Luckiest Man in Arkansas. "I'm the luckiest man in Arkansas," writes H. L. Stanley of Bruno, "since the restoration of my wife's health after five years of continuous coughing and bleeding from the lungs; and I owe my good fortune to the world's greatest medicine, Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which I know from experience will cure consumption if taken in time. My wife improved with the first bottle and twelve bottles completed the cure." Cures the worst coughs and colds or money refunded. At the Red Cross Pharmacy, 50c and $1.00, Trial bottle free.

"Had dyspepsia or indigestion for years. No appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me."—J. H. Walker, Sunbury, Ohio.

Don't let the baby suffer from eczema, sores or any itching of the skin. Doan's Ointment gives instant relief, cures quickly. Perfectly safe for children. All druggists sell it.

Constipation causes headache, nausea, dizziness, languor, heart palpitation. Drastic physics gripe, sicken, weaken the bowels and don't cure. Doan's Regulator acts gently and cures constipation, 25 cents. Ask your druggist.

Never can tell when you'll mash a finger or suffer a cut, bruise or scald. Be prepared. Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil instantly relieves the pain—quickly cures the wound.

Speaker Reed and Joe Wheeler. The late Speaker Reed, when discussing with some of his colleagues the ravages death was making in the older membership of Congress, once said:

"Now, there's Wheeler sitting yonder. He's getting old, but the Almighty could never get him in one place long enough to put his finger on him."

This tells the story of Gen. Wheeler. He was constantly on the jump, did everything nervously and rapidly. When he arose to speak in the House, where he served as a member from Alabama, he invariably said: "I arise for a moment just to say one word." It always brought forth a laugh from his colleagues. He talked so rapidly that it was almost impossible for a stenographer to "take him down." On one occasion while in Congress the general lost his voice in the midst of a speech, but continued the motions of talking for some minutes, his white beard bobbing up and down, to the amusement of 100 members, all of whom, nevertheless, had a kindly feeling for him.—Boston Globe.

SAVES THE RUB.

These Crystals are the same that have been used for years by the Laundries and Knitting Mills of Troy and Cohoes. So great was the success of the Crystals that they are now offered to householders in convenient package form.

THE CLEANER THAT MADE TROY LAUNDRIES FAMOUS.

Makes clothes pure and white, and woolens come out light and fluffy.

These Crystals remove all grease. For workmen's clothes nothing will work such wonders.

Handiest thing you could have in the kitchen. A small amount of these Crystals will produce a wonderful result. They possess mild antiseptic qualities and are unequalled for cleaning cooking utensils. They are particularly good for cleaning bottles or pitchers used for milk, leaving them bright and sparkling.

SELLING A DRIVING HORSE.

The Trick of the Trade Is to Find the Right Buyer.

To successfully sell driving and carriage horses requires higher abilities as a salesman and a better knowledge of human nature than any other branch of commerce.

The value of a fancy driving horse or carriage horse is purely fictitious. A horse that would not be worth $100 to one man is worth several times that amount to another, and the real measure of value is the anxiety of one to purchase or the other to sell.

Of course there are certain types of horses that have a fairly stable value. But I am speaking about horses whose value is in their individuality. Many people keep showy equipages who know nothing of horses and have no love for them, and the prices they pay depend largely upon how the animal's coat shines and the amount and lustre of the brass trimmings on the harness in which they are shown. It would be money thrown away to give such people a perfect animal or team of them.

And herein comes the discernment of the dealer. He may have horses which to these people will appear perfect, but a horseman would note their flaws. The position, shape and size of the horse's ears all have a bearing on its value, as do the position of the eyes. A slight curve of the nose or a coarse muzzle deduct dollars from its value. These and a hundred points all add up to or mar the worth of the animal, not to speak of any of the more glaring defects. It is the horseman's business to determine before showing an animal just what kind of a customer he has to deal with.

If he has his perfect animals to those who would be satisfied with an inferior article he loses his own chance for profit, while if to the right person he shows one of the poorer animals he forfeits the confidence of the buyer. I have sold everything pretty nearly except good bricks, and they were all easy in comparison with selling perfect, but at that there is a fascination about the sale of a horse that makes it hard for me to give it up after thirty-five years in the business.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Scared the Tenderfoot. Guy Sterling Manatt was over at Claremore recently, and upon returning the train stopped at a small station, where a married couple got off. No sooner had the train slowed up than the charivari party began a commode of pistols, guns, etc. Two Easterners, who were down there prospecting, were traveling in the same car with Manatt. They had undoubtedly heard much of the Wild West and had expected any time to witness a massacre, train robbery, murder or something. So when the shooting commenced, not knowing that it was a charivari party, but believing that some wild-eyed band of outlaws were holding up the train, they got down on their hands and knees between the seats, their faces wearing one of the most heroic looks imaginable. And as the fusillade continued one of them crawled down the aisle to the coal bunker and tried to efface himself amid the coal.

