A Dutchman's Narrow Escape.

Herman Schuster, of St. Louis, awoke the other morning to find himself dead. That is to say, the newspapers said he was dead and that his body was at that moment at the morgue. Mr. Schuster went to the place mentioned, and there, sure enough, found himself laid out on a slab, dead as anybody could wish to be. The forehead of the corpse was exactly like his own. The moustache likewise. The body wouldn't vary in weight five pounds from the weight of his own. The clothes of the inanimate person were as much his own as if he had worn them himself. "Vot ish de color of his eyes?" asked Herman of Dr. Ainhough. The doctor turned up the corpse's eyelids and found that the eyes were blue. "Dot ish petter," said Herman, with a long sigh of relief. "Dot ish not mine body. Dose eyes is blue and mine is black. Gott in Himmel! what a narrow eshoape—vot a glose gall dose vas!" It was the most remarkable case of mistaken identity that St. Louis has had in years.

A practical joker, a prudent man withal, had gone to a cafe and ordered a three masted schooner of beer, when a friend appears at the door and beckons to him to go out for a minute. The intending drinker is afraid that in this absence some one may get away with the liquid, when a happy thought strikes him, and he raps around the handle of the mug a scrap of paper inscribed: "I have spit in this!" With a light heart he hastens to the door, communicates with his friend, and returns to find written in another hand beneath his warning: "So have I."

"Och, Jamie, did ye never hear uv my great spache afore the Hibernian Society?"

"No, Pat, how should I? for sure I was not on the ground?"

"Well, Jamie, you see I was called upon by the Hibernian Society for a spache; and, be jabers, I rose with the intusiasmic sheers of thousands, with me heart overflowing with gratitude, and me eyes filled with tears, and divil a word did I spake!"

"Injured Burglar" writes as follows to a Saratoga newspaper. "Mr. Editor: In reading your account of the burglary at Knowe's boarding house, on Washington street, you said I overlooked a lady's diamonds worth thousands. The statement is incorrect, I saw, examined and left them—they were paste. Your account is no compliment to me."

At a popular store famous for the prompt and polite attention of the clerks a woman of perhaps thirty years was looking at goods, when a young man stepped toward her and asked: "Is any one waiting upon you?" "Why, what a question! I've been married these ten years."

A lady at sea, full of delicate apprehension in a gale of wind, cried out among other pretty exclamations: "We shall go to the bottom; mercy on us; how my head swims!" "Madam, never fear," said one of the sailors; "you can never go to the bottom while your head swims."

"Come, pa," said a youngster just home from school, "how many peas are there in a pint?" "How can anybody tell that, you foolish boy?" "I can, every time. If you don't believe it, try me." "Well, how many are there, then?" "Just one p in every pint, pa."

A French priest recently gave out an announcement as follows: "If it rains in the morning the procession will take place in the afternoon; and if it rains in the afternoon the procession will take place in the morning."

An old lady going to a chandler's for a farthing candle, and, being told that it was raised to a half-penny on account of the Russian war, exclaimed: "Bad luck to them! And do they fight by candle-light?"

Sam, you are not honest. Why do you put all the good peaches on the top of the measure and the little ones below?" "Same reason, sah, dat makes de front of your house all marble and de back gate chiefly sloop-bar", sah."

"What are you about?" angrily exclaimed a country editor the other day to his wife, who was touching up her complexion before the mirror. "Only getting up my 'patent outside,' dear," was the reply.
