

AN ABLE ADDRESS.
Delivered by Rev. Carothers in Memorial to James A. Garfield.
At the Methodist Church in Oregon, Wednesday September 21st.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—On the 2d day of July, 1881, James A. Garfield, President of the United States, was struck down by the hand of an assassin. After lingering and untold suffering, for two months and 17 days, his great spirit was parted from the body.

We meet here as citizens to-day, to mingle our sympathy with that of fifty millions of subjects—under one great and noble government—all bowed down with sorrow for the distress which is upon us. It is right and proper for us to mourn for our honored dead, and to enter upon a service like this. The President had a place in all our hearts and homes; his name was upon the tongues of our babies; in the conversation of our families. Every patriotic heart feels the force of what has taken place. Not only our own Nation, but every civilized people on the globe, express profound regret that such a thing should blacken our history and defame the name of our beloved country.

We are a united people; proud of our ancestry, rejoicing in our past history and present prosperity. Peace and prosperity exist within our borders. People of every rank and tongue, are seeking homes among us. The capabilities of soil and climate meet the varied tastes of the great masses of humanity. We begin to realize the goodly heritage which has befallen to our lot. Our form of government is not excelled on the globe. It is democratic in the true sense of the word. A government of the people, for the people, and by the people. Every citizen enjoys equal rights and protection.

Long and desperate has been the struggle to reach the present status of civilization. Many honored dead are sleeping their last long sleep in defence of liberty. While we hurry to regret the past, our minds are filled with thoughts—too big for utterance. We stop and exclaim: How wonderful! How great is the prosperity which has attended this Nation!

In the midst of our exultation and ejaculations of praise—with the rapidity of lightning speed—the sorrowful intelligence greets our ears. The President falls a victim of death, a crime perpetrated by a worthless vagabond; for no other reason than that of being good and great. To-day under these most solemn and sacred circumstances, we mingle our grief. We do not expect to bring back to life that noble spirit which so recently presided with dignity over a mighty people. The Nation's united prayers for the past 75 days had been "God spare the life of our President!" The petition has been granted in part, in that death was warded off for so long a time. The supplications of the people have all been heard, "by Him who heareth the ravens cry and giveth the hungry meat." Why the president's life was taken, remains unanswered by mortal men. He who spoke this world into existence, and set the planetary systems in place, throwing them out from the tips of His fingers as stars in the royal canopy of heaven; He who numbers the very hairs of our heads, alone has an answer to the problem: "Why should he thus have died?" He has chosen to propitiate the laws of the land. No one doubted His right to pre-empt the head of government affairs. That great mind was beginning to revolutionize and correct some of the mistakes of the past.

"Thought burst forth upon the vital subjects of the day akin to the lightning bolt, the greatest of all, was undoubtedly superimposed in the mind of James A. Garfield in his executive capacity. No selfish motives appeared in any business transaction, from the day of his inauguration up to the hour of death was manifested in him unbounded interest in the welfare of the government committed to his care; great men gathered around him to render his counsel." The president in mass began to recognize in him the true type of manhood. It was in the minds of great the populace. We have found a man equal to the emergency, adapted for the time and circumstances; just the man to pacify and unite two great parties under one common head. A statesman, a patriot, a man whose voice gave out no uncertain sound, but rang up and down, from lake to gulf, from ocean to ocean, in tones of truth and justice—a terror to evil doers, a joy to every good citizen.

The members of the Cabinet leaned upon him as the tender vine to the mighty oak. Though the storm and battle of opinion beat upon him, he stood firm as the everlasting hills; no party selfish motives swayed him to favoritism. Before his exaltation to the Presidential chair, he figured largely in the halls of Congress, and the laws of the land bear his impress and ingenuity.

It was only an acknowledgment of his greatness in placing him at the climax of National honor, and upon him, the highest responsibility of a mighty people. The position had not been sought after; the office sought the man and was satisfied in its success. In the midst of life and continued prosperity—robust in health, happy in anticipation—he was shot down like a dog. The ball that pierced his body counted every true American. It was only the utterance of a universal feeling, bursting from a human heart, made by a sturdy subject: "I would have the blood taken from my own veins and forced into those of a dying President, could it avail good." All that human wisdom could contrive, was resorted to for relief. Tender hands and overflowing hearts dealt out kindness without measure.

