

At Rest.

Anna Allen Blattenburg was born in Wayne county, Ohio, March 14, 1843. Died in Forbes township, Marion school district, Holt county, Missouri, June 7, 1913, aged 70 years, 2 months and 23 days.

She was married to Elijah P. Allen in 1869 in Putnam county, Ohio, and moved to Holt county, Missouri, in 1871. She leaves one brother, Horace Blattenburg, living in Wooster, Ohio, and five children, David, at the home; Mrs. Mamie Laughlin, of Oklahoma; John, of Illinois; Horace, of Oregon, and Edward.

Her death occurred at the old home, about seven miles southeast of Oregon. She had been in failing health for some time, but the immediate cause of her death was bronchial pneumonia. Only two of her children were present at her funeral, the others could not get here in time. Her nephew, Frank Allen and wife, were present during the last hours of her life, doing all possible comfort and aid, and lovingly arranged for the funeral. Many beautiful flowers were placed upon the casket, emblems of her beautiful life.

Mother Allen was a devoted Christian; she and her husband united with the M. P. church at the Pleasant Hill church, near the Hiatt cemetery, where she was a faithful worker in the church and Sunday school, teaching the infant class for a number of years, and while she was faithful in church and Sunday school she was a blessing to her home and neighborhood, letting her light shine by her kindly, cheerful words and helpful deeds, thus by her Christian life winning the love and esteem of all who knew her. A short service was held at the home by the undersigned, attended by a sympathizing neighborhood, after which the remains were taken to Oregon followed by a number of the community and at Oregon were met by the G. A. R. veterans who as a vanguard proceeded to the cemetery, forming a hollow square about the grave beside that of her husband, where Rev. Clagett conducted a short, appropriate and impressive service.

The casket which was covered with many beautiful flowers was then lowered to its final resting place, beside her husband, to await the Resurrection Day.

Circuit Court

An adjourned term of our circuit court was held Tuesday of this week, with Hon. Edward Kelso, of Grant City, on the bench, who was called to the bench, Judge Ellison disqualifying himself.

The case of the State vs. Silas Smith, charged with carnal knowledge of female. Defendant plead guilty, and was given a fine of $100 and six months in jail.

State vs. Arvatus Roberts, grand larceny. The defendant was charged with stealing a hog from the pen of J. Hardin, a butcher at Maltland, and slaughtering the same. The case was heard by a jury, which failed to agree, and the jury was discharged. Roberts afterwards plead guilty and the court assessed his punishment at one year in the penitentiary, and he was released on parole.

Judge Kelso made a very favorable impression on the members of the bar, and those attending court. He disposed of the business "with promptness and dispatch."

From Prof. E. M. Brooks. ONE OF NATURE'S MARVELS

It is with pleasure that we give notice to the following, for it will be good news to the many, many friends of Prof. E. M. Brooks, wife and family, formerly of this city, the Professor having been superintendent of our public schools for three years:

OTTUMWA, IOWA, June 7, 1913. "The Board of Education at Ottumwa, after visiting my work in Lancaster, Missouri, unanimously elected me Principal of the new Ottumwa High school and assistant superintendent of city schools, at $300 per year the first year more than I was receiving, so I accepted. Ottumwa has 25,000 people and a splendid school system and is my native town. My father and mother and most of my relatives live here, so I am much at home.

While I regret to leave Missouri, I have enjoyed my work in that good state and leave there many friends whom I shall always remember kindly and pleasantly.

Mrs. Brooks and children join me in kindest regards to all of our friends."

"RESULTS" ALL THAT COUNT

Advancement in Business Office or Factory Seldom Has Much to Do With Personal Matters.

It frequently happens that when one receives a raise in wages or is otherwise advanced that one who is left behind may say of the promoted one, "He (or she) thinks he is better than I am."

Of course, it may be that the successful one only "thinks" he is better. It may be a case of conceit; it may be an unjust advance. Such things do happen. But more likely than not you as a critic overlook the very thing for which the other was advanced. It is possible, it is probable, that in the advancement all the characteristics that you do or do not like in the other were overlooked. The foreman, superintendent or employer who did the promoting may have never given thought to the lighter characteristics of the fortunate one. He simply measured results; he just got down to the "solid rocks" of the quantity and quality of goods made, delivered, packed, sold, or the letters written, accounts kept or whatever the work of the "better" one was.

You can save a great deal of time and hasten your own advancement by measuring success through results and not through personal peculiarities. Try to forget the personal popularity or unpopularity of one advanced, and to be equally successful find out what he or she does; do not bother about what he or she thinks he is—Exchange.

MADE IT MATTER OF RECORD

Mark Twain Bound to Satisfy His Better Half That He Had Obeyed Her Injunction.

Samuel L. Clemens immensely admired Grover Cleveland, also his young wife, and his visits to Washington were not infrequent. Mrs. Clemens was not always able to accompany him, and he has told us how once (it was his first visit after the president's marriage) she put a little note in the pocket of his evening waistcoat, which he would be sure to find when dressing, warning him about his department. Being presented to Mrs. Cleveland, he handed her a card on which he had written, "He didn't," and asked her to sign her name below those words. Mrs. Cleveland protested that she couldn't sign it unless she knew what it was he hadn't done; but he insisted, and she promised to sign it if he would tell her immediately afterward all about it. She signed, and he handed her Mrs. Clemens' note, which was very brief. It said:

"Don't wear your arctics in the White House."

Mrs. Cleveland summoned a messenger and had the card she had signed mailed at once to Mrs. Clemens at Hartford.—Albert Bigelow Paine, in Harper's Magazine.

You Don't Yawn When Sleepy.

