Pleasure Spoiled

What a beautiful spring morning! How briskly you step out! How pleasurable your anticipations of the day! But gradually your walk loses its briskness, your step its buoyancy, your feet seem to have become leaden weights and a sudden hot, pinchy feeling reminds you that your shoes are not yet thoroughly broken in. Your day's pleasure is spoiled, for you can think of nothing but your feet. If you would avoid all this, wear the "Dorothy Dodd"—the Shoe of faultless fit. It will do everything for your comfort that other shoes do not.
