STATE LINES.

Florida has started the breeding of pelicans. Now let Louisiana breed storks—the states need them.—Birmingham Ledger.

<Kansas recovers in short order. The harvest is described as "under way." A month ago it was under water.—Kansas City Star.

Now a Nice Fad.

Have you seen a woman on a street car or train take two white mice out of an air filled reticule, caress them fondly and then kiss them? It's a fact. Saw one of them on a Pennsylvania train the other day, says a writer in the New York Press. Her husband was with her, but the wee small pets occupied all her attention. The reticule had little air openings in the sides, with a rubber tube attachment, through which occasionally fresh air was blown, for the day was sultry and wee mouse might suffocate. "Hubby" was utilized to blow in the air. Ye gods! He looked as such a husband might be considered to be—bumped and thoroughly subdued. Occasionally the woman would open the reticule, when the little white mice would clamber out over the top. Is this to be a new fad? What next?

Washing Bees, Boston's New Fad.

Boston's latest fad is the "washing bee," says the Pittsburg Dispatch. This unique form of entertainment is arranged by people in the neighborhood gathering their washes in a big laundry and washing, drying and ironing the clothing themselves instead of depending upon servants or the uncertain "wash lady." Several such parties have been organized lately for charitable purposes instead of the usual "sewing bee" or "baked bean supper."

A Remarkable Echo.

At the castle of Simonetta, Italy, there is an angle in the building which re-echoes a pistol shot sixty-one times. The echoed reports from twenty-one to thirty-three are always louder than the report of the shot itself.

Meerschaum Pipes.

The practice sometimes indulged in by smokers of soaking a meerschaum in hot water, milk or steaming it is altogether wrong. It spoils the meerschaum and ruins the color.
