The little daughter of Mr. Fred Webber, Holland, Mass., had a very bad cold and cough which he had not been able to cure with any thing. I gave him a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, says W. P. Holden, merchant and postmaster at West Brimfield, and the next time I saw him he said it worked like a charm. This remedy is intended especially for acute croup and lung diseases such as colds, croup and whooping cough, and it is famous for its cures. There is no danger in giving it to children for it contains nothing injurious. For sale by Clark O. Proud.

From a Former Holt County Boy.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, MO., Feb. 27, 1896.
 EDITORS SENTINEL:—I write to you to say that I will remember you and a host of other Holt county friends. I have been receiving THE SENTINEL and regard it as a letter from home each week, besides the news in general in same.

The weather here has been tolerable for a few days. Not so very much snow, but cold and windy. The snow is drifted into the gulches and at the mountain crests and timber to a considerable depth, which forebodes steady winter supply for irrigation the coming summer. I think that overflows on the Missouri bottoms is a thing of the past, from the fact that there are small ditches up to good sized canals being taken out of the different rivers and small streams, and are the source of the Missouri river for irrigation. Some of these large ditches are 2, 3, 4, 5 and 10 miles in length, and will carry from 5,000 to 20,000 and 40,000 inches of water; 100 inches of water will pass through a box 10 inches square in the clear, under a pressure head of 6 inches, 14 inch is considered sufficient for 1 acre of ground if properly handled.

Now the water that is used from these ditches is soaked in to the ground and evaporates and but little if any of it ever gets back to the river channel again. The rain comes in the last part of April, also their grain fields if dry, to bring their new seeds up, and after the grain is up it is irrigated until headed out, that is the ground is kept in a good moist condition; such crops of wheat and barley I never have seen before. Irrigation is in its infancy all along the base of the Rockies from the Canada line to the south of Denver, hundreds of the small tributaries are being ditched out to the bench lands by companies and individuals for ranching purposes. These are my reasons for thinking that the overflows on the Missouri bottoms are things of the past, for the water that is used in April, May and June here, would be flooding them, and possibly might lower Old Muddy so that the fishermen might have to hunt for deep holes for good fishing.

Now, I want to express another thought that might be of interest to some of Holt's good people, and that is in regard to fruit. This northwest is a wonderful big country, that is on the east side of the Rockies, and I don't know how good it will be for raising fruit. Some are planting fruit trees; others think they will water kill. I do not know how much cold fruit trees would stand, but I hardly think they would stand 20, 30, or 40 degrees below zero; but that is my, the fruit that I notice here is shipped from California, Michigan and Missouri, Missouri apples are the best; Michigan next best and if I owned a farm at Holt county, I think I would like to put out a very large orchard of apple trees—varieties such as Ben Davis and other large red apples, for I know they will mature well there, and the B. & M. is extending their railroad direct from Holt county to Omaha, then to Billings and from there on northwest through a great stock and mining country, which will be a good route to ship fruit on, and possibly to a good market for years and years to come.

This is not a good corn country; that is to raise corn in, but good to use it in. I have not seen an ear of corn for years; corn meal is shipped in here from Sioux City, Iowa, and sells higher than wheat flour. What few hogs that are raised here are fed on field peas, wheat and barley, and do very well, but I don't think there is any feed that will come up to corn for the production of good bacon and lard. The bacon and lard that is shipped in here I notice is from Cedar Rapids, Iowa. There is no hog cholera here and I don't think there is from the fact that the water and air are so pure, that when an animal dies here it just dries up and remains that way for years with hide and hair on. Canned goods are used to a large extent all along the range and I notice it is generally branded Maryland. Now, Judge Anderson, why not introduce some of your own products that captured the first premium at the World's Fair at Chicago, up in this northwest country. The best miner rancher, and cow boy all claim that there is nothing so good for them, and I believe them from the way they pitch into anything that is good. Canned corn and tomatoes are staple and used in about every shack. Another item of importance is sorghum syrup. Little Vermont surely is strained to furnish even the labels, let alone the tenth part of the pure Vermont maple syrup that adorns the shelves of the western stores, and for a change I think for the better article, that labels read, "warranted pure sorghum syrup," put up by Mr. Whitmer, Oregon, Missouri, then we would know what we were getting close to home, and another that long freight haul from Vermont.