All the philosophy of science was brought into command—perchance good might come. Medical skill was lost in study for a relief. The body retained its spirit until it could hold together no longer. In the quiet hours of a rainy nature, when man and beast lie down to their rest, before the turning of the night, comes the message of electric waves, "The President is dead." Fellow-citizens, words fall me. No tongue can tell the rest; each heart knows its own sorrows; sterns will not reveal the unbounded anguish of a stricken people. The bells may toll their solemn notes, and words of woe may continue to be spoken, yet the heart will not be told. No discordant note is heard throughout the land. The heart tens of the mighty millions flow in a single river.

We turn a moment to look into the private character of the man. Upon taking the oath of office we see an index to the character of the man bursting forth in expressions of love for an aged mother and a dear companion. It told the tale and was taken up by an anxious people's. Pure and noble, untarnished, even by party enemies, clear as the noonday sun, free from the slightest suspicion of wrong, fit for celestial habitation. Such was the character made by a lamented chief, one worthy the example of every young man in the Nation—one that will live in the thoughts of nations yet unborn. The God of the universe has need for just such men to swell the great company of martyrs for truth and right. The innumerable company of the great has been increased. Earth is poorer; Heaven is richer.

What are the lessons to be learned from the unbounded calamity? Already statesmen are thinking to correct the weaknesses of governmental law. The North and the South are embracing each other in affection and love, never before manifested as now. Political parties are elevated to a higher plane. True manhood will be praised higher in years to come. The Christian religion has gained another victory. The instructions of the Bible have proven sufficient to make a dying bed as soft as downy pillows. Not a murmur or complaint escaped the lips of the martyr. "There is a divinity that shapes our ends, rough how them as we may." He is gone, but lives forever.

THE CASE OF GUTEAU.
The death of Gen. Garfield at Long Branch, it was supposed, made it necessary that the inquest as to the cause of his death should take place in the State of New Jersey. It was given out that the Coroner of Monmouth county, the county in which Long Branch is situated, would demand that Giteau be delivered to him that he be examined by a Coroner's Jury. Upon the verdict of this jury that the President died from the effects of a gunshot wound inflicted by Giteau, it was expected that the latter would be held by the New Jersey authorities to answer in that State the crime of murder.

In 1858 a man was wounded in New York and was removed to New Jersey, where he died, and the person who inflicted the wound was indicted and tried in New Jersey, but the Supreme Court of that State held that New Jersey had no jurisdiction over the crime, the accused having not done any act in New Jersey. A few years ago a person was grossly injured in Philadelphia, and was carried over to Camden, N. J., where he died. The person inflicting the wounds was taken over to New Jersey, where he was tried, convicted and hanged, the Supreme Court holding that New Jersey had jurisdiction at common law. Since then, in 1877, the Legislature enacted a statute applying to this very condition of circumstances. If this statute be sustained as constitutional, and similar statutes exist in other states, the trial of the assassin might certainly take place in New Jersey. Should it be determined that this man cannot be tried in New Jersey, and cannot be tried in the District of Columbia, the death not having taken place there, it is possible that there will grow out of this singular condition of circumstances some amendment to the general criminal code that will prevent such an extraordinary failure of justice hereafter.

PRESIDENT ARTHUR'S ADDRESS.
Last Thursday, the 22d inst., it was deemed advisable for President Arthur to take the oath in the National Capitol, and after being sworn in by Chief Justice Waite, in presence of the members of the Cabinet, a few Senators and members of the House of Representatives, he made the following address:

