THE FARMERS HAVE A CHAMPION.

The inaugural address as delivered by Gov. Charles J. Bell before the joint assembly of the House and Senate yesterday afternoon was a plain, every day statement from a person who, through actual contact with the conditions, has formed his own opinions of the needs of the commonwealth and who expresses them in the simplest language possible. The entire address is stripped of the verbiage which tends to cloud the subjects under discussion. It was to the point. It is considered in general a sensible utterance, although there are parts of it which may differ from the opinions of some people in the state. As was expected the message reveals the man, or rather his occupation. Gov. Bell is a farmer, one of those farmers who till the soil on a scientific plan. If one knew nothing of the man who wrote the message he would most clearly discern his occupation through a perusal of the message. The undercurrent of devotion to the "farmer class" runs through it from start to finish. The needs of Vermont are considered from that standpoint. And it is not remarkable that Gov. Bell should have taken that position. Born and raised on a Vermont farm, and engaged all his life in agricultural pursuits or branches closely allied thereto, there is little wonder that he should look at his state through the eyes of one who is greatly interested in the development of that branch of the state's industries. The great mass of people in Vermont who are closely allied to the craft have a stalwart champion in the chief executive's chair.

The invitation to Gov. Hatchelder of the neighboring state of New Hampshire to participate in Vermont's inaugural was a happy thought. And it was particularly fitting that the "granger" of the Granite State should congratulate the "granger" of the Green Mountain State.

It is to be hoped that the Vermont legislators will have overcome the "homesick feeling" next week and come back prepared to settle down to solid work.

CURRENT COMMENT.

What the Press of the State and Country is Talking About.

Gov. McCullough's Message.
Governor McCullough's retiring message is in many respects a strong document. Of course, from the nature of circumstances, it is largely a review of principal events in his two-years' term, but there are independent suggestions and recommendations in the paper deserving careful attention.—St. Albans Messenger.

The figures given by Governor McCullough in his valedictory in another column, when compared with those given in Governor Stickney's retiring message in 1903, show that the expenses of the state government during the past two years, have increased at the rate of nearly a hundred thousand dollars a year.—Free Press.

Governor McCullough's message, delivered to the General Assembly today, is on the whole a good one, as messages go. He makes a plain and concise statement of the business of the State during his term of office, and makes several good suggestions relative to things to be done in the future. The main fault to be found with it is that it is too much a reminder that many of these things should have been done during his term of office.—Montpelier Journal.

Governor's Bell's Message.

Governor Bell's message is commendable both as to brevity and as to substance.—Free Press.

Governor Bell's inaugural message is comparatively short, as such messages go, is direct in style, and easy reading. That the new administration regards itself as especially commissioned by the recent campaign to champion the interests of the farmers and the Grange is apparent throughout the document, although the governor's references to the science of husbandry are in general terms and unaccompanied by specific recommendations except in the one instance of the cattle commission. The governor says little about taxation but what he does say is right to the point. All in all the message of Governor Bell will commend itself to the thoughtful citizen as the frank, blunt, and well instilled opinion of a strong-minded, public spirited man, and even those who may not agree altogether with every one of his propositions cannot fail to admire the simple directness of a man who knows what he wants and is not afraid to tell what it is.—St. Albans Messenger.

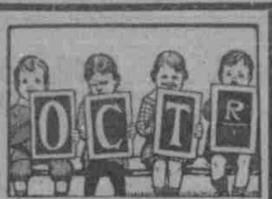

TAXES MUST BE PAID.

A Disputed Point Settled in Rutland County Court.

Rutland, Oct. 6.—In the trial of the case of William A. Smith, collector of taxes for the town of Fairhaven, vs. Mary A. Stannard who tried to avoid the payment of taxes, claiming to reside in another town the greater part of the year, the jury today brought in a verdict for the plaintiff town for $679.83 which the defendant must pay. The case decided a much mooted legal point.

THROWN FROM WAGON

Mrs. David Buchanan of South Ryegate Instantly Killed.

South Ryegate, Oct. 7.—This town was shocked yesterday at the sad death of Mrs. David Buchanan and the terrible calamity that happened to her 14-year-old daughter, Ina. They were driving to Wells River and as they were going down the hill from Ryegate corner, leading into Wells River village, something about the harness gave way and the horse bolted, and as it was on a steep hill there was no way of holding the horse, and before it had gone 25 rods the wagon struck Mr. Baldwin's iron fence, throwing Mrs. Buchanan over the dasher, and she was instantly killed, breaking her neck and leg. The daughter was thrown over the fence in to Mr. Baldwin's yard. She was cut badly in the head, but at last reports she was conscious, and had been all the time. Mrs. Buchanan was a native of Ryegate. Her maiden name was Martha Nelson, and she was the oldest of Wm. J. Nelson's family. She leaves a husband, three daughters, and a sister, a Mrs. Crosser, of Glover. No woman in town could be more highly esteemed than Mrs. Buchanan. She was an active member of Blue Mt. Grange and of the Reform Presbyterian church of this village.

NEW AUTOMOBILE COMPANY.

Sewell Morse of Brattleboro is President of the Concern.
Brattleboro, Oct. 6.—An automobile company has been incorporated in Springfield, Mass., to be known as the Morse Automobile Co., of which Sewell Morse of Brattleboro is president. Application has been made for a charter. The company is capitalized at $250,000, of which $150,000 already has been subscribed. Mr. Morse is the owner of the patents. The essential improvement of the Morse machine over other machines is the mode of application of motive power to the wheels. Enough machines have been made under Mr. Morse's direction to demonstrate the practicability of the new invention.

MARSHFIELD.

Mrs. Alice Potter, an aged lady living on Maple Hill, died last Sunday, and was buried Tuesday.

Lewis Swan of Northfield, a former resident of this place, visited friends in town the first of the week. Mr. Swan is assistant janitor at Norwich university.

J. F. Sanborn, now in the employ of the Parker Young & Co. of Lisbon, N. H., is in town for a few days, having met with a slight accident recently while at work in the factory. Mr. Sanborn in some way came in contact with the elevator, injuring his right foot so as to require the use of crutches for a time.

Mrs. D. K. Lucas is sick in bed, threatened with the grip.

The auditors of the Marshfield-creamery association will meet at the creamery next Wednesday, Oct. 12th, to audit the accounts of the company for the past year.

O. F. Carpenter recently had a singular experience with his dairy. Upon going to the barn for the morning milking he found several of his cows were unable to get up without assistance and even then had to be held up while they were milked. It seems that the cows had gained access to a buck orchard the day before and had eaten so many apples that they became intoxicated. Oliver says they dried up finely in sobering off.

A SAD CASE.

A Mother at 17, And Deserted By Her Husband.

Burlington, Oct. 6.—The funeral of Mrs. Annie Morrison, who died Tuesday morning, was held this morning at St. Joseph's church, Rev. J. M. Cloare officiating. The body was laid away in Mount Calvary cemetery. The death of Mrs. Morrison was pathetic. She was only 17 years of age, and a mother. She was married about a year ago, and last winter her husband left her and has not since been heard from. She lived alone, and although her parents lived in the neighborhood, they apparently were ignorant of her condition in regard to necessities. When she was taken ill she was in weak condition, and was unable to rally and died at the hospital.

Sunday Train Continued.

Newport, Oct. 6.—It has been decided by the officials of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. to continue running the passenger train known as the "Air Line" from Montreal to Boston, Sundays, until December 3, owing to the increased western travel. A new tourist car has been placed on the train.
