B. C. Whitney's "Tale of Spice."

Stage fright is generally associated with amateurs and first night productions, but that it is not confined to those bounds is attested by Miss Martha Martz, who has played the role of Trilby in B. C. Whitney's "Tale of Spice" ever since the first production of the piece.

"We were playing in New Orleans," relates Miss Martz, "and during my long speech one night, in the second act, during the palm-reading scene, a woman came into the auditorium, and marched clear down to the front row of the orchestra chairs, disturbing a lot of people, and then fussed around with a big hat for several minutes. I absent-mindedly allowed my eyes to follow her, and the first thing I knew I forgot my lines—the lines I had spoken nightly for two years. I was lost completely. I never experienced such a feeling before, and I do not care to again. Finally, in desperation, I reached over and took hold of Miss Forrester, who plays the part of "Kamorta." She had never seen me act that way before, and thought I was going to drop dead. She put her arms about me, and then, in an instant, my lines came back to me and we finished the scene. That was my first attack of stage fright, and it came near breaking up the performance completely."

FAYSTON.

T. C. McCarty has rented his farm to Lewis Farnham and moved his family to Barre, where he has a job on the electric railway. Mr. McCarty has been one of the pillars of the town for over twenty years, having held the office of selectman for nearly all that time. He has always taken a deep interest in the cause of education and has served on the school board for twelve years. He also represented the town in the legislature of 1892. We are sorry to lose Mr. McCarty and his estimable family, as by their removal we lose a good citizen, a kind and obliging family and a man of sterling integrity.

The Modern Way, The Right Way, The McLean Way

My many years' experience in this particular business and in this particular spot has convinced me that I have been overlooking the interests of the children, who are responsible in a great measure for my placing this business where it is today—at the top.

Thus and again have I been impressed with the fact that a large percentage of the goods sold are purchased by children, and just as often have I thought that I would like to make some special concession to these "little boosters" for making this store their buying center. I number among my best customers to-day the child-customer of yesterday.

I have at last devised a plan whereby I can show my appreciation, in a practical and substantial way, of the assistance these little people have given this store.

I am going to make every girl and every boy who make their purchases here "silent partners" in this business and pay to them regular dividends in cash. This is what is meant by "The McLean Way."

I have placed in my store a mechanical cashier, which was constructed by The National Cash Register Co. for my express order. This cashier will give you a printed receipt for each purchase you make showing the amount of your purchase. Keep these receipts until they amount to TEN DOLLARS, then hurry to the store and hand them to the first clerk you meet and he will mail you your dividend of Twenty-five Cents in Cash.

Remember that your receipts must represent Cash Purchases. Start your collection today and you will soon have that doll or that half which you have wanted for so long, or better still, start a bank account. It's easy when you try "The McLean Way." My prices are the same as they have always been—you know what that means. Yours very truly,

W. J. McLEAN,

(200 North Main St.)
MANAGER FOR THE "SILENT PARTNERS."
