A Corn-Growing Contest for Boys.

The Missouri State Board of Agriculture, co-operating with the Agricultural College and the State Corn Growers' Association will hold a Corn Contest for Missouri boys in connection with the 4th annual State Corn Show to be held in Columbia the second week in January, 1907.

There are to be two classes of prizes for the boys, one for boys 15 years of age or younger and another for boys more than 15 years old and under 20. In order to give a number of boys an opportunity to get in on the premiums at least 15 or 20 premiums will be offered in each class. The highest premium will probably be $20 in cash.

Every boy who reads this letter and who wishes to enter this contest should apply at once to Prof. M. F. Miller, Columbia, Secretary of the Corn Growers' Association, and he will be furnished with a copy of the rules for entering the contest. Where good seed corn can be secured in the neighborhood it is advisable to take the kind of corn that has proven the most successful, but if no improved corn can be obtained then a small amount of seed will be furnished by the Agricultural College upon application to Prof. Miller.

Corn is the principal crop in most every county in the State of Missouri, and it is with a view of arousing a general interest in the improvement of the corn crop in both the yield and quality that this demonstration will be held, and also for the purpose of getting the farmer boys of the State interested in scientific Agriculture.

Every county should organize a local corn show and corn growers' association, and the citizens of the county should aid this movement by offering premiums for exhibits at these local corn shows.

The State authorities do not propose to offer any premiums at the local shows but will award premiums for exhibits only at the State Show. No boy should be deterred, however, from making an effort because his county is not organized. Every boy who desires to enter the contest will be given the opportunity, but it will be better if a number of boys from the same neighborhood can enter the contest.

It will be well for every boy entering this contest to get a copy of the last annual report of the Board of Agriculture in which may be found a great deal of information that will be valuable to him in the selection of the best corn.

After the corn is matured next fall a selection should be made of 10 ears to exhibit at the local corn show. This will afford the boys experience that will be valuable to them in the selection of 10 ears to be forwarded to the State Corn Show.
Geo. B. Ellis,
Secretary Board of Agriculture.

The Flag of Liberty.

Oh, Flag of our Country,
How much we adore thee;
How many brave heroes
Fought your country so true
While you floated aloft
True American glory,
The emblem of Liberty,
Red, white and blue.

The poet can never
Reach the depth of her song,
Of the thrice noble Honor
Due to Washington;
The father of our Country,
So noble and true,
Like a hero he fought
For the red, white and blue.

The tall, manly form
Of Washington was seen,
Swift as an arrow,
Ride back and forth again,
Stern was the rebuke
He gave to General Lee
For retreating with his forces,
Confusing General Wayne.

While brave Ja-per stood
With cool bravery,
And held to the breeze
The flag of Liberty,
A well directed shot
From the enemy flew,
And wounded the colors
Of the red, white and blue.

Drooping it fell
Inside the rebel wall,
Where the enemy directed
Their heavy shot and shell,
But over the wall
Brave Jasper did band
And picked up the flag
As it fluttered on the ground.

On the top of the wall
The brave hero flew,
And hoisted the colors
Of the red, white and blue.
While brave, noble hearts
Was beating below
And rallied around
The red, white and blue.

When Governor Rutledge
The soldier's bravery saw
Risking his life
For the flag of Liberty,
He unbuckled from his side
His own glittering sword
And placed on the soldier
As a token of reward.

Brave Jasper sleeps
In a noble hero's grave;
His memory still lives
With the noble and the brave,
The brave hero fell
With the noble and true
And wrapped around his body
Is the red, white and blue.

Ages will look back
To that glorious Sabbath day
When Washington gained the vic-tory,
Like heroes they fought,
Till they gained our liberty,
And signed our Independence
On the Fourth of July.

The Declaration was signed
By noble-hearted men,
Who fought for our liberty
Our freedom to gain,
They pledged their sacred honor,
Their lives and their all,
That our homes should be free
On American soil.

They hoisted the flag,
O long may it wave,
Over the Union,
The home of the brave,
Our Nation's Independence
And Liberty is due,
To the brave, old defenders
Of the red, white and blue.

FINE PLOT THAT FAILED.

Pool Table That Was a Wonder, But Not Properly Manipulated.

"I'm not much of a kicker—take things pretty much as they come," said a now prosperous insurance agent, "but I do feel sore when I remember the time when I was so flat broke that I had to walk from Tiffin, O., to Pittsburg, and when I got there had a fortune—to me—slip away from my grasp through another man's carelessness."