Manatt says it was the rarest scene of pure, unalloyed terror he ever saw. After the train started up and no blood-thirsty robbers had robbed and slain the passengers, the two Easterners got up, one from between the seats and the other from the coal bunker, and after brushing off their clothes, shamefacedly took their seats again. And all the rest of the trip they looked as though they wanted someone to hit them with a brick.—Lodi, Okla., Events.

From Her Own Mouth.

The cleverest of lawyers occasionally find their match when engaged in their favorite occupation of breaking down an opponent's witness, and this frequently occurs in the case of "horsey" individuals.

The following worthy contest between a hostler and a counsel is one of the most amusing specimens of the kind: "Now, I ask you, sir, under what authority you are prepared to swear to the mare's age?"

"Under what authority?" said the hostler interrogatively. "You are to reply, and not repeat the question put to you."

"I don't consider a man's bound to answer a question afore he's time to turn it in his mind."

"Nothing can be more simple, sir, than the question put, and I repeat it. Under what authority do you swear to the animal's age?"

"The best authority," said the witness gruffly. "Then why such evasion? Why not state it at once?"

"Well, then, if you must have it"—"Must! I will have it!" thundered the counsel interrupting the witness. "Well, if you must and will have it," rejoined the hostler, with imperturbable gravity, "why, then, I had it myself from the mare's own mouth!"—Chicago Journal.

Not to Be Quoted!

The reporter boarded a Chestnut street car at Broad street. Two minutes later a bulky gentleman dropped into the seat by his side and jammed him against the window. The reporter grunted, but the newcomer was cheerful.

"I knew Chestnut street before it had car tracks," he announced pleasantly. "Used to run omnibuses up one side and down the other."

"The reporter wasn't interested. "Yes," he continued, "I've lived here all my life. I like to see the old town grow. I was born in 1844—on the 22d of 1844."

The reporter tried to imagine just when the momentous event happened. The information was somewhat hazy. "Yes, those are facts," he went on. "I went to school—What, not going?"

"Yes," replied the reporter, "here is where I belong." "Say, young man, what's your business?"

"In a reporter." "A reporter! Great heavens!" he cried. "And here I've been talking so freely to you. Say, now, don't quote me. I wasn't talking for publication." But he was, even if he didn't know it.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

OF DISCOVERING THE POLE.

Its Pictorial Side Very Seriously Considered from All Sides.

The necessities of mural painting demand that the discovery of the North Pole shall be pictorially impressive, something as satisfying as Columbus' first appearance on American soil, with the flag of Spain in one hand, an uplifted sword in the other, knights in armor kneeling behind, and brown savages picturesquely grouped about on either side.

Something as well arranged as this is demanded by the thousands of hotel offices, museums, libraries and railroad stations yet unborn. In view of the fact, one cannot survey the activities of contemporary Arctic explorers without certain feelings of dismay. Mr. Peary is already on his way to the Pole by land, certain that this time he will reach it. Mr. Wellman prepares to dash from Spitzbergen, and, by means of a dirigible airship, escape all the embarrassments of water and ice, and fly to the Pole in two days.

This, without doubt, is the most dramatic method yet suggested for reaching the Pole. Picture for an instant the intrepid Wellman, actually in flight, about to reach his goal. Hawk-eyed he peers out of the bow cockpit into naked Arctic space—like Mr. King's Captain Hodgson, in "With the Night Mail"—the dawgout bounding on the airship's skin, the G. C. X. lateral indicator giving warning that just behind that bank of clouds stands the Pole, only sixteen kilometres (Fleury scale, parabola reckoning) ahead.

Into the cloud-rack sweeps the airship; holding-capt are loosened, Captain Wellman, one foot on the colloid rim, an American flag in his hand, prepares to leap out and claim the Pole. The mist parts, the volt-flurry clearing with it. With a long-drawn Swoosh, the engines purr down, and—there is the Pole; and there, standing against it, that very instant arriving by land, is the tireless Peary smoking a long cigar! Endless are the possibilities. There might be animation, action, but where the mellow dignity, the reverent repose of the mural decorat? We hope all will turn out well for novelists, painters, and writers of librettos.—Collier's Weekly.

Notes. Willard G. Smith, who during an absence of 30 years from this, his native place, has repaired and adjusted sewing machines of all kinds in factories, for all branches of manufacturing in central New York, and over 700 machines in Burlington, Vt., since his return, will repair machines at your homes, in Barre and vicinity, making an old machine run like a new one—or no pay.
