

Loftiest Library.

There will shortly be inaugurated upon the Alpine peak of Ollen, on Monte Rosa, the most elevated literary and scientific institute in the world. Its altitude will be 10,000 feet. The library, which will take the name of Queen Margherita, owes its organization to her majesty, supported by ministers and many eminent persons of Italy and abroad. It will comprise all the books, sculpture, landscapes, and photographs obtainable relating to the Alps.

Surprised Jackie.

An American man-of-war's man, ashore at Gravesend, near London, awoke to find himself attired in the uniform of a British soldier. No sooner had he wandered out into the street than a picket stopped him and told him to button up his tunic or he would be taken to barracks. He sought refuge in a police station, where it was discovered that a deserter had changed clothes with him while he slept.

Use of Molds.

The most ordinary dishes are made attractive and inviting by the use of molds. Creamed potatoes are compressed in pear shapes, sprinkled with corn meal and fried beautifully brown in a pan of lard, like one would use to fry doughnuts. A clove is inserted into the large end to represent the blossoms, and an apple stem or cherry stick into the other. Serve in small side dishes.

Largest Room.

The largest room in the world, under one roof, and unbroken by pillars, is in St. Petersburg. It is 620 feet long by 150 feet in breadth. By daylight it is used for military displays, and a whole battalion can completely maneuver in it. By night 20,000 wax tapers give it a beautiful appearance. The roof is a single arch of iron.

Edison's Philosophy.

Those little things that make you laugh when you're young don't seem funny to the fellow who hasn't rubbed up against poverty in his struggling days. But to the man who has suffered and struggled they are the jewels in after life. I like to look back on my hard luck incidents.—Thomas A. Edison.

Cherbourg's Defenses.

French naval officers are beginning to complain strongly of the state of the coast defenses at Cherbourg. The complaints mainly resolve themselves into this—that the guns are largely obsolete and the gunners too few. There is only one artilleryman for every gun—600 guns, 600 gunners.

Earthenware Cement.

A useful cement for earthenware vessels is found in white lead. Spread it on strips of calico and secure with bands of twine. This method is only suitable for earthenware pans, etc., which are intended for service and not for ornament.—Household.

Winter Nasturtiums.

Nasturtiums for winter growing should be cut off from the plants before the frost injures them, taking stocky, healthy leaf stalks and sprays, those full of buds being the most desirable. No roots are taken. The stalks should be placed in a low vase with plenty of water, when they will thrive and blossom through the winter. This experiment has been successfully tested. The water should be renewed as it is required, but the plants can be displaced to do this only in a careful way.—Brooklyn Eagle.

What Chickens Won't Eat.

A city woman who had decided that she would keep some hens as a profitable amusement during her long summers in the country asked the farmer of whom she bought them what they could eat. The man looked at her in silent amazement a moment before he replied: "It would take me the rest of my days to tell ye what they can eat," he said, at last, "but it won't take long to tell ye what they can't. You avoid feeding of 'em with salt fish and cobbles and I guess you won't have any trouble."

Hominy Hint.

Fried hominy is in such constant demand during the game season that it is worth while to learn to cook it perfectly. Boil the hominy and press it in a square pan or dish. When quite cold and firm, slice the hominy, dip in flour or in egg and breadcrumbs, and fry in deep fat. Never fry in a skillet, as this produces sauted hominy, quite another dish.—Boston Budget.

Odd Church Service.

Crowds attend the church of St. Aidan's, Boston, England, every Sunday, to hear a musical contest between congregation and choir, the former insisting on singing against the wishes of the latter and the organist. The congregation usually succeeds in drowning out the choir and organ, finishing rather hoarse, however.

Nice New "Problem."

The Silent Reaper.

After a long struggle with the grim monster, Mrs. Cynthia Shumate died at the home of her grandson, J. M. Shumate, in Forest City, on Tuesday of last week, January 3, 1905, in the 78th year of her age. From the Forest City Press we gather the following data relating to the deceased:

Cynthia M. Peters was born in Petersburg, West Virginia, August 7, 1828. When quite young she united with the Baptist church and has been a true and faithful Christian all through life. She was married in 1846 to Daniel Shumate, who died in September, 1902. Two children were born to them, neither of whom survive.

In 1855 she accompanied her husband from their home in Virginia to Harrison county, Missouri, where they resided continuously until his death, when Mrs. Shumate came to Forest City to live with her son.

The deceased was a noble Christian character, and during her life was ever ready to lend a helping hand to those among whom she lived. In the early days when her husband left his little family to go to the front at his country's call, she was a brave good woman, taking care of her own home and lending assistance wherever it was needed.