"I've always been a fair pool player, and in Pittsburg I fell in with the proprietor of a billiard hall who occasionally arranged matches between fellow crabs. There was a young fellow there from New York who had beaten all the crack players of the town, and after seeing his play I proposed to the proprietor aforesaid that he should back me in a match against the Gothamite. He laughed—I couldn't do it—he'd seen me play. But I outlined my scheme to him and he fell to it. The challenge was made and accepted, with a purse of $1,000 and a big side bet, in which I was to share, and then I hunted up an electrician who could be trusted.

"Under my direction the electrician rigged up a horseshoe electric magnet in the frame of each pocket of the table we were to use for the match. Each magnet connected with a button located where my backer could put his foot on it conveniently. Then we got a set of balls made with soft iron cores—all but the cue ball—and began to practice.

"I made shots that would have turned De Oro green with envy. Whenever I got the object ball within six inches of the pocket, my backer would press the proper button, and whizz! the ball would shoot in so quick you couldn't see it. We had it done fine, but on the evening of the great match my manager got drunk. I tried to brace him up, for I didn't dare to let anyone else in on the secret, and I hoped he would do all right, but that was where I guessed wrong.

"I won the toss for first break, and made a graceful shot. My accomplice leaned forward to see the play, and carelessly put his foot on all six of the buttons. How those balls scattered. The cue ball barely touched the bunch, but in an instant every ball was off the table and the pockets were full.

"It might have gone off all right at that, since I had been touted as a boy wonder, but my drunken pal forgot to take his foot off the buttons, and as I left through a rear window the gang was trying to pry the balls out of the pockets with a crowbar. I never went back to learn what happened, and I haven't played pool for stakes since."

BEAR FIGHT IN THE CITY.

Story of One in Which Bruin Was Easily Torn to Bits by a Poodle Dog.

A little poodle dog that was running along ahead of a stately dame on Chestnut street the other afternoon was hardly bigger than a rat, but he was as pugnacious and spunky as a bulldog, relates the Philadelphia Record. Between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets he attracted his mistress' attention by a few chirping barks and a tug on the chain that held him in. Looking in the direction of the dog's pointed nose, the mistress saw a street fakir operating mechanical toys on the sidewalk. One of these was a dancing bear, about six inches high, which, when wound up, would work its way all over the pavement. The antics of the imitation animal amazed the high-bred dog, who after gazing at it in anger for a moment suddenly pulled the chain from his mistress' hand and went for bruin. A few moments of biting and tearing left nothing but the battered mechanism on the sidewalk. Both the fakir and the woman were powerless to interfere, and everybody enjoyed the "fight" so much that they would not interfere, consequently the demolition of the bear was effected in a short time. When a policeman arrived he found a satisfied fakir with more than twice the price of the bear added to his wealth; a flushed woman, a victorious poodle and a dispersing crowd of smiling men and boys.

All He Was Fit For.

Opte Read had luncheon with the president a few days ago and told him this story about a recent horseback trip he took through Arkansas. Read rode up in front of a shanty and found a native sitting on the end of a log in a broiling hot sun. "Why don't you move over in the shade?" asked Read. "Tain't time yet; fever ain't come on," answered the cracker. "What's the matter?" "Chills." "How long have you been living here?" "Bout 30 year." "How long have you had chills?" "Bout 30 year." "Why in thunder don't you move if you have chills that bad?" "And catch some other disease I don't know nuthin' 'bout? Not much, mister. When you've got chills you know what they are. I want to tell you something, mister. I've had chills so long and showed so much I ain't fit for nuthin' but to eat meal and shake down persimmons."

ANCIENT CITY DISCOVERED

Relic of Gallic and Roman Civilization Uncearthed on Mount Jouher.

During recent excavations on Mount Jouher, commune of St. Goussand, department of La Creuse, a Gallo-Roman city has been discovered. The unearthing of a beautiful statue fostered the belief that further operations would reveal the existence of a "mansio," disclosing temples and statues of great archaeological importance. Certain details and peculiarities appertaining to this statue recall the features of an Olympian Jupiter, which gives its name to the mount, "Jovis"—Jouher. Then, the discovery of pieces of broken tiles with curved edges, an unmistakable sign of Roman buildings, oxidized nails, earthenware, funeral urns and human bones led to further research, which was soon crowned with most satisfactory results, inasmuch as numerous edifices and pedestals in use for statues were brought to light.

