The general public is watching nowadays to see if the employees of the Chicago hotels and restaurants, who are now out on a strike, are good waiters.

For those who have any appreciation of nature it is almost worth the price of the big drouth to see the deepness of the green that is spread out over the landscape as the result of the recent rain.

It is now King Peter Karageorgevitch of Servia. If you cannot pronounce the name call him King Peter. He was elected to the place yesterday by the Servian house and senate. It is interesting to note that King Peter did not turn down the crown that was offered him, despite the report that he declared he would not accept the throne unless the assassins of King Alexander were killed. Evidently some press agent put words that were too worthy of the man in the mouth of the new king. There was a salvo of applause waiting for the man if he had stood by the declaration with which he was credited, even if he were not rewarded with the crown of Servia. Evidently the new king holds character and honor in small proportion as compared with the crown.

The three Shamrocks are now on this side of the water and the latest one of the bunch will soon be tuned up for some trial races. Those who have had the privilege of seeing the latest creation of Fife declare that she is far and away ahead of the other boats that bear the name, that she is sleeker and better proportioned. Add to these things, the fact that her captain has unbounded confidence in the ability of his boat, and we have some interest centered in the coming contest. The new Shamrock has beaten the first one of that name and the English experts figure that the Shamrock I is a faster boat than our own Columbia. Seeing that the Shamrock I has been beaten easily by the new boat it is figured that the Reliance, admittedly faster than the Columbia, is in about the same class as Shamrock III. However sanguine as the Britishers are, we are inclined to the belief that they have underrated the cup defender on this side.

It has been argued by supporters of the license law in this state, and consistently denied by opponents of the law, that the increase in the number of arrests for intoxication is due in a great part to a more strict enforcement of the law charging the arrest of intoxicated persons. Those who laugh at such an argument maintain that the conditions must have changed very materially for the worse through the change in the law governing liquor selling, that the number of intoxicated persons should be so much larger now than formerly. They base their belief on the court records. For those persons who do not credit the fact that Vermont's increase of drunks is due in large part to a more strict interpretation of the law, we point out some statistics in the city of Boston. In one day's time, from last Saturday at 8 a. m. to Sunday at 8 a. m. the Boston police registered a total of 265 arrests for intoxication. One week before that, for the corresponding time, there were one half that number of arrests. Two weeks before, for the same time, there were only 21 arrests, or 244 less than two weeks later. There was no change for the worse in the conditions there, and there were undoubtedly as many intoxicated men two weeks ago on Boston's streets as there were last week. The difference in the court record was due to a stricter enforcement. In this state, some people look at the court records now and jump at the conclusion that the license law is responsible for the increase. Of such people, particularly in this city, the Times asks that they sit down and candidly discuss with themselves whether they saw any more intoxicated people on the streets of the city last Saturday night than they did two months or a year ago, and let them in as candid a manner weigh the causes of the increase in the court record, bearing in mind that a new law carries with it a more strict enforcement, and that the police have been especially enjoined to clean up the drunks.

ABOUT THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gleaned From Our Exchanges.

Bennington jail, intended to hold eight persons, now has within its walls 14 prisoners. All are charged with state's prison crimes except three.

Miss Ida Niles of Morrisville left this morning for New York, where she will begin rehearsals for the production of "The Singing Girl," in which she has secured the contralto role of Lady Maria for the coming season.

Eugene Shea of Bennington came near losing his life Saturday. While eating supper with the family, a piece of meat lodged in his throat, and neither he nor anyone present could remove it. A physician was hurriedly sent for and succeeded in getting it out just in time to save him.

The 25th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Frank P. Houston of Northfield was celebrated on Saturday evening by a few relatives and neighbors calling to remind them of the occasion which they had evidently forgotten, judging from the surprise shown in their faces.

Miss Lulu F. Morse, a St. Johnsbury young woman who has just been graduated from the Hartford Theological seminary, has received the degree of master of sacred theology from that institution, and immediately received an appointment as teacher in the Biblical department at Mount Holyoke college.

The corner stone of the Catholic Old Ladies' Home of Rutland was laid Saturday afternoon, ceremonies being private. The home was blessed by the Rev. T. J. Gaffney, rector of St. Peter's church. It is expected the building will be completed November 1. Lorette Home will be the name of the institution.

A Cry For Deliverance.
 From food and fire
 And stormy fortune dire,
 Good Lord, deliver!
 The angry lightnings shroud,
 Far canopied in cloud,
 Silence the thunders loud;
 Good Lord, deliver!

But the priest dies at the altar
 While the autisms heavenward float;
 The wolves have stormed the temple,
 And their fangs are at his throat!
 And the light is blotted at night,
 And the dove is slain in flight,
 And where the wild storm sings
 Pence droops her wounded wings;
 Good Lord, deliver!

Thou art our strength, our God,
 The life of sea and sod;
 Good Lord, deliver!
 Give peace her laurel crown;
 Hate in the dark seas drown;
 Trample the dragon down;
 Good Lord, deliver!

But the sea is strong and mighty
 Where Jehovah's wrath is shed,
 And it rends the rocks of refuge,
 And it gives not back its dead,
 And from life's storm whelmed bark
 A wild cry cleaves the dark;
 The helpless of the foam,
 Lost near the lights of home;
 Good Lord, deliver us!

