

THE TIME TO READ has arrived. The long evenings, the comfortable chair, the cozy fire need a good book to make the enjoyment complete.

WE CAN SUIT YOU with any kind of a book you prefer, whether it be a tale of thrilling adventure or a story of gentler deeds. Make your own selection.

Barre Book Store, CARROLL W. MARTIN, Proprietor, Gordon Block, 140 No. Main St.

The Art Store

Our line of Colored and White Linen Doilies is complete. We have something new in Lace for Center Pieces and Pillow Ruffles.

MRS. C. H. CAMPBELL, MRS. H. A. RICHARDSON, 7 Pearl Street, - Barre, Vermont.

CLINTON N. FIELD

3 1/2 Per Cent Bonds Of the City of New York and other High Grade Investments yielding from 3 to 5 per cent. 35 Nassau Street, - New York.

"Real Thing" TOBACCO.

Sixteen ounces, put up in flower and coffee pots. Something new. Try it. Union made. The price is 45 cents.

E. O. MARRION, Pipes and Tobacco, Union Cigar Store, Corner Cigar Store.

Business or Pleasure

Do you use the same paper for the note of condolence and the letter to your lawyer? There's a right style of paper for every purpose. It's good style and good taste, and good in every way if made by the famous

Eaton-Hurlbut Paper Company

Come in and let us show you our assortment of Two-tone and Highland Linen writing papers.

W. FRANK HARRIS, BOOKS and STATIONERY, Hale Block, - 161 No. Main St.

EUREKA RESTAURANT

AMERICAN AND EUROPEAN PLAN. OPEN from 6 A. M. to 12 P. M. MEALS AT ALL HOURS. Meal Tickets, twenty-one meals, $4.00. Dinner Tickets, seven dinners, for 2.00. First-class service. Strictly clean. LAIRD & WHEELER, Prop'rs, Opp. Depot Square, Barre, Vt.

THE BARRE DAILY TIMES TUESDAY, JANUARY 24, 1905.

A SALARY FOR LIFE Man or woman, a fixed income as true as you live, as long as you live. The annuity idea is wonderful in its usefulness. Immediate, or by a system of payments deferred to commence at a period later in life. 56th year, doing business in 41 states. The National Life Insurance Company of Vermont (Mutual). Organized in 1850. S. S. Ballard, General Agent, N. B. Ballard, Local Agent, Rooms 2 and 3, Miles' Block, Barre, Vt.

TALK OF THE TOWN.

Well, above all things avoid imitations. Use Ruberoid. The regular meeting of the clerks union will be held Wednesday evening. Old gold and silver wanted at refiners' prices in exchange for goods at F. E. Burr's. The Philomathians will meet with Miss Marr Tuesday evening at 7:15 o'clock. Saws filed. Prompt work and satisfaction guaranteed. L. E. Griswold, 94 North Main street. We are receiving new music every day. Only 25c per copy. W. Frank Harris, Hale Block. Morrison & Burnham have just received 25 acclimated horses which they offer for sale. See adv. La Vecchia Compagnia Filo drammatica rappresentera le due Orfanelle all opera house il 25 Febraio. We guarantee you 5 per cent on your investment and centrally located real estate, your security. Room 13 Miles' block. The Athena club will meet with Mrs. D. B. Stone Tuesday evening. Members please be ready for the team at seven o'clock. The Company F basket ball team of Northfield will play the Y. M. C. team in the armory Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The old Italian Philodrammatic club will give the play "The Two Orphans" in Italian, at the Barre opera house Feb. 25th. There will be a rummage sale at Trinity church in Montpelier Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons and evenings of this week. The Philtheas will hold a business meeting Tuesday evening, Jan. 24, at 7:15, in the round tower room of the Baptist church. Miss Crandall of Burlington teacher of music in the city schools, will sing at the musicale next Wednesday evening at C. W. Averill's. Mrs. Minnie M. Wheeler will do shampooing, chiropody and manicuring by appointment at your home. No. 11 Walnut street. Telephone 213-3. Ladies when out shopping drop in to see the beautiful flowers at the L. O. T. M. flower sale in Foresters' hall, Worthen block. Admission free. The Altruists will meet with Mrs. E. J. Sowden, 83 Tremont street, Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. Character sketches. Noted Women of France. Facciamo noto alla colonia italiana ed agli organizzatori di feste famigliari, che per la data 11 Febbraio si dara una festa da ballo al Miles hall a favore di Alberto Checchi. The Y. M. C. plays basket ball with Co. F of Northfield at the local armory Tuesday evening. A fine game is expected as the visitors are a strong team. Admission 15 cents, ladies free. Watch this paper for programme to be given at the musicale next Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Barre Musical association. Tickets can be procured at the Ideal Book Store. A "peanut party" will be given by the Baptist Y. P. S. C. E. at the home of Lewis Tayntor, 34 Merchant street, Jan. 25, at 7:30 o'clock. Come and bring your friend. The partnership of Henry J. and W. D. Smith, meat dealers, having been dissolved January 2, 1905, they desire that all bills owed them be settled up immediately to save cost of collection and that all bills against them be presented not later than February 1. We wish to inform the people of Barre that we have moved our stock of goods from the A. Tomasi block to the Co-operative store, 303 N. Main street. We have been refused permission to move our sign, but we are not located in the A. Tomasi block. Meaker Bros. A supper will be given by the young ladies of the Congregational church next Tuesday evening, Jan. 24, from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock. The following is the menu: Cold meats, ham, pork, beef; salads, Waldorf, cabbage; hot mashed potatoes, hot rolls cranberry sauce, cake, coffee. Admission 25 cents. Those who have ever attended the musicales given by the Barre Musical association will be pleased to know that a series of five concerts have been arranged, the first to be at the home of C. W. Averill, North street, on Wednesday evening, Jan. 23. Season tickets can be procured at the Ideal Book store. In the window at E. A. Drown's drug store there is a hod of coal and an interesting plan is connected with it. Every person after buying a bottle of "Drown's Warranted" cough medicine is entitled to one guess on the number of pieces of coal in the hod; also a free guess is given with every other purchase after first buying a bottle of cough cure. The person who guesses the nearest to the number of pieces of coal in the hod gets a ton of coal delivered at the house. It is certainly worth trying for.