A good, wide, open-mouthed yawn is a splendid thing for the whole body, says a hygienist. A yawn is nature's demand for rest. Some people think they yawn only because they are sleepy. But this is not so. You yawn because you are tired. You may be sleepy also, but that is not the real cause of your yawning. You are sleepy because you are tired, and you yawn because you are tired. Whenever you feel like yawning, just yawn. Don't try to suppress it. And, if you are where you can stretch at the same time that you yawn, just stretch and yawn. This is nature's way of stretching and relaxing the muscles. Indeed, if you are very tired but do not feel like yawning, there is nothing else that will rest you so quickly as to sit on a straight-backed chair, and, lifting the feet from the floor, push them out in front of you as far as possible, stretching the arms, putting the head back, opening the mouth wide, and making yourself yawn. These tense nerves will relax, the contracted muscles will stretch and the whole body will be rested.

Transformation of Reptiles from Water Dwellers to the Amphibian Stage is a Striking One.

Every one is familiar with the annual transformation of tadpoles into frogs. Little fishlike creatures, with fringed gills protruding from the sides of the neck, and a swimming tail, suddenly change into land animals, different in shape and color, and breathing air by means of their lungs.

Newts and salamanders go through a similar change, which, however, is a little less striking because the tail, although it loses its swimming web, persists in the adult condition. The Mexican axolotl, of which there are always a number of examples in the reptile house at the London Zoological Gardens, is a very large newt, black in color, with a pair of long-fringed gills at each side and a swimming tail, the web of which runs along the back toward the head. It lives entirely in water, and breeds freely in a condition which represents the larval stage of common newts.

This axolotl was for a long time believed to represent a type of amphibian which had not yet acquired the adult stage. More than 50 years ago, at the Jardin des Plantes, in Paris, it was reported that some of the axolotls had become transferred into a well-known Mexican salamander known as Amblystoma, and which was a typical land animal, without gills, with a lizard-like tail and terrestrial habit. The evidence was definite.

GOT ONE ON CHARLIE MANN

Well-Known Washington Official for Once Was Not as Wideawake as He Usually is Found.

Charles H. Mann is noted for his charity and gentility. But above these qualities is his pride in discharging his duties according to the letter and the spirit of the rules which govern him. He is the superintendent of the press gallery of the house of representatives in the national capitol, has a total of 21 silver hairs on his head, and is believed to have been the first white baby born in the District of Columbia.

Last summer charitable Charlie, on account of his wide acquaintance with the newspaper correspondents and editors throughout the country, was asked to guard the door leading to the newspaper men's section at the Baltimore convention, and to admit no one unless he exhibited a certain white card entitling the holder to a seat in that section.

After one of the evening recesses of the convention, when the correspondents were rushing back to their seats, a finely built, snappy-looking young man brushed by Charlie and left with him a white card. Later on Charlie looked at it and read all there was on it, which was as follows:

"Please make a small donation to buy me a wooden leg."
"And me," said Charlie, in great self-disgust, "a wooden head."—Popular Magazine.

Writer's Cramp.

Biological texts by scientists at the London hospital show that "writer's cramp" and other similar states of apparent muscular paralysis are actually due, not to the tring of the muscles, but to brain fog. It appears that the particular part of the brain which controls special combinations of muscle action, such as the movements of writing or the working of a telegraph key, tend to become more quickly exhausted in some individuals than others. Such exhaustion leads to a state in which the brain is actually unable to send out its necessary messages to the hands and fingers to write, tap a key, hold a violin bow and so forth. Furthermore, once the nerve cells, the "batteries" of the brain, get thoroughly run down it is not easy to restore their energy. Heretofore it has been supposed that all troubles of the kind were due simply to overting of the muscles concerned.

In the Days of Prosperity.

Discussing the high cost of living, Henry S. Oliphant, a Des Moines banker, said frankly at a banquet:

"The price of a commodity is what it will bring, and, when monopoly is once secured, that price mounts pretty high. Look at oil, look at meat."
"But all this spells prosperity. I said to be a trust magnate the other day."

"I suppose your wife goes to church to see what other women are wearing?"
"She used to," he replied, "in the foolish old days of competition, but she now goes to let other women see what she is wearing."

Precepts of a President.

The words which John Adams wrote to his wife years before he knew he would some day be the second president of the United States and that the son to which he referred would also some day be president, are good watchwords for any parent.

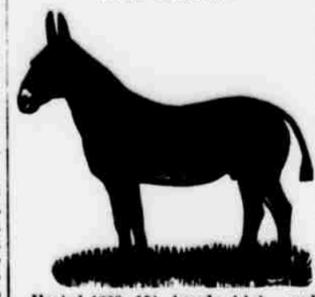

"The education of our children," he wrote, "is never out of my mind. Train them to virtue. Habituate them to industry, activity and spirit. Make them consider every vice as shameful and unmanly."

Great Familiarity.

W. Somerset Maugham, the English playwright, was praising in New York an historical drama that had failed. "Yet it was singularly accurate," said Mr. Maugham, regretfully. "As I told the author on the first night, he displayed as much familiarity with the subject as the king who kissed the parlor maid."

They are long and deep bodied, and are thirty inches tall and over; they have eight inch horns, they are cut out for 800 pound hogs. His spring boys will weigh 250 pounds and better, just in breeding condition; they are not fat, just big and smooth. He has them in excellent condition, which is the main part to produce good, strong vigorous pigs. He feeds them very little corn, hence they are not burnt out with corn, which would make them unfit for breeding. If you want something that gets big at half the age that the hogs we used to have and have now, get one of these Improved Big Type Poland-Chinas. His sows and Herd Roars are all recorded. They were carefully selected by him, regardless of price, in Iowa, and shipped right to Oregon. Call on or address, WM. ROSTOCK, Oregon, Mo.