"For the fourth time in the history of the Republic, its Chief Magistrate has been removed by death. All hearts are filled with grief and horror at the hideous crime which has darkened our land. The memory of the murdered President, his protracted sufferings, his unyielding fortitude, the example and achievements of his life and pathos of his death, will forever illumine the pages of our history. For the fourth time, the officer elected by the people and ordained by the constitution to fill a vacancy so created; is called to assume the Executive chair. The wisdom of our fathers, foreseeing even the most dire disability, made sure that the Government should never be impeded because of uncertainty of human life. Men may die, but the fabric of our free institutions remains unshaken. No higher or more assuring proof could exist of the strength and permanency of popular government than the fact that though the chosen of the people may be struck down, his constitutional successor is peacefully installed, without shock or strain, except sorrow which mourns the bereavement. All the noble aspirations of my lamented predecessor, which found expression in his life, the measures devised and suggested during his brief administration to correct abuses and enforce economy, to advance prosperity and promote general we fare, to insure domestic security and maintain friendly and honorable relations with the nations of the earth, will be garnered in the hearts of the people, and it will be my earnest endeavor to profit by his example and experience.

PROSPERITY BLESSES OUR COUNTRY.
Our fiscal policy is fixed by law and well grounded and generally approved. No threatening issue mars our foreign intercourse, and wisdom, integrity and thrift of our people may be trusted to continue undisturbed through the present assured career of peace, tranquility and welfare. The gloom and anxiety which have enshrouded the country must make repose especially welcome now. No demand for speedy legislation has been heard. No adequate occasion is apparent for an unusual session of Congress. The constitution defines the functions and powers of the Executive as clearly as those of either of the other departments of the government, and he must answer for the just exercise of the discretion it permits and the performance of the duties it imposes. Summoned to these high duties and responsibilities, and profoundly conscious of their magnitude and gravity, I assume that trust imposed by the constitution, relying for aid on Divine guidance and the virtue, patriotism and intelligence of the American people."

A gaily sized bundle of new music from O. Ditson & Co., Boston, announces that they have, with their usual vigor, commenced the fall campaign of publishing. The first that meets the eye is a song, "Tender, loving Eyes of blue" (35 cts), by Mullaly, and is accompanied with a sweet little ballad, "Beautiful Violets" (30 cts), by Lyman Brackett, a nice affair for children's concert; then comes a glorious bass song, "Light of our Way" (30 cts), by Cole; a very neat picture title belongs to "The Forest Echo" (40 cts), a neat piano piece; then there is one of Berger's pretty little pieces entitled "Rataplant" (25 cts), for young players; the "Olive in Waltz" (35 cts), by Cotford Dick, much reduced in strength and flesh, being unable to take any active exercise. Dr. L. advised the use of Dr. Drogmoodle's ENGLISH FEMALE BITTERS as he knew its composition. With many doubts she commenced its use, but after the use of six bottles, (costing only $5.00) she was restored to perfect health.

DO YOU WISH

Tumors, erysipelas, mercurial diseases, scrofula, and general debility cured by Dr. Linsey's Blood Searcher.

Damaging forest fires prevailed in New Jersey, during the recent "dry spell," and many valuable tracts of pine and cedar were seriously damaged or destroyed.

The best strengthener of mind and body is Brown's Iron Bitters. It is very soothing and refreshing in its effect.

John W. Brooks for many years identified with Western railroads, died in Germany on the 16th inst.

Mrs. Mary Marvin of Harrisburg, Pa., says: "I suffered severely from a complication of female diseases; that sense of bearing down seemed as if it would kill me; my habits were very irregular; nothing seemed to benefit me until I tried Brown's Iron Bitters.

If Americans would sit longer at the table, converse cheerfully and be happy while they eat, they would have less dyspepsia and a more cheerful religion.

A Timely Warning, or the Experience of a Minister.
If you suffer from general debility, brought on by too close application to business and excessive brain work; or from increasing prostration and sinking spells, that even a rest or removal of the cause will not relieve, make haste to do as a reverend friend of ours. He suffered from his druggist a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters, having heard of its merits from a physician, who told him not to take any other Bitters or Tonic, for with the exception of Brown's Iron Bitters, they all contained alcohol, and had failed to give his patients lasting relief; nor should he take any other preparation of Iron, for with the exception of Brown's Iron Bitters, they all blackened the teeth, and often gave headache, which Brown's Iron Bitters never did, but in fact cured headache. The effect was most satisfactory: he immediately realized wonderful results. His old energy returned, his natural force returned, and he felt himself all together a new man, full of health, strength and vigor, and he has continued to remain so ever since. Now he recommends Brown's Iron Bitters to all his friends which we unhesitatingly do to all our readers.—Globe.

