EQUITABLE ARGUMENT ON

Sharp Clash Between Opposing Counsel—E. M. Shepard Argues Against the Plan for Mutualization.

New York, April 11.—A sharp clash between Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Vice President James H. Hyde of the Equitable and William B. Hornblower, counsel for Alexander and other directors, marked the arguments yesterday in the injunction suit brought by Franklin B. Lord to restrain the Equitable Life from amending its charter by mutualization in Justice Maddox's courtroom in Brooklyn.

When Mr. Hornblower said he represented the directors of the society, Mr. Untermyer disagreed with him.

"What is the society?" asked Justice Maddox.

"It is not a question of what is the society, but what are certain individuals trying to make it," said Mr. Untermyer hotly.

Both Mr. Hornblower and Edward M. Shepard, who is representing Mr. Lord, said that they did not object to Mr. Untermyer's filing a brief if he wanted to.

"I'm opposed to Mr. Lord's suit, not exactly on the ground that the board of directors are, but I have not had time as yet to thoroughly go over the matter. I would like to have more time in which to do it."

"On behalf of Mr. Hyde, who holds in trust the majority of the stock in the Equitable, I am prepared to make a motion to intervene so that we can take some part in the proceedings now before the court. It is my intention to have the whole question of mutualization thoroughly threshed out and to have nothing done except what is perfectly legal."