HIT HARD AND OFTEN

Dean of Boxers Says Chief Executive Knows How to Give and Take Blows—He Had as Much Fun as a Boy.

Mike Donovan, dean of boxers, got home recently from Washington, where he boxed with the president for four days, says the New York World. It was the first of a series of bouts which are to continue for some days. Donovan talked of his experience as follows: "It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

A Novelty in Skates.

"The latest novelty?" said the cutter—"a skate with a foot warming attachment." The skate was sumptuously made, says a writer in the Philadelphia Bulletin. In donning it the foot slipped into a velvet shoe lined with fur. To the sole of this shoe the skate proper was fixed. Altogether the contrivance appeared excellent. "The queen of England," said the cutter, "has a pair of skates like these. The empress of Russia has a pair. Some of the richest New York ladies wear these skates. They keep the feet quite warm and comfortable, and there is never any danger of frostbite."

Beggars Attract Babies.

Women beggars in London who think that they can excite more pity and so get more money if they have a baby with them can rent a baby for 12 cents a day at several places in the city.

ROOSEVELT AS A BOXER

Mike Donovan Tells of His Bouts With President.

HIT HARD AND OFTEN

Dean of Boxers Says Chief Executive Knows How to Give and Take Blows—He Had as Much Fun as a Boy.

Mike Donovan, dean of boxers, got home recently from Washington, where he boxed with the president for four days, says the New York World. It was the first of a series of bouts which are to continue for some days. Donovan talked of his experience as follows: "It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed every afternoon from 5:30 until nearly half past 6 in his study. A wrestling mat was placed on the floor for us, but I found it too thick, and we used the regular carpet. The president wore a pair of riding trousers, a light undershirt and a pair of canvas shoes. "Don't mind hitting me," he said right at the start off. "I want you to hit me as often as you can, and don't mind how hard either." We started off in good fashion, and every time we hit each other he laughed good naturedly. It was not any tapping, I will tell you. They were good, honest blows of the sort that you wouldn't run into knowingly. We had seven ounce gloves. The president took his part of it always with a laugh. "I never saw a pleasanter man or one who gets more enjoyment out of a thing. He had as much fun as a boy, and he laughed and joked all the time. He's a fighter and knows how to give and take blows. He doesn't try to knock a man out, but he does like to know that he has hit him. "He kept me busy, and I was not running into any of his blows either. Don't get the idea that I was there to teach him—not by any means. He is a veteran boxer and can hold his own with the best of them in the clubs. I know few men who box regularly in the athletic clubs who can worst him. "One day he had to rush away to attend the diplomatic reception, where he shook hands with over a thousand persons. He told me he would much prefer to take his book and sit down and read. "Every day while we boxed some one came in and watched. His boy Theodore was always there with his two cousins, football players, and several times men came in to talk with him on business while he was boxing. A man from Texas came in to arrange about his making a hunting trip to Texas directly after inauguration. He said to me, "Oh, how I wish it were here now." He is longing for the recreation and the exercise in the open it will give him. "The life in Washington has made him stout, and he is not as well trained as when he was governor. To keep down the weight a man must diet, and it is impossible for the president to diet himself and attend as many dinners as he has to attend. He misses tremendously his active exercise. But he is as lithe as an Indian yet, supple in every joint, and he can hit like lightning. "I have arranged to go down several more times to box with him and to give lessons to Theodore junior. I gave lessons to young Theodore every day. He is now a fine, strapping young boy, seventeen years old, and weighs 135 pounds. I thought when I first gave him lessons at Albany that he would never be a strong man, but he is developing and will be as tall as his father. He is a fighter, too, and a good hitter. I gave lessons to him and his two cousins. "If I had been an ambassador the president could not have treated me better. He is a magnificent man, an all round man, who is a good, honest fighter, who has not a vicious streak in him. He doesn't enjoy the social strain he has to go through, and I know he would love to escape it, but it goes with the high office he holds, and he never shirks anything—even a good honest blow."

"It was the first time I had boxed with Mr. Roosevelt since he was governor. If anybody tells you he's an easy mark, don't believe it. He knows how to use his head too. I never saw a man pick up faster than he in those four days. "We boxed