American horses will not make as much money abroad this year as the American donkeys have spent there.

Dr. J. W. Gibbon, of Ark., writes: "For many years my wife was a sufferer from a terrible female complaint that baffled the skill of all physicians around me. I have sought no home for her, she was made acquainted with the composition of Dr. Drogmoodle's English Female Bitters, and knowing them to be good, I procured several bottles and placed her upon its use. They cured her sound and well, and I do not hesitate to say, they saved her life."

When you take a trip you are frequently troubled with constipation, headache, pains in the stomach, indigestion, a feeling of weakness or general lassitude, heartburn, acid or sour stomach, etc. You do not wish to create your stomach with a hot, if unseating pills, but if you wish a pleasant and safe remedy, procure a bottle of Batey's Saline Aperient, which will cost you 50 cents. It is exceedingly pleasant, always ready and acts promptly.

On the 13th inst., the editor of the Bates county, (Mo.) Times was publicly cowhided by the editor of the Bates county Democrat. These papers are rivals in politics and the incident was only an exchange of editorial courtesies.

Will you heed the warning. The sign and perhaps of the sure approach of that more terrible disease—Consumption. Ask yourselves if you can afford for the sake of saving 50 cts., to run the risk and do no thing for it. We know from experience that Shiloh's Cure will Cure Cough. It never fails. This explains why more than a Million Bottles were sold the past year. It relieves Croup, and Whooping Cough, at once. Mothers do not be without it. For Lame Back, Side, or Chest, use Shiloh's Porous Plaster. Sold by T. S. Hinde, Oregon, Mo.

Chicago is doing more building this year than in any year since the one which followed the great fire. Two million brick per day are being laid.

A Connecticut Maniac's belief is that he is divine, and therefore has a right to ride free on railroads. He tries to kill conductors who deny his claim.

Buffs Hatch is passing the early days of the autumn season at Cranston's hotel West Point, where, in his semi-granger's costume, he is a central figure.

"Sellers' Liver Pills" have been the standard remedy for malaria, liver complaint, co-tiveness, etc., for fifty years.

The campaign against the hostile Apaches has been initiated by the march of General Carr to Cibola, with 200 United States soldiers and a company of scouts. The Indians are strongly entrenched in one of the naturally fortified portions of Arizona.

This lady had been married thirteen years, and during at least one-half of that time had been a sufferer from the effects of Leucorrhoea or Whites and its many attendants. She was very much reduced in strength and flesh, being unable to take any active exercise. Dr. L. advised the use of Dr. Drogmoodle's ENGLISH FEMALE BITTERS as he knew its composition. With many doubts she commenced its use, but after the use of six bottles, (costing only $5.00) she was restored to perfect health.

From next September Democratic politicians will attend the cotton exposition at Atlanta for an interchange of opinion on the tariff question. S. J. Tilden, Senators Kernan and Eaton, and Speaker Randall are expected.

FROM
COL. L. T. FOSTER.
Vanangstown, Ohio, May 10, 1880.

DR. B. J. KENDALL & CO., GENTS.—I had a very valuable Remedy, which I prized very highly, he had a very large bone spavin on one joint and a small one on the other which made him very lame. I had him under the charge of two veterinary surgeons, who failed to cure him. I was one day reading the advertisement of Kendall's Spavin Cure in the Chicago Express. I determined at once to try it and got the Remedy in a few days. I had tried other three bottles; I took them all and thought I would give it a thorough trial. I used it according to directions and the next day the cold ceased to be lame, and the lumps have disappeared. I used one bottle and the cold was cured. I am now as good as smooth as any horse in the stable. He is entirely cured. The cure was so remarkable that I let two of my neighbors have the remaining two bottles, who are now using it.

Very Respectfully,
L. T. FOSTER.