The Case.
 I'm suing in the court of love
 To win a maiden's hand,
 And Cupid has subpoenaed me;
 So I must take the stand.
 I witness that she blessed me once

 The jury brings its verdict in
 And asks the case dismissed.
 The judge decides that as a fine
 Another kiss will do,
 You see, the fair defendant is
 The judge and jury too.

PLAN TO AID AUTHORS.

Proposed Reform For Reducing Postage on Manuscripts.

The Society of American Authors will urge upon the next session of congress the justice of permitting authors' manuscripts to pass through the mails at the rate of two ounces for a cent, says the New York Mail and Express. This rate already prevails in European countries, and also between countries belonging to the Universal Postal union.

This anomaly therefore exists in the United States: The receipts of manuscripts from abroad and the dispatch of manuscripts from the most remote interior towns to the most remote points abroad for a postage four times less than would be charged for carrying the same manuscripts from one post office to another in the United States. The proposed reform affects the interests of newspaper men, ministers and authors of all degrees.

The Baby Giraffe.
 A giraffe assumes a high position immediately after his birth. At that time he measures six feet from his hoofs to the top of his head.

Injustice.
 We watch with eager longing for the robin in the spring,
 And we strain our ears to hear his primal note,
 Our hearts are filled with gladness when at last we hear him sing,
 And the music thrills us ripping from his throat.
 We like to hear the twitter of the sparrows in the trees,
 And the orioles are welcome when they come,
 And the bluebird charms us, swinging in the tree top in the breeze,
 But we hate to hear the first mosquito hum!

It is rank discrimination, for the skeeter gives her best,
 And she bravely sings the only song she knows,
 And it isn't right to blame her if she robs us of our rest
 When we're settled to enjoy a quiet doze.
 She has the best intentions, and she's not at all to blame,
 If her voice is not as musical as some,
 But there's really no use talking, she'll get snapped at, just the same,
 For we hate to hear the first mosquito hum!

SERVIA'S NEW MONARCH.
 As a Paris Art Student He Was Picturesque and Harmless.
 Tall, thick, dark, a Cossack in aspect, Peter Karageorgevitch, the new king of Servia, is a familiar figure to Americans who have studied art and letters in Paris, says Henri Pene Du Bois in the New York Evening Journal. He was for years an art student, but as he learned little it is probable that he adopted that profession for the pleasure of doing nothing.
 As a student of painting he went to the Quat'-Z-Arts hall; as a student of medicine he went to the medical students' hall; as a writer of odd, barbarous poems for an ephemeral review he went to the Cafe d'Harcourt. He was picturesque and harmless. As a pretender to the throne of Servia he made a good impression.
 The faithful to his family that came to Paris paid court to him without a doubt of his earnest desire to be king. His classmates were sure that nothing would embarrass him so much as a revolution to make his accession possible.
 He pretended to be a pretender, his Parisian acquaintances thought. There was no sign of his having the slightest popularity among them. He attained distinction in nothing. Alphonse Daudet, whose bohemiaism was captivated by the personalities of the pretenders to thrones of Europe, made no mention in his "Kings in Exile" of Karageorgevitch.

Poles' Novel Prayer.
 In Poland the patriots are now endeavoring to popularize the following curious version of the Lord's Prayer: "Our Father, who art in heaven, restore to us the kingdom of Poland. Deliver us from slavery. Give us this day our daily bread, but not steeped in blood and poisoned through the wickedness of our enemies. Pardon us for the sins which are engraved on our swords. Suffer us not to fall into the temptation of becoming traitors to Poland and deliver us from the domination of a foreign power, since that is our worst evil!"
 Thousands of Poles have learned this prayer by heart and invariably use it instead of the old and familiar version.

A Novel Celebration.
 The Antislavery league of Indiana is planning a most novel celebration of the Fourth of July, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. Its members are to turn themselves for the time being into detectives and report every violation of the liquor law in every town in the state where there is a celebration. Temperance mass meetings will be held in conjunction with the patriotic meetings. Special performances of "Ten Nights in a Barroom" will be given in a dozen or more towns, and committees will beset all meetings and like to get the visitors to sign pledges to promise to do all in their power to deprive saloons of their license and to fight the demon rum generally.

New Stories About the Kaiser.
 An anecdote about the kaiser is reported from Metz, says the New York Commercial Advertiser. When he was told at the railway station that 2,000 girls in the costume of the country awaited his arrival he asked the official who notified him of this fact if he must kiss them all. To the burgomaster he said, "See that they all become worthy mothers of soldiers." During a ride which the kaiser made in the neighborhood he asked his suit if it were not possible to find a grasshopper anywhere. After some search a grasshopper was found, which was carefully packed in cardboard at the kaiser's request and sent as an imperial present to the regiment of fusiliers of the guard stationed at Potsdam. The explanation is that this regiment is particularly known as the Grasshoppers.

The Style of a "Dorothy Dodd"
 Let us assume that your Shoes fit you. Now what next? What is most important? Unquestionably style. Demand that a Shoe shall possess style. If it has style and little else, you want it. If it has not style, but everything else, you don't want it. The Style of a "Dorothy Dodd" is unique. It cannot be duplicated by any other maker, because the "Dorothy Dodd" is a totally different construction from any other ladies' Shoe made. It holds the foot firmly at the waist—that's the instep—and prevents the toes from slipping forward, thus giving a correct poise in walking. Yet it makes the foot look nearly a whole size smaller. That's curious, and you won't believe it till you see it. Just for once try the Style of a "Dorothy Dodd." Sincerely yours,