Although only living here a few years, Mrs. Shumate was highly esteemed by all who knew her. In less than ten months she has stood at the bedside of her only son and daughter-in-law and saw the Death Angel summon them both to their last resting place, her son having died last March and her daughter-in-law only a month ago. She was with the latter, the late Mrs. Amanda Shumate, in her last sickness, and was taken ill shortly after her death. She felt that her time had come to die and was ready and willing to go, having no fear for the future.

Since the death of her son she had made her home with her grandson, and in her illness all that loving hands could do to alleviate her suffering was done. She leaves to mourn her loss three grandchildren, James and Will Shumate and Mrs. Cynthia Lyons, all of this city.

The remains were taken to Bethany, Missouri, and laid beside those of her husband.

The New-York Tribune Almanac.

Of course, it is possible to worry through life without keeping a Tribune Almanac at your elbow, but is it worth while—does it pay? For 25 cents a year this publication supplies you with a really marvellous amount of information, and the man who has it is an authority in his neighborhood. He doesn't have to be "guessing" or "supposing" about election pluralities, the names of Cabinet Ministers, Senators, Congressmen, Governors or Judges. He doesn't have to rely upon his memory when anything comes up about the big events of the preceding year or in relation to our army or navy, or sporting records, or, in fact, almost anything else of record worth knowing. If you never examined The Tribune Almanac just invest a quarter for once, and see how well pleased you'll be. The 1905 one will be on sale January 1, and may be had from your newsdealer, through your local paper or direct from The Tribune Office, New-York.

Killed by An Engine.

This afternoon, just about 12:40 o'clock, the railroad yards were the scene of a horrible accident, whereby Reuben C. Munson lost his life.

It seems that Munson was returning from dinner to his work on the ice gang of the Denver & Rio Grande and evidently was on the south side of the tracks. Engine 504, in charge of Charles Derryberry, was on the main track, backing toward the east to couple onto a number of freight cars.

At a point about three hundred yards east of the depot, Munson, it is presumed, started to cross the track just in front of the moving engine. The wheels of the tender caught him at once. He was carried about sixty feet by the death-dealing wheels and then dropped. The wheels passed over the stomach, cut both legs off and tore the feet to pieces. Portions of the horribly mangled body were scattered all along the track for fifty feet. When some of the yard men reached the unfortunate man he was still breathing but unconscious. He lived perhaps fifteen minutes after he fell under the engine.

The coroner, Dr. K. Hanson, was summoned. The man was identified by several as James Munson. He has been working for a few days on the D. & R. G. ice gang, and it is said is an old time railroad man. Prior to working on the ice gang he worked at Palisade and at the smelter at this place. He was about 50 years of age and was an Odd Fellow, belonging to some lodge in Kansas. His home is in Kansas. He was a single man.

The deceased had but few acquaintances in this city. On his person a few unimportant personal belongings were found by the coroner.

No one saw Munson when he met death. Evidently he was giving the moving engine no attention when he stepped on the track. The engineer and fireman did not see him, as the engine was backing.

An inquest was held late this afternoon.

Undertaker Gourley has charge of the remains and prepared them for burial this afternoon. No arrangements as to the interment have yet been made and relatives in Kansas will probably be communicated with today.

This morning, in the undertaking parlors of the Gourley-Platt Furniture Company, an inquest was held over the remains of Reuben C. Munson, the railroad employe who was killed Tuesday afternoon in the yards of the railroad by engine No. 504.

Coroner Hanson held the inquest. Accidental death was the verdict. One eye witness to the accident was introduced—a boilermaker in the employ of the railroad. He stated that he saw Munson walking along the side of the track, south of the rails. He was in such a position that the upper part of his body was over the rails as he walked. The tender of the backing engine struck him on the shoulder, knocked him under the wheels and he was torn to pieces.

The funeral took place this afternoon from the undertaking parlors. The funeral was in charge of the local lodge of Odd Fellows. The remains were laid to rest in the Odd Fellows' cemetery. The funeral expenses were provided for by the lodge in Kansas of which Munson was a member, and also the local lodge. Quite a number of Odd Fellows were out to pay a tribute of respect to the memory of their departed brother.

The deceased was a single man. Relatives live in Kansas. He has been in the West for quite a while.—Daily Sentinel, Grand Junction, Col., December 22, 1904.

The deceased was a brother of Mrs. Sallie N. Hodgins, of near New Point, and of Miss Libbie Munson, of this city. Their many friends extend their sincere sympathy to them in their hour of affliction. He was well known in this city, where he formerly resided, and was held in high esteem by all.