Now, I will digress a little to illustrate the notions of some people on this long haul racket. When I first came to Smith River Valley I got acquainted with an old timer that rendezvoused about Fort Logan, along in the sixties; he went back to North Carolina, his old home, and while there he made up a colony company of about 50 people, all of which, little old, young, male and female. They got all ready by a certain day to start, their route being by wagon and rail to St. Louis, thence by steamboat to the Missouri river to just below Fort Benton, thence by wagon to Smith River Valley, the promised land. But about the time they were to start one old wisdom inquired about raising corn in that country, he was told that corn would not grow there. Well, what will we do for cobs to make pipes and for keep sakes and ornaments, etc.? One of the party suggested, better take a few along; at that each one of the party secured a sack, proceeded to a shelter close by and filled their sacks with little southern cobs and started. They worried along till they got to St. Louis hundreds of miles, then started up through Missouri 600 or 700 miles through the Egypt of the world for producing the very finest longest smoothest velvet cobs. They would not empty their 56 sacks of cobs overboard and get a shove at almost any landing and fill their sacks with a much better quality; no, they were too much addicted to that long haul racket, but they got here all the same and the gentleman told me that he thought some of the cobs were now petrified, so they will be a great comfort to the colony and serve as a kind of binding link to them and their generations to follow.

This is a good country for sheep and large quantities of wool is shipped each year to Boston and other large cities. Lots of good water falls, backed with springs and eternal snow to run any kind of machinery for grinding and factory, which I suppose will be utilized some day; the closest factory that I hear of is down in one of the Dakotas. There is a good flouring mill at Rozeman, also one at Great Falls. A good mill and woolen factory would be a good thing, something like the Kunkel mill near Oregon.

I will now write a few lines to the young ranchers in that section. Along last summer I went to town, White Sulphur Springs, and while looking around I came across a fruit stand and I noticed they had water melons for sale. I ordered a couple of slices for a friend and myself to eat and settled for same at 6 cents per lb, 8 lbs 50c. When I sampled my part I soon discovered that the melon had been pulled a little too soon, and I reported to the dealer, who was a commission man at other places, got every thing in shape and when the sign is just right, notify or order one or two cars to be side trucked, call in some extra help, go to work pulling from earliest planting when ripe, rush them in quick and consign. Order more cars, just as soon as other melons are ready and keep it up until the fields are cleared; then after all returns are in, count up and see if that ground didn't pay better than the balance of the farm; Eddy or lastly, for fear I might worry somebody, I would like to tell some hunting, fishing and bear stories, but as they might seem a little tough I would first like to make arrangements, with such gritty fellows as Capt. Dan, Hunt or Capt. Lucas, or Ulysses Grant Buckles, to kinder daddy them and stick up for them. By the way, Capt. Dan, Hunt, would you be so obliging as to start a few of those fast running squab and pumpkin vines in this direction next spring, and if you would and they would escape capture from the Arapahoes or Crow Indians and get here all right, then would be a man blessed with pumpkin pie and a big High Chief Mucka Muck be showered with thanks at that end.

Mr. Editors, this is the first attempt on my part to write anything for publication, and as it is very poorly composed and written and possibly mistakes in spelling, please correct if you can make it out, and if not put it in the waste basket and say nothing. Good wishes to you and all Holt county friends.

We know of no other community in the world where dyspepsia is practically unknown, and that is the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, N. Y. These good people have been studying the subject of digestion for more than a hundred years, and that they understand it pretty thoroughly, is evidenced in the foregoing fact. Their Digestive Cordial is the best and best remedy in cases of indigestion that we know of. A trial bottle can be had through your druggists for the trifling sum of 10 cents.

The Shakers Digestive Cordial supplies the system with food already digested, and at the same time aids the digestion of other foods. It will almost instantly relieve the ordinary symptoms of indigestion, and no sufferer need be told what these are.

Farm and School.

The occupation of farming is the great store of mental, nervous and physical reserve for the race. It is some times felt by members directly engaged in the occupation that not so many of them are trained for public life as their numbers entitle them to. In another sense, however, the country is under obligation to the farms for the training of the great majority of its best men. Of the new congress a very large majority is comprised of men who were brought up on the farm and who, by their own experience and feeling, understand the interests of that great occupation. It is also a fact of no inconsiderable consequence that 128 members of the new Republican house of representatives once taught school.

It would be well if farmer boys, even after they have gone through college, understood that fame and fortune do not come alone through political or other public positions. Fortune and happiness can readily come to all on the farm. What is most needed throughout the west is intelligent farming. The properly educated man will know how to farm with profit. He will be public spirited and favor public improvements because they will make his farm valuable and enable him to obtain good prices for his products.

The farmer should lead an ideal life of prosperity, peace and contentment. He should make the surroundings of his home beautiful—in fact the home of every farmer should be in the century. The best of the century is the century of shrubbery and flowers. He should plant shade, nut and fruit trees along the highway in front of his farm, and from them receive profit and pleasure. If the farmer only knew it a little acre, besides being a constant source of joy to him and all his family.

More educated farmers are wanted. The field of opportunity is greater out in the country than in city and town.—St. Joseph Herald.
