LEAVES YOUNG BRIDE.

Fitzwilliam, N. H., Man Struck by Train Saturday Night

Keene, N. H., June 25.—With a crushed skull and a leg cut off above the knee, the body of Earl C. Taylor of Fitzwilliam was found on the tracks in the road yard in town, shortly before midnight Saturday night by a brakeman.

Medical examiner J. D. Proctor of this city was notified, and as there was no train to Fitzwilliam until 7 o'clock Sunday morning, ordered that the body be taken under cover, but the authorities there would not allow it to be moved until he arrived, so it lay beside the track under guard until about 8 yesterday morning.

Taylor had come in on the night express from Athol, which arrives at Fitzwilliam at 9:32 o'clock, and it is thought that he must have fallen on the tracks and stunned himself and was struck by the freight which passed through there soon after the express.

The body was brought to Keene yesterday forenoon and taken to an undertaker's rooms. Taylor leaves a wife at Fitzwilliam, to whom he was married only three months ago.

The commencement season, which this service inaugurated, is the 103d in the history of the university. "If we have any hope of arresting a civilization," he said, "tending toward a moral standard of ancient Rome and Pompeii, and the decadence of Paris, the men of light and reading among us must hold the perpetual levy of their forces. The church must summon to the work all who will be on the Lord's side. All educational forces and all institutions of learning must array to the support of the influences that purify, elevate and spiritualize human life."

STORM CAUSES TROUBLE.

Battles, Allen Battles and Glenn Wilson were going from Randolph to their home in Braintree and had gone as far as Joseph Tilson's when a blinding flash of lightning either struck the party or struck so near them that they were dazed. The horse driven by Mrs. Battles and Allen Battles was made crazy for the time and turning squarely across the road ran over a stone wall into Mr. Tilson's meadow. A minute later Mrs. Battles picked herself out of the carriage top in the meadow. Young Battles hung to the horse until everything about the carriage was a total wreck and he was obliged to let the animal go.

Glenn Wilson who was driving just back of the Battles fared even worse than the others. Like the others he does not know what happened after the flash until he found himself in the road. Wilson is suffering with a broken leg. Both bones of his right leg were broken very badly just below the knee.

Joseph Tilson who was returning from Randolph found the party in the road a few minutes after the accident and assisted in helping Mr. Wilson to the home of Pearl Campbell where he will remain until able to be taken to his home. Mrs. Battles was able to be taken home Sunday morning but is suffering considerable pain.

SERMON TO CLASS OF 1906

Goddard Seniors Begin Their Commencement

WITH BACCALAUREATE

The Rev. C. C. Conner Was Speaker at the Universalist Church Yesterday Morning—Events of the Week

The thirty-seventh annual commencement of Goddard seminary opened yesterday morning at the Universalist church, with the baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class by the pastor, the Rev. C. C. Conner. As always happens on this occasion, the church was crowded full with students, former graduates and friends of the schools. Four students from the junior class acted as ushers. The pulpit was very prettily decorated with maple leaves and flowers. The members of the junior class of Goddard marched in first and took seats reserved for them at the front. They were followed by the faculty and last by the graduating class.

The entire service was very impressive and enjoyable. The order of the service was as follows: Organ voluntary by Mrs. A. A. Sargent; anthem by the quartette, composed of Mr. Griffiths, Miss Walker, Mrs. Gale and Mr. Sheriffs, who sang very enjoyably; invocation; responsive reading; vocal solo, "Dream of Paradise," by Mr. Griffiths; scripture reading;lection by the quartette; prayer by Mr. Conner; response by the quartette; sermon by the Rev. Mr. Conner. The sermon was a most interesting and well considered discourse on the subject, "Opportunity." His text was a part of Galatians 10:6, "As we have therefore opportunity."

The Sermon.

"The opportunities of life appear to facility and fitness for them. They are not to him who has not the power to perceive and use them. They await the one who goes forth to meet them. Fate is related faculty of fact. We are to trace its footsteps and be disciples unto it. We are to learn what nature meant us for, we are then to make our way to it, and stick by it. Men will be judged not by their talents, but by the manner in which they use their opportunities. To whom much is given iniquity shall be required. Vouchsafed talents are accorded ways to the markets. Otherwise they could not be held responsible for their use. Our privileges enter largely into the character of our deeds, as also into the sum of our joys. But we must not sigh for what we have not. Opportunity is in naught else than the near. This serves us the distant. Love shall hold to its heart what it may. To neglect opportunities is to invite failure and disaster; to be indifferent to them, when they come is to throw away the years of hope and expectation; to slight them as they pass is to lessen the favor of the future; to miss one is to forfeit it forever. The thing we would do too late can but bring regret and may fall of our hands; to neglect them is to miss one with second thoughts, when we should have been ready to speak or act with the occasion of first thoughts. Sometimes doves are laid tenderly on the coffin of the dead which should have been scattered lovingly along the path of the living. To the members of the graduating class he said at the close: "You have been passing through a period of preparation. You are about to commence in life. You have been furnishing your faculties for the opportunities and tasks which await you in the world. But the door is not closed behind you. It rather opens before you. Memory shall have range over the years that have been. Hope shall move futeward. The living soul is always growing and learning and attaining more. The pathway leads onward from the vantage point you have gained. You are prepared to trace it further by the training you have received in the school years which are ending. Hold yourselves each to a purpose. Let your living be aimful. Keep your face to the future. Bring memory to minister at the shrine of hope. Esteem the opportunity to advance and to carry the interests of men and to promote human happiness and to meet the divine pleasure. Time will hold a torch for you."
