Burlington went to the dogs for a few days this week. But they were nice, respectable dogs, however.

Referring to the granite industry, the Vergennes Enterprise ventures the opinion that there will be a "horse race between Hardwick and Barre in the near future." All right, Mr. Enterprise, you give the word "go" and Barre will be ready, besides giving Hardwick a start around to the first quarter.

That useless animal, the hedghog, is having a hard time of it in Vermont since the legislators encouraged a raid on its kind. At an off season of the year, hunting hedghogs for the bounty furnishes a lucrative occupation for the Vermont farmer boy and he has not been slow in taking advantage of the opportunity to turn hedghogs into money. If the animals continue in equal numbers the hunting of them will prove a very valuable adjunct to the farmer's income.

President Roosevelt does not seem to mind all this talk about a candidate who will vainly try to carry the Democratic standard to victory next election, but continues his triumphal tour through the western states, all the time making friends and adding votes to his support. He has the confidence born of assured victory, and what he is doing now is only a little by-play to strengthen himself in popular favor. At this stage of the contest the Democratic party can't raise a candidate to defeat him.

The Randolph Herald and News, which has been opposed to the license law and still appears to be fairly strong in its opposition, takes pleasure in certain classes of drunk have disappeared during the past few weeks and philosophizes as follows: "Anyhow, the jamaica ginger and witch hazel drinks have disappeared altogether. For this relief thanks—a sentiment shared by the darky who said, when by accident he whacked off his big toe with a hoe, 'Dar, Ah hain't don't got to razer mah cohns no moah.'"

Although the plan has been in vogue in the western states, the servant girls' union is a decided novelty in the East, and the inception of such a union in Holyoke, Mass., is causing no end of a stir. It will be something decidedly new to have a house placed on the "unfair" list with all its attendant inconveniences, to have the servant girl throw down her utensils when the agreement between herself and the lady of the house is violated and to pass through all the varied experiences connected with other unions. However, such matters are only incidental. The main question at issue, it seems to us, is the raising of the minimum pay of those servant girls from a mere pittance to a fair compensation for their labor. And we can scarcely blame the kitchen maids, the chamber maids, the table girls and the nurse girls for this attempt to better their condition. To be compelled to do the drudgery of housework, including all the above departments, for the sum of $1.75 per week, or 25 cents per day, comes the nearest to paying for the privilege of working of any branch of labor that comes to mind just at present. It will be argued, of course, that the servant girls get their "keep." But add that in with the magnificent stipend of $1.75 per week and see what the grand total is. Then figure out if the labor is worth the pay and vice versa. No, the work of keeping house for somebody else may have its compensations, but it is not a dream of unalloyed pleasure. We cannot blame the servant girls of Holyoke.

A sword for Real Admiral C. E. Clark, who commanded the battleship Oregon in the battle of Santiago, and a tea set for Mrs. Clark, have been sent to Philadelphia from Portland, Ore. The testimonials are presented by the citizens of Oregon in memory of the service of the admiral in the Spanish war. It was expected that Admiral Clark would go to Portland with President Roosevelt and at that time receive the sword, but his health would not permit of his making the journey.

Match Box Warnings.

Just now, when so much is heard of the agitation against expectation in the streets, it is interesting to learn that the Argentine health department has experimentally arranged to have comprehensive instructions printed on the labels of over 8,000,000 match boxes explaining how the spread of tuberculosis might be prevented.

A Voice From the Plains.
 Hello, Teddy! Glad to see ye. Sounds familiar like I know;
 Or to call ye "Mr. President," but kaint quite make it so.
 Kaint see whar ye've changed partick'ler—that is, speakin' as a man—
 P'raps a few more lines o' worry an' a Quite a change frim ridin' bronchos to a train o' palace cars;
 Mebbe not as much o' joltin'; don't see quite as many stars.
 When yer cayuse gets onse'less, 'cause ye've climbed him up too fur,
 Er ye've ketcht him too fur backar'd 'ith the rowel o' yer spur.

Thar's the scent o' springtime's freshness whar the prairie's gittin' green,
 An' th' breeze that tips th' hilltops is amazin' pure an' keen;
 Thar's a spongy, springy feelin' t' th' turf that sings a song
 'ith a 'beat' o' yer pony's hoofs th' while he 'lopes' long.
 Ye're a-breathin' health an' happiness, th' ain't a tinge o' care
 In th' freedom o' th' prairies; ye're a monarch thar, fer fair.
 Up th' creek an' down th' valleys; why, I look at ye an' see
 Them very prairie trails, an' ye're a-ridin' thar with me.

Trottin' down th' trail t' water, 'long 'bout noontime, I allow,
 For my belt is gittin' looser—thar's a cussed orn'y cow
 Thar's breakin' back t' cover; head 'er, Teddy, steady, thar;
 Rope th' cussed, stubborn critter, an' we'll tie her down somewhar;
 Watch that trail thar, up th' valley Washout? Over it o' course.
 Jes' drop yer lines, my pardner, so, an' leave it t' yer horse.
 Don' shove thar, Mr. Officer. No harm done. 'Waal, I swear,
 I thought we was range ridin' an' th' president was thar.

Waal, I s'pose ye're too almighty busy fer a gallop now.
 Fer a rascal with may'rick er t' head an' orn'y cow;
 T' ride a buakin' broncho 'ith a bur beneath his tail
 Er t' feel yer pulses tingle when a big buck jumps th' trail;
 But I kind o' sort o' wonder if th' scent o' prairie air.
 With a 'lope across th' country wouldn't tone ye up, fer fair,
 An' I got a speakin' notion that ye'd halt like t' be free
 Fer a day er two t' rough on th' ranges thar with me!