Here and there are walls deteriorated by the effects of time, and others built of freestone showing in places traces of damage by fire, but otherwise in good preservation. Surrounding a pretty level surface are other massive walls, which were probably the proscenium of the open-air circus or theater, whose hemicycle can easily be traced in its entire development. Close by is a residential building in perfect preservation, built of freestone, and with a wing which appears to have been a columbarium—dovecot.

Further research has led to the discovery of several coins in perfect preservation, most rare and of great numismatic value. Among them there is an effigy of the Emperor Augustus, with the legend I. M. D. X—12 years B. C.; an effigy of Tiberius, coined at Lyons in the year 763; several others of Tiberius, Nero and Claudius; of Herod, in the year 16 of the Christian era, and last but not least, of Julius Caesar, 59 years B. C.

There are traces of numerous Roman roads bifurcating this ancient city, the most important leading to Limoges, whence branching in two lines the one led to Bourges and the other to Clermont. Other curios discovered are a funeral lamp dating from the thirteenth century and a phylactery containing a fragment of bone supposed of St. Leoban and valued at 10,000 francs by an inspector of the national museums of France. The commune of St. Goussand, owing to its archaeological treasures and its geographical position, is one deserving the attention of the antiquary and the tourist. From the summit of Mount Jouher a marvelous panoramic view extends to a distance of many miles. To the south Limoges is clearly seen, to the north there is Souleraine, to the east there is Maunpurg, and away beyond there is the beautiful Puy de Dome and the Mont Dore, the Mont Gargan and the range of hills which extends from the north of La Correz to Montron. The view is simply admirable.

Further excavations will take place and will doubtless bring to light other quaint and valuable antiquities. This interesting Gallo-Roman city, so long buried in oblivion, will reappear with its temples, its residential dwellings, its statues, etc., to the delight of the beholder eager to view a town which for many centuries has remained hidden under ground. It is but fair to add that these excavations are due to the initiative of this Able Derrier, the officiating priest of St. Goussand.

South's Huge Riches.

The rich south supersedes the penniless south. With a population of 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 less than the population of the entire country in 1860, the wealth of the 11 southern states is now greater than the wealth of the entire country in 1869. The average increase per year between 1890 and 1905 was more than three times the average increase per year between 1890 and 1900. The advance in southern wealth since the turn of the century is immediately connected with the betterment of the cotton situation, through the systematization of its making and handling the cotton crop. Since 1900 the output of southern coal mines has increased from 49,000,000 to 70,000,000 tons a year, the oil wells from 17,000,000 to 60,000,000 barrels. Agriculture, mining, lumbering and manufacturing, based upon these elemental industries, railroad construction, internal trade, and foreign commerce added last year to the true wealth at the rate of $2,750,000 a day.

Wireless Invention

Progress is being rapidly made in the development of wireless telegraphy by means of the air. And now comes Rev. Joseph Murgas, a priest of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., who claims that he has invented a system of underground wireless telegraphy, the success of which he has demonstrated by experiments for some years. He asserts that before long it will be possible to transmit messages to Europe beneath the ocean. If all that the inventors say is true the earth and the great air spaces above it, instead of being obstacles to certain forms of communication, are aids thereto.—Troy Times.

Obituary.

Mrs. Catherine Craig, wife of Frank Craig, died at her home Sunday evening, Feb. 11, 1906. She was born Feb. 10, 1850, being 47 years and one day of age at the time of her death. Mrs. Craig united with the Christian church 12 years ago and always lived a faithful Christian, and by her death the community lost one of their most noble and truest of women. She leaves a husband and four children, three brothers and a host of friends to mourn her loss. "Aunt Kate," as she was universally known, will be sadly missed by every one of her community. Her noble life was an example for one and all, as she always walked the steps that lead to a life beyond the grave. She bore her suffering with patience and told her family that she was ready to go. She was a loving mother, a faithful wife and a true friend, always ready and willing to help every one in need. She was cheerful and kind and always carried sunshine wherever she went. We realize that by her loss there is a vacant place in that little home which can never be filled, but it is a sweet consolation for the bereft ones to know that they can live a life by her example and teachings and meet her on that blissful shore where no farewell tears are shed. Funeral services were held by Rev. Hite at the Highland church and were attended by a large number of mourning relatives and friends. The remains were laid to rest in the Huiatt cemetery.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

A FRIEND.
