The Montpelier Journal of yesterday said: The battle of Cedar Creek was reenacted before the eyes of those who were fortunate enough to be at the State House this morning. John McLaughlin of Barre was showing four of his nieces, the Misses Atkinson of Toronto, Can., through the Capitol. When he reached the large reception room where hangs the large painting of the battle of Cedar Creek, his eye lighted up. Stepping near to the canvas he pointed to the white horse, from which a wounded major had just fallen, and said, "Right there is where we were stationed on the morning of that fight. I well remember seeing that man carried through our lines on a blanket."
