Sir Thomas says let the best boat win, but if that boat is not the Samrook III he will be back again with another in another year. He's going to keep after the "blossoming mug" until he gets it.

Jesse Walden, writing in the Swanton Courier, says, "A glance at the timetable of the 'through New York train' does not disclose any great advantage to the traveling public who may desire to save time en route. This train occupies six hours and a half between St. Albans and White River Junction, a distance of 120 miles, a rate of about 19 miles an hour." What does Jesse expect? With the equipment the road possesses it is doing the best it can, and the Grand Trunk does not seem to desire to improve the equipment. He ought to be thankful that there is a New York train over the Central.

Says an exchange: "The post office scandals are to be thoroughly investigated, and the rascals brought to the surface. The President has assumed personal supervision of the work and will not rest until the corruption has been eradicated and the official atmosphere purified. The fact that it is proving a bigger task than was contemplated shows that the discoveries were timely and that had not the expose come as it did, the disease might have spread to many other branches of the service. Public opinion indorses the President for his activity in uncovering the post office scandal and will endorse him to the end."
 The President is doing his duty. No special credit is due him for that. He could not do anything less without becoming a party to the rascality. The pity of the whole affair is that there could be so many dishonest persons in so high positions.

Napoleon and Cards.
 Napoleon cared little for cards and was no gambler. He would play sometimes with his mother, and one game is recorded with her on the island of Elba in 1814, when the somewhat avuncular dame refused to pay the money she had lost, and Napoleon called out loudly, "Pay your debts, madam; pay your debts!"

Mahogany Trees.
 In cutting a mahogany tree a platform must first be erected, and the tree is cut some ten feet from the ground. Heavy, thorny buttresses tanke the cutting of the trunk nearer the ground an impossibility.

Pork and Cancer.
 Many English doctors are convinced that the eating of pigs' flesh in different forms is greatly responsible for the increase of cancer. They point out that it is most common among the poor, whose chief meat is that of pigs, while the disease is extremely rare among the Jews.

Paper Mills.
 The earliest European paper mills were located at Fabriano, in Italy, in 1150. The Arabs first brought the secret of paper making to Europe, they themselves having learned it from Chinese prisoners of war.

ABOUT THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gleaned From Our Exchanges.

Benjamin E. Warner celebrated his 83d birthday with friends at the home of his son, C. B. Warner, of Front street, Burlington.

Word was received last evening by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Auld of Burlington that the condition of their son, Paymaster G. P. Auld, who has been critically ill at San Juan, Porto Rico, is better. Mr. Auld has been granted sick leave and will come to Burlington as soon as he is able.

At the annual corporation dinner of the University of Vermont, President Buckingham announced that, as the result of the decision to raise a $1,000,000 centennial fund to commemorate the hundredth anniversary of the university next year, $50,000 had been pledged by Frederic Billings of Woodstock, and that J. H. Converse of Philadelphia had announced that he would give $50,000, or $5,000 for every $100,000 raised.

W. M. Mead, a farmer living on the West Proctor road, Monday completed his first crop of haying. Mr. Mead has installed in his barn what is called a green-grass silo, the only one of its kind in the United States. He experimented with this silo a year ago and it proved a success. The rainy weather which is now prevailing makes it much better for this process of making hay. He expects to cut his second crop of hay in about a month.

E. W. Thompson has resigned his position as assistant general passenger agent of the Rock Island railway for the lines west of the Missouri river, to take a position with the National Life Insurance company of Vermont. Mr. Thompson has been with the Rock Island railway since 1884, and is one of the best known railroad men in the west. He began as New England passenger agent of the Rock Island in Boston, and afterwards was general excursion agent of the company in Chicago. In 1898 he was appointed assistant general passenger agent, which position he has held ever since.

Dwarf Trees.

A French writer explains that when the Japanese grow dwarf trees they simply do what nature herself does in bleak shores, high mountains and other barren spots.

Ancient Cinerary Urn.

Some workmen while digging gravel at Wenden, Saffron-Walden, England, unearthed a very rudely decorated cinerary urn containing a quantity of dark earth mixed apparently with the cremated remains of a human being. The urn is probably 2,000 years old and of Celtic origin.

JINGLES AND JESTS.

Another.
 There was a little girl,
 And she had a little curl
 Just where the maddens had it in the fable.
 It hung there through the day,
 But I've heard her brother say
 That at night its place was on her dressing table.
 —New York Times.

