

The Crops of 1867

Maine.—The Fall wheat looks well, and a good breadth of spring crops is to be sown.

Massachusetts.—The high price of flour has given an impetus to wheat raising again in New England, and not only was more winter wheat sown last fall than usual, but considerable spring wheat will be sown.

Rhode Island.—Unusually large crop both of grain and fruit are expected.

New York.—From every quarter the indications are cheering. The wheat gives promise of an abundant harvest, and the winter grains generally are looking remarkably forward, and of vigorous growth.

New Jersey.—The crops are represented as looking finely in all parts of the State, but peaches have sustained considerable injury in many places.

Pennsylvania.—The wheat crop in this State is expected to be a very large one this year, judging from the stalks, which are about 10 inches in height and very stout.

Delaware.—The prospect for a large crop of peaches, and for all small fruits is reported to be very flattering.

Maryland.—The prospect for good crops this summer and fall were never more encouraging. The wheat presents a fine appearance, and should no outward circumstance occur the yield will be large.

South Carolina.—The prospect for the coming year are very flattering, especially with the wheat crop, which has on every section grown vigorously and is expected to yield a bountiful harvest.

Georgia.—There are complaints in some quarters in regard to the cotton crop, the late heavy rains having washed away a good deal of the seed previously planted, and there being a great scarcity of cotton seed, brought about principally by the large amount of seed fed to stock, owing to the scarcity of other food; but most of those who have suffered in this particular are replanting their lands in corn.

Alabama.—An unusually large quantity of grain is being planted this season.

Mississippi.—More attention is being bestowed on the planting of corn than of cotton, and those farmers who sowed much wheat last fall have a flattering prospect for a large yield.

Tennessee.—The wheat crop looks very well everywhere; the area planted is unusually large, and experienced farmers give it as their opinion that, without any casualties between this time and harvest, the yield will be heavier to the acre than for some years past.

Illinois.—The prospect for wheat, of which a large area has been sown, were never better. The general tenor of the reports relative to winter wheat continue favorable. All over Central and Southern Illinois a glorious yield is anticipated.

Indiana.—The wheat crop throughout the State is most promising, and the season is now so much advanced that further injury cannot result from cold weather.

Ohio.—The winter wheat, almost universally, is looking better than for several years past. The winter has been cold, but the fall sowings have been protected by the heavy snows.

Michigan.—The accounts from different parts of the country all unite in the belief that the prospects are unusually good. Wheat looks green and vigorous, and there is every prospect of a bounteous yield.

Wisconsin.—The Winter has a fresh and vigorous appearance, the Winter having been favorable for fall sown wheat.—It is thought that the breadth of land in the State sown to wheat will be one third larger than ever before put in.

Iowa.—The Winter wheat is reported in good condition, and promising at least an average yield. The prospects for fruit, with the exception of peaches, is good.

Minnesota.—There is a scarcity of wheat. Preparations are making to plant a large area during the present season.

Kansas.—In the southern portion of the State unusually large crops of wheat and corn are expected.

Nebraska.—From all accounts there will be twice the amount of wheat sown this year than that there was last. There is a rapid increase taking place in the agricultural products of the State.

California.—The grain crops are generally in a fine condition, and the prospects are excellent. A much greater breadth of land has been sown in wheat than last year. California wheat exports have been maintained with great regularity, and are likely so to continue up to the gathering in of the next harvest.

Some of Miser Tom Kelly's Gold Discovered.

We learn that the heirs of the late Tom Kelly were rewarded in their search for his buried gold, yesterday, by finding in the ground beneath his hut between four and five thousand dollars of the precious coin. Of course more will be found sooner or later.

Strict watch is kept on the premises, and none but heirs are allowed to dig for the hidden treasure.—Dubuque Times.

Reign of Terror.

A reign of terror exists in Franklin county, caused by Brownlow's militia.—The citizens held a meeting at Winchester, Wednesday night, at which it was reported that the militia had taken a man named Brown and shot him dead; and also, had shot at another citizen.

Many were hiding to avoid being killed. The President has been petitioned to protect the lives and property of the people. In the event of his failing to do this, the people are recommended to protect themselves.

Dull Times in New York.

The New York Times, remarking on the diminution of the revenue returns, says: "The tide is turning. Business is dull—prices are so exorbitant that labor, which commands enormous wages, can scarcely earn a living—the profits of all branches of industry have fallen off, and everybody begins to feel comparatively poor."
