underneath a great weight of ice and snow, which levels up valleys and sweeps over hills in its creeping, mysterious progress toward the ocean.

Human foot has scarcely left a track in the snow in this deadly cold interior region. "All is one dead, dreary expanse of white," says DeGale. In a space of country six times as large as the whole British empire, not a live creature, man, beast or bird, is to be seen.

A really good man had rather be deceived than be suspicious; had rather forgive his own fault than run the venture of doing over his hand things. This is the temper of that charity which the Apostle says it shall fail.

The beginning of disease is a slight debility or disorder of the organs, the stomach, the liver or the bowels usually. There are dyspeptic symptoms, the liver is troubled, the skin grows lusterless and unhealthy looking.

The Secret Told.

Nobody told for nobody knew. How it came through the earth and the frost and the dew, and lifted its head to the heavens so blue.

There is no thing that has so much authority, and is entitled to so little, as custom. It rules all the people with a rod of iron, and threatens even the wise.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. Kites rise against, and not with, the wind. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm.

Here, again, the law of progress is misread. "Nothing is more certain than that it has resulted in cutting down state sovereignty to a room for individual rights. Man's freedom has never been an acquirement of rights against the state, and in all political advancement, the state has consequently become less and less, and the citizen more and more.

For several years American parographers have been using the term Southern expression, "ta-ta," as a term of humorous farewell, thus giving it a meaning entirely different from that it started out in life with; and how it ever came to be applied in that way is a mystery.

The whole interior of Greenland presents to-day the same appearance the present civilized world did during the glacial period. It is wholly buried underneath a great weight of ice and snow, which levels up valleys and sweeps over hills in its creeping, mysterious progress toward the ocean.

Human foot has scarcely left a track in the snow in this deadly cold interior region. "All is one dead, dreary expanse of white," says DeGale. In a space of country six times as large as the whole British empire, not a live creature, man, beast or bird, is to be seen.

A really good man had rather be deceived than be suspicious; had rather forgive his own fault than run the venture of doing over his hand things. This is the temper of that charity which the Apostle says it shall fail.

The beginning of disease is a slight debility or disorder of the organs, the stomach, the liver or the bowels usually. There are dyspeptic symptoms, the liver is troubled, the skin grows lusterless and unhealthy looking.

How to Secure Health.

It seems strange that anyone will suffer from derangement brought on by impure blood, when Scovill's Sarsaparilla and Sulfur, or Blood and Liver Syrup will restore perfect health.

There is no thing that has so much authority, and is entitled to so little, as custom. It rules all the people with a rod of iron, and threatens even the wise.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. Kites rise against, and not with, the wind. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm.

Here, again, the law of progress is misread. "Nothing is more certain than that it has resulted in cutting down state sovereignty to a room for individual rights. Man's freedom has never been an acquirement of rights against the state, and in all political advancement, the state has consequently become less and less, and the citizen more and more.

For several years American parographers have been using the term Southern expression, "ta-ta," as a term of humorous farewell, thus giving it a meaning entirely different from that it started out in life with; and how it ever came to be applied in that way is a mystery.

The whole interior of Greenland presents to-day the same appearance the present civilized world did during the glacial period. It is wholly buried underneath a great weight of ice and snow, which levels up valleys and sweeps over hills in its creeping, mysterious progress toward the ocean.

Human foot has scarcely left a track in the snow in this deadly cold interior region. "All is one dead, dreary expanse of white," says DeGale. In a space of country six times as large as the whole British empire, not a live creature, man, beast or bird, is to be seen.

A really good man had rather be deceived than be suspicious; had rather forgive his own fault than run the venture of doing over his hand things. This is the temper of that charity which the Apostle says it shall fail.

The beginning of disease is a slight debility or disorder of the organs, the stomach, the liver or the bowels usually. There are dyspeptic symptoms, the liver is troubled, the skin grows lusterless and unhealthy looking.

TO BE SOLD AT AUCTION.

These familiar words recall to the farmer and others interested, the unfortunate necessity of sometimes getting rid of stock that is not otherwise salable on account of blemishes or imperfections. To improve upon this method, by showing how to restore your stock to first-class condition, is the plan here presented.

There is no thing that has so much authority, and is entitled to so little, as custom. It rules all the people with a rod of iron, and threatens even the wise.

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. Kites rise against, and not with, the wind. No man ever worked his passage anywhere in a dead calm.

Here, again, the law of progress is misread. "Nothing is more certain than that it has resulted in cutting down state sovereignty to a room for individual rights. Man's freedom has never been an acquirement of rights against the state, and in all political advancement, the state has consequently become less and less, and the citizen more and more.

For several years American parographers have been using the term Southern expression, "ta-ta," as a term of humorous farewell, thus giving it a meaning entirely different from that it started out in life with; and how it ever came to be applied in that way is a mystery.

The whole interior of Greenland presents to-day the same appearance the present civilized world did during the glacial period. It is wholly buried underneath a great weight of ice and snow, which levels up valleys and sweeps over hills in its creeping, mysterious progress toward the ocean.

Human foot has scarcely left a track in the snow in this deadly cold interior region. "All is one dead, dreary expanse of white," says DeGale. In a space of country six times as large as the whole British empire, not a live creature, man, beast or bird, is to be seen.

A really good man had rather be deceived than be suspicious; had rather forgive his own fault than run the venture of doing over his hand things. This is the temper of that charity which the Apostle says it shall fail.

The beginning of disease is a slight debility or disorder of the organs, the stomach, the liver or the bowels usually. There are dyspeptic symptoms, the liver is troubled, the skin grows lusterless and unhealthy looking.