Are You Wretched in Bad Weather?

Keeping the Kidneys Well Has Kept Many Barre People Well.

Many Barre people find that bad weather brings on a dull pain in the back, or rheumatic aching, neuralgia, nervousness, irritability and weakness. If, when you get wet or take cold, it "settles on the kidneys," and there is a shivery, chilly sensation in the back, it shows kidney weakness which is often the beginning of disease. Doan's Kidney Pills should be used persistently until the chilly feeling is gone, and the flow of urine is natural. Doan's Kidney Pills have saved Barre people much suffering.

W. W. McAuley of 33 Seminary St., Barre, Vt., says: "I took all kinds of medicine said to be good for kidney trouble but without getting any noticeable relief. The pain in my left kidney was severe and I could not stoop to pick up anything from the floor without having sharp shooting pains in the small of my back. I was very restless nights and awoke mornings feeling tired and sore all over. Damp weather always made me feel worse and I finally became so bad I could not walk a short distance. It was then that I began using Doan's Kidney Pills sold by E. A. Drown, the druggist, and they helped me from the first, relieving the pain in my back and helping me in every way. I used several boxes and can honestly say that I never found a medicine to help me like Doan's Kidney Pills did. I have told many people what they did for me and know of several who have used them on my recommendation with satisfactory results." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Boston Views the Remains.

It had been a strenuous afternoon for the devoted teacher who took six of her pupils through the Museum of Natural History, but her charges had enjoyed every minute of the time. "Where have you been, boys?" asked the father of two of the party that night, and the answer came with joyous promptness: "We've been to a dead circus." Youth's Companion.

NEGRO BLUE BOOK.

Chicago Has Colored Four Hundred by Natural Selection.

Chicago, Aug. 23.—Chicago's colored population has its "Four Hundred." Its members are listed in the "Colored People's Blue Book of Chicago," just published.

The book contains ninety pages of advertisements of business concerns run by colored people, a classified business and professional directory, and names of 400 "prominent" colored persons, selected according to social standing. The prominent citizens are grouped under north, west, and south sides, respectively.

According to this directory Chicago's colored population has 35 churches, 39 lawyers, 4 newspapers, 40 physicians, 14 literary clubs, 10 social clubs, and 25 women's clubs.

NEW YORKER TAKES HIS LIFE.

Treasurer of Associated Lawyers Shoots Himself.

New York, Aug. 23.—William A. McAneny, 40 years old, living in the Bronx, committed suicide in the bathroom of his apartment yesterday.

Mr. McAneny shot himself with a revolver. He was the treasurer of the Associated Lawyers, with offices at 170 Broadway.

Mrs. McAneny and her 16-year-old daughter, Louise, said an unlocked door was the reason for the act. They said he had no business troubles, so far as they knew. He had been complaining recently of illness, but they had no idea it was anything serious.

The Unexpected.

W. A. Glasgow, Jr., of the Interstate Commerce Commission's counsel, smiled. He had been interrogating a reporter in his hotel, and the reply he received was unexpected. "That was an unlocked door, truly," he said. "It was like the answer the policeman gave to the good citizen. A good citizen, breathless and excited, ran up to a large, calm policeman one day and cried:

"Officer, there's a terrible fight going on around the corner to the right."
"Thank you, sir. I'll do as much for you some day, sir," said the policeman gratefully, as he took the turning to the left and quickly disappeared."—New York Tribune.

Brazil's Improved Postal Card.

Our postal card is in need of improvement. The writing on it is in plain view, to be read at leisure by any postal employee from the time it leaves the sender until it arrives at its destination. During my first stay in Brazil I found that the postal card there in use was supplied with a flap or covering of dark paper which, when gummed down, completely hid the writing. This flap was attached to the back of the card, an edge gummed and perforated, the insertion of a finger tip being all that was required to open it. It served the purpose of a letter at half the expense.—From a letter to the Chicago Daily News.

Men Who Are Talked About

Copyright by J. E. Purdy, Boston.
SECRETARY BONAPARTE.

CHARLES J. BONAPARTE, secretary of the navy, who has been expressing his views on the punishment of anarchists, was noted as a student at Harvard for the excellence of his stories of the Munchausen variety. One of them concerned a hoop snake. "There was a farmer," young Bonaparte would begin, "who was out hoeing. He was hoeing at the foot of a hill. All of a sudden he heard a noise, and, looking up, there was a hoop snake rushing down on him like the wind. Its tail was in its mouth, and in the form of a perfect circle the snake rolled down the hill upon him.

"The farmer was frightened, but he put up a good fight. He whacked the snake with his hoe. It let go of its tail then and made a bite at him, but he warded off the bite with the hoe handle. The fangs of the infuriated reptile sunk into the handle very deep, and the farmer, with a heavy rock, killed the snake.

"Then he took up the hoe and began to work. After a while he noticed that the handle seemed thicker than usual. He looked at it. Actually it was swelling. Yes, it was swelling (so powerful was the hoop snake's venom). This hoe handle before the afternoon was over had grown to the thickness of the farmer's leg."

The railroad which Joseph Ramsey, Jr., former president of the Wabash, plans to build from New York to Chicago will be the first American trunk line to be equipped at the start with electric locomotives. It will have an advantage in not having to dispose of any old stock in order to utilize electric equipment. The Ramsey project is the sensation of the hour in railroad circles. It will be shorter than any existing route between New York and Chicago. Mr. Ramsey's fight with George J. Gould over control of the Wabash occupied the center of the stage some months ago. It was settled in favor of the noted multimillionaire, and Mr. Ramsey got out of the Wabash office. Time was when Mr. Ramsey was a great favorite with Mr. Gould and others in the Wabash directorate. A record breaking achievement in the movement of freight when he was with a small Pennsylvania road brought him to their attention.

"We've been wanting a general superintendent for some time," they said, "and we'll go after this man Ramsey, who does such wonderful things."

A committee of prominent Wabash officials was sent to Pittsburgh. "Where'll we find Mr. Ramsey?" they asked at the office of his road.

"Out there under that locomotive," was the reply.

The eminent gentlemen picked their way over ties to a locomotive standing on a siding. Underneath the locomotive was a man pounding away at a repair. Pretty soon the man crawled out and stood before the eminent gentlemen. He had on overalls and a jumper that were grimy, and his hands and face were dirty and oily.

"Are you Mr. Joseph Ramsey?" asked one of the visitors.

"I am," was the reply. "What can I do for you?"

"You can give up your job here and be the general superintendent of the Wabash," the spokesman replied. "We came over here to look you over and decide about you later, but we've changed our minds. We want you right away. An official who knows how and is not afraid to repair his own rolling stock needs no other recommendation."

At Norristown, