One Burlington Line Cutoff is Completed.

The smaller of the two changes in its tracks in Platte county started by the Burlington last fall, has been completed, but the second and larger is only partially done and will not be finished until spring, the chances are. The cut which has just been completed takes out the dangerous reverse curve just north of Waldron, where the tracks looped east and then south crossing a bridge at the end of the sharp double curve. This was always looked upon as a dangerous piece of track and a waste of time since trains had to slacken in crossing it. By rebuilding a couple of miles of track the Burlington has done away with the twist and is now running on the new line.

Drowned in the Nodaway.

Albert Roberts, of Corning, aged 28, who worked with the pile driver crew on the K. C., with W. T. Shomaker, foreman, met his death by drowning in the Nodaway river just this side of Nodaway station, on Tuesday morning, February 13, 1906. At the time, he was working about 10 feet above the water on the piling, he lost his balance and fell into the water, which is about 12 feet deep. He cried pitifully for help. The crew responded quickly but before they could get near him he had become so chilled that he sank. He was unable to swim because of his heavy wearing apparel or he may have become so chilled that his body was inactive. On account of the rottenness of the ice his fellow workmen could not reach him without endangering their own lives. The body was recovered in a very short time but life was extinct. An inquest was held that evening and the remains were shipped to Corning for burial.

Albert Roberts was born in Atchison county, 28 years ago. His mother died when he was a mere child and he and his father have made their home for many years with Al's brother, John Roberts, on Mill Creek. Al was a good boy, he was eccentric in some of his ways. He never liked to associate in a company, never loafed around and was a teetotaler as to drinking and smoking. He had been with the railroad company for four years.

Ernest Scheele who worked with him came up with the remains.

The burial was had in the London cemetery, north of Rock Port, Thursday.—Corning Mirror.

TO GIVE EMPIRE EFFECT.

The Corset Departments Are Changing Their Wares to Suit the Empire Models Now the Fancy.

Slowly but surely a note of novelty is creeping into all departments of dress accessories, and though a hasty tour through the shops may reveal to the careless observer little that is new save in spring dress materials, there are among the familiar and somewhat shopworn articles that clutter the counters various novelties that indicate the trend of fashion's current.

The corset departments are particularly emphatic in prophecy, and many of the very newest models indicate clearly the lines demanded in the fashionable figure by the latest frock ideas.

The modish woman must adopt strenuous measures for reducing of her hips in order that she may wear gracefully the popular princess gowns and be ready for the empire models if they actually obtain general favor. Fullness of bust is also desirable in connection with the princess and empire lines, and the high bust is demanded by all the most successful bodice models of the day.

Many women are compromising twice: fashion and comfort by wearing the short corsets to which they have become devoted during the reign of the blouse and darning, in addition, a bust supporter which will give the correct bust lines. There are even new corset models made with a back cut all in one, but with a front divided into a girdle and a bust support, and allowing the comfort in which the corset makers have indulged women during the past few years.

With empire gowns some women are discarding corsets altogether in favor of a bust support and corset makers are experimenting with these little corset jackets and producing a host of dainty models to meet the rising demand. There are, for example, short corset waists terminating just below the bust, and made of inch and a half wide satin ribbons woven in and out in basket fashion.

These bust supporters are charmingly trimmed with frills of lace and ribbon knots, and wide elastic matching the satin forms shoulder straps and is set in the sides under the arms so that, despite the support, absolute freedom is given to the wearer. Other bust supporters are of embroidered batiste in white or delicate tint trimmed in soft frills of creamy Valenciennes.—N. Y. Sun.

TO KEEP DISHES WARM.

Various Ways of Solving the Problem How to Keep a Course Diner Nice and Hot.

Keeping things warm is the problem which confronts every user of a gas stove.

Unless there is a broiling oven separate from the baking oven—and this is an expensive arrangement—there is no room in the ordinary gas range for keeping a course dinner hot. Even then the heat is of the kind that is death to both the flavor and looks of the dishes.

A way to manage a warming oven which is perfect, besides being out of the way, is to get a sheet iron or tin oven of the kind which are made to go on over coal oil or little flat gas stoves. Get just as large a one as you can possibly afford, as every extra square inch will pay you in more ways than one. Get a couple of deep iron brackets to set this on and fasten to the wall at a convenient height and distance from the stove. Under it set a low box or fasten a shelf, and upon this set one of the little coal oil stove lamps that sell for little over a quarter. You will find that the heat is of the mild and even kind that keeps things perfectly. The top is an ideal place for raising bread and things which require slow baking, as custard or rice can be cooked in it, to the saving of gas.

In a kitchen in which a coal range keeps its place beside the gas stove the problem is made simple by setting the little lamp under the warming oven of the range while cooking by gas.

In the dining-room the radiator snuff is a means of keeping things warm that is not often taken advantage of. It may be made to match the wood-work and suspended with brackets and have a few of the odd dining-room pieces set upon it, and still leave room for setting the plates and cups just before meal time. It is an ideal place for the cracker bowl, and if made of a piece of marble laid flat on the radiator it will answer as well for a warming table as one which has hot water under it.—Chicago Tribune.

A New Salad.

One who is well versed in salad making gives this toothsome recipe: A strip of the peel of a large and perfect banana may be turned back and most of the pulp carefully scooped out. The short, thick variety of banana in either red or yellow is the best for this purpose. To fill the space left by the removal of the pulp, prepare a mixture of thinly sliced banana, shredded orange or grape fruit, seeded and peeled; white grapes and a few kernels of English walnuts or pecans in small pieces. In season stoned cherries may be added. All must first be mixed in a bowl, with a generous supply of dressing, and after the yellow cases are filled with the salad, each must be laid on lettuce leaves. These must be prepared a short time before using.

Celery and Olive Salad.

Pick and wash well in cold water four or five white celery stalks. Dry them well and use only the tender inside parts. Cut them in short lengths and place in a bowl with lettuce heart. Toss up with French dressing and add olives cut in halves.

LOVELY FOLIAGE PLANTS.

Interesting Experiment to Grow Begonias from Seeds and an Inexpensive One.

No discussion of foliage plants would be at all adequate which did not include some mention of the Rex begonias. These are probably, next to geraniums, the most universally grown of hardy house plants. They have been developed through many years of cultivation into an extraordinary variety of forms and colorings. Many of them show color combinations of wonderful beauty. Begonias in general are divided into three great groups, namely, the tuberous-rooted begonias, the fibrous-rooted begonias, and the Rex begonias. The tuberous-rooted begonias have recently become very popular as bedding plants for outdoor gardens, their waxy flowers showing extreme brilliancy in coloring. They are most commonly propagated from seed. Fibrous-rooted begonias are the flowering kinds generally grown for winter blossoming as well as for the summer garden outdoors.

The Rex begonias may be propagated either from seed or from leaf cuttings. The seed is sown on the soil surface in shallow boxes in February or March developing in about ten days into tiny green seedlings, difficult to see without a reading glass. After some weeks of growth they become large enough to transplant into other boxes, and when an inch high may be transferred to two inch pots. For leaf cuttings mature leaves of good size are so cut that two of the principal veins meet at the bottom. These are planted in sand or in cutting garden like other slips, and will develop into good-sized plants after some months, being transferred, of course, to soil when the root system is sufficiently developed.

A good peaty soil or a soil composed largely of leaf mold and sand answers very well for begonias. They all require good drainage, and care should be taken not to give them too much water. It is also desirable to keep the Rex begonias in rather small pots for the first year of their development. They thrive best where they do not get direct sunshine.

The seeds of the different types of begonias are listed in the catalogues at from 10 to 25 cents per package. Any one who will try growing them for the first time will find it a most interesting experience.—Good Housekeeping.

FOR THE HOUSEKEEPER.

Wet tea leaves, hot or cold, are recommended as a cheap and convenient remedy for burns. They should be covered with a strip of cotton or linen and kept on for one or two hours.

Don't forget that a spoonful of sugar in mashed turnips or succotash adds much.

If you make baking powder fried cakes without cream, you keep them soft and moist if you place them in the jar at once and cover.

In preparing raw onions, pour boiling water over them after they are sliced, and let them stand an instant. Then pour on cold water, drain, and add sugar, salt and weak vinegar. These are very palatable and not nearly so strong as when untreated.

In a severe case of earache, before medical aid arrives, the following will often give relief: Put a soft bread-and-milk poultice into the ear and lay over it a bag of camomile flowers (dried) wrung out in hot water. The warmth and moisture gives a great relief and the patient is thereby often soothed to sleep, which is of much importance.

It has been demonstrated that when apples are dipped in a solution made by dissolving an ounce of salt in one gallon of water, after they are pared and sliced for evaporation, they retain their natural color, and are better in quality than fruit which has been subjected to sulphur fumes, though not as white and clear as when sulphur is used.

When soot gets scattered on carpets, sprinkle liberally with salt before sweeping, and not a trace of black will remain.

Rub spots on furniture that have turned white from heat or damp with camphor to restore the original color.

Common baking soda will polish silver beautifully. Rub with flannel as a finishing touch.

A clever housekeeper has discovered that potatoes may be baked just inside the furnace door in half the time required to bake them in the oven. But if the fire is very hot they need careful watching.—Boston Budget and Beacon.

Eggs Scrambled in Milk.

Heat one cup of milk, melt in it a teaspoonful of butter and stir into it six eggs which have been beaten just enough to mix the yolks and whites. Stir constantly until the eggs thicken, and as soon as you have a tolerably firm mixture salt to taste, add a table spoonful of minced parsley and serve.

Washing Day.

When the inevitable washing day comes round see that the necessary materials and utensils are at hand. If the soap, soda, blue or washing powders are out of reach much valuable time will be lost. Arrange the clothes for soaking the day before.

Taffeta Ruffles.

It is quite a fad to have the sleeves finished with several taffeta ruffles, and it is rather more practical than when the lace ruffles were so tremendously popular.

Untarnished Silverware.

It is claimed that if silverware, and especially knives, forks and spoons, are packed in dry flour, they will remain dry and untarnished.
