THIS STORY HAS A MORAL

Rockefeller Tells of Expert Who Was Fast Asleep When He Should Have Been Working.

John D. Rockefeller, on his eightieth birthday, told a story. "There was a young fellow a good many years ago," he said, "who lived on a farm. But this young fellow thought himself too clever for ordinary farm work, and so he persuaded his farmer daddy to send him off to college.

"The young fellow worked hard at college. Yes, he worked so hard there that after his graduation they made him an instructor at $18 a week. That made him proud, I tell you.

"Yes, he was so proud, so eager to get on, that now he took up the study of mineral oils and in ten years' time he became such a remarkable mineral oil sharp that they made him oil professor at $40 a week. How he chuckled at his old farmer dad then!

"Well, about that time the old man died and the oil professor wrote home that the farm was to be sold; so sold it was. There was a brook running through the farm and where the brook rose the old farmer had put a board to take the scum off the water, so that it would be clear and wholesome for the cattle to drink. The new owner sampled this scum and found that it was petroleum, the one thing that the clever professor knew all about.

"But the professor knew nothing about the petroleum on his father's farm. He had never got up early and taken the cattle out to drink. He had been fast asleep when he ought to have been working. He had never seen the board that took the scum off. "And so it came to pass that the oil professor sold for a few thousand dollars a farm that has produced to date something like $100,000,000 worth of oil."

"The extraordinary things of yesterday will be the ordinary things of tomorrow," remarked Justice Darling recently.

"Already I can picture little Tommy waking up in the night and crying: "Mother, I hear something on the roof!" and hearing mother answer: "Go to sleep, it's only your father talking off his shoes to sneak through the skylight. He's just come home from his club in his airship!"—Pearson's Weekly.

Business Picking Up There. During the 15-year period, 1904 to 1918, inclusive, only four American vessels called at Sourabaya, of an aggregate net tonnage of about 6,500. Seven American ships, aggregating over 15,000 tons net, called at Sourabaya for discharge and loading of cargo during the first six months of 1919.

The wreckage of the balloon "Wichita," in which Capt. Carl W. Damman and Lieut. Edward J. No trace of the two balloonists was found.

German troops under General Von der Goltz, together with Russians under Colonel Avaloff-Bermond, attacked the Letts, thirty kilometers from Riga and occupied Schlotsk, which is outside the demarcation line, according to a report issued by the Lettish bureau at Riga.