Too Much Mental Effort.
 "So you don't like dialect stories?"
 "Not much. The trouble with dialect is that after you have managed to spell it out you forget what the story was about."
 —Washington Post.

Phantom.
 Just when the sun is peeping o'er the scene
 The leechman plods his way from door to door,
 And when you go to find the lump, I ween,
 You see a drop of water; nothing more.
 —Washington Star.

Reminder.
 The waiter (gently hinting)—Excuse me, but you've forgotten something.
 The Guest—Indeed? Well, please give it to me, my honest fellow.—Kansas City Independent.

Sublime Concert.

"Ah, me! How beautiful is nature! And yet, were it not for me, no one would ever know it."
 —San Francisco Examiner.

GOWN GOSSIP.

A faddish handkerchief has a little pocket in one corner with a buttoned flap to hold ear fare.

Bishop tab stock collars are made of two fine embroidered handkerchiefs, one forming the collar and the other plaited to the center to make the tab.

Long or short, plain or plaited, one's skirts must flare at the hem. Special underskirts are designed to wear with walking skirts that this flare may be effected.

From iron frills and ruffles are not seen on the handsomest petticoats, their places being usurped by shaped volants, which are a mass of lace medallions and embroidery.

A new summer collar of stiff linen is a turnover, the usual height in the back, but sloping gradually to half that width in the front. It is very cool. Stout women will especially appreciate this collar.

The wide mourning hats, with their graceful veils of net bordered with crape, are an improvement on the close bonnet swathed in crape. The hats are much cooler, generally cheaper and are, as a rule, becoming.—New York Post.

VAGABOND BOB.

Dog's Gallant Rescue of a Babe in Kansas City's Flood.

(Based on an incident of the Kansas City Flood.)
 Bob was a vagabond. If you had seen The limp of his legs and the lay of his fur,
 His gaunt, yellow body, disgracefully lean,
 You had vowed he was only a vagabond
 — cur.
 In alleys and back yards he skinned for food,
 Receiving full often a curse in its stead;
 Hungry and shelterless, surely no good.
 What does it matter when all is said?
 Canine or human, what matter? I say,
 Shove them and cuff them and kick them along.
 The vagabond outlaws that get in our way—
 Place for the mighty and room for the strong!

The yellow Missouri that leaps from his Deep lit in the mountains and onward
 is sped,
 O'er limitless plains and by cities to where
 To the bright Mississippi his waters are led:
 The yellow Missouri, grown mad in his might,
 Swept aside every barrier that stood in his way
 And stumbled: "Oho! I am king! I delight
 In ruin I work and in men that I slay."
 And his torrent swept down on a world unaware,
 And women and children and men were his prey,
 And Death was his brother, who walked everywhere,
 And the faces of mortals were white with dismay.

A babe in a cradle was rocked to and fro,
 Tossed hither and thither mid foam
 and wreck,
 With only grim Death and the angels to know.
 A mariner we on a pitiful deck,
 With only grim Death and the angels?
 Not so.

Now, Vagabond Bob, now, outcast, what know?
 The chasm is wide by the mad current torn,
 And rescue's a bark with Death at the prow,
 Still over the waters that walling is borne.

I think that he shivered one moment in dread,
 I think that he doubted ere outward he sprang,
 See now in the current the vagabond
 head,
 The debris, the foam, the wreckage
 among,
 Still onward and onward, through eddy
 and swirl, Bucked downward, tossed upward, the cradle his goal;
 In a chaos of waters with maddest
 whirl,
 And it's oh, to be free, like a dog sans a soul!

He reached her! He saved her! No mortal had known
 How long was the struggle, how cruelly hard,
 But the rescuers found them, the two wail alone,
 And the babe was asleep, and Bob was on guard.

Only a vagabond! So let it be.
 The world's grim judgment, and who may dispute?
 For he that is law to you and to me,
 And his outcasts are many or human or brute,
 But I hope up above, when the problem is solved
 At which our wisecracks now murmur,
 "Alas!"
 When the cold earth has finally whirled and revolved,
 We may find there is somewhere a vagabond Whose every outcast shall clearly be taught
 The full, final meaning of heartache and throeb,
 And, if I am right in this guess, I have thought!
 Somewhere near the head will be Vagabond Bob,
 —Alfred J. Waterhouse in New York Times.
