Telephone "Diabolical."

Truly extraordinary is a story of the failure of an attempt to establish a telephone service at Saint-Etienne des Gres, situated in the Tarascon district. The necessary apparatus had been packed all ready to start for the village when the carter heard that the inhabitants, being under the odd impression that the invention was the work of the evil one, were determined to oppose its entry, and were resolved to arm themselves with their agricultural implements and to make a fight of it. The man said that he was willing to confide his cart and its contents to the electricians, but that as for himself he would not risk his life in such an adventure. A telegram was forwarded to Marseilles asking for instructions, and the reply came that the cart was to be left at Tarascon. What the sequel to the present deadlock will be remains to be seen, but meanwhile the good people of Saint-Etienne des Gres stoutly declare that they will have nothing to do with the telephone, which is "a diabolical machine."—London Telegraph.

Future of the Trolley.

Under this head the Lancaster New Era sketches a vision of the immediate future, when trolley lines shall stretch for hundreds of miles without a break, and when they shall not only carry freight, but be equipped with buffet cars and even sleepers. Why not? This would seem to be the logical development of this new system of traveling, and the only opposition to it that would amount to anything would probably come from the railroads with whose business it might be supposed to interfere. But the railroads are already changing their views on the subject. They now regard the trolley rather as a feeder than a rival. It brings them patrons for long-distance travel, while relieving them from much of the local patronage which interferes so seriously with their train movements in the vicinity of large cities. Trains and trolleys should help each other. There is room for both, and the public demands the fullest accommodation on both.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Working Nights Affected Him.

He got home late, but his little daughter was still up and inquisitive as usual. He lifted her up and kissed her, and as he put her down she said: "Papa, do you have to work nights?" "Sometimes, my dear," he replied. "Why, papa?" she asked. "To get money to buy my little girl clothes," he returned. "And toys?" she went on. "Yes; and toys." She thought the matter over for a moment. Then she said: "I don't believe it's good for you to work nights, papa." "Why not?" he asked. "It always makes your breath smell so bad."—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Hero in His Day.

At this time of much airship talk, one rarely hears the name of Pilate de Ruzier, one of the first to test the feasibility of aerial navigation, and yet he was the hero of his day. A monument was erected in France on the spot where he made his last and fatal attempt. When the balloon was first invented he scorned the idea that criminals should be sent to make test ascents. "It would be an honor to lose one's life, if need be, in such an enterprise," he said. He died some years after in trying to cross the English channel, and he is still the ideal of French aeronauts, because of his fearlessness, his enthusiasm and his love of the sport.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Mr. John O. Perry, of Newton, Ga., judge of the county court, Baker county, Ga., says: I had a severe and painful case of piles some three years since. Having no remedy at hand for the cure of piles I tried Mexican Mustang Lintment. I found it to be the very remedy needed. It is soothing, the application giving no pain at all, and in my case it effected a cure. I have not been troubled with the disease since I used it.

Doesn't Respect Old Age.

It's shameful when youth fails to show proper respect for old age, but just the contrary in the case of Dr. King's New Life Pills. They cut off maladies no matter how severe and irrespective of old age. Dyspepsia, jaundice, fever, constipation all yield to this perfect pill. 5c, at C. O. Proud's Drug Store.

Why We Feel Hungry. The sensation of hunger has not been easy to explain. The new theory of a German physician is that it is due to emptiness of the blood vessels of the stomach, and it is pointed out that hunger is appeased with the rush of blood to the stomach following the taking of food and beginning of digestion. In many anemic patients, who have no appetite when the stomach is empty, the blood vessels of the stomach are really congested, instead of being empty. Lack of blood in the stomach, in health, acts on a special nerve, which is a branch of the same nerve trunk as the nerves of the mouth and tongue. A stimulus applied to the tongue, as by a spice, thus increases appetite, while disease affecting the nerves of the tongue may produce loss of appetite, even when the stomach is empty.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Notorious Criminal.

In Sweden there is a man named Loefdahl who is said to be in one respect the most notorious criminal on record. He has been charged with no less than 1,807 different crimes. He began his career as a forger, and did not stop until he had forged 1,800 documents. Then he decided to make money by setting houses on fire, and he had burned seven dwellings before he was caught. Most of the documents which he forged were receipts for salaries of railroad employes, and for every house which he burned he obtained the full value from an insurance company. It is estimated that if the full penalty of the law were to be imposed for each offense, Loefdahl would have to spend several centuries in prison.—N. Y. Herald.

A Bottomless Cup.

It is interesting to recall to-day a curious fact about the America cup. Twenty-seven inches high, and measuring two feet round the base and a yard round the middle, the cup, it was discovered years after it had been in the possession of the Americans, had no proper bottom to it. On a festive occasion, in honor of an English guest at the New York Yacht club, the cup, it was found, would not hold the champagne with which a steward was attempting to fill it. The champagne, in fact, as fast as it was poured in at the top ran out at the bottom, a large hole having purposely or otherwise been left by the English makers.

Music Hath Charms.

"And do you not find that even the dumb animals are susceptible to the influence of certain strains of music?" asks the gentle investigator of the sagacious farmer.

"Now that you mention it," answers the agriculturist, "I believe that there is one tone that affects my team of horses pretty much."

"And what is that?" asks the investigator, taking out his little note book.

"G natural," says the farmer, moving on down the pike.—Judge.

New Name for Pie.

"This pie is entirely too affectionate," complained the Cheerful Idiot.

"What's that?" inquired the puzzled waiter girl.

"I say it's too affectionate—the upper crust is stuck on the lower. Bring me some of that dropstitch pie over there."

And after some difficulty it was beaten into the head of the distressed maiden that he wanted some of the cranberry pie with the lattice work cover.—Baltimore American.

Drawing a Conclusion.

"Now," said the hopeful young author, as he finished his synopsis, "that's the plot of my novel except for the last chapter. Can you tell me how the story's coming out?"

"No," replied the critic; "but I can tell how it isn't coming out."

"How do you mean?"

"In book form."—Philadelphia Press.

Cause of Cold Weather.

The theory is being advanced that the abnormally cold weather that has prevailed during our more recent summers is due to the unnatural production and appropriation of electricity, and it is pointed out by many that as the utilization of electricity has increased our hot summer weather has diminished.

A New Wrinkle.

"What are your advertising rates?" asked the hustling young man. "I want to advertise my novel."

"You are a publisher, then?" replied the clerk.

"Sure not. I want to get a publisher. I'm the author."—Philadelphia Press.

SAVED HIS LIFE.

J. W. Davenport, Wingo, Ky., writes, June 14, 1902: "I want to tell you I believe Ballard's Snow Lintment saved my life. I was under the treatment of two doctors, and they told me one of my lungs was entirely gone, and the other badly affected. I also had a lump in my side. I don't think that I could have lived over two months longer. I was induced by a friend to try Ballard's Snow Lintment. The first application gave me great relief; two fifty cent bottles cured me sound and well. It is a wonderful medicine and I recommend it to suffering humanity." 25c, 50c, $1.00.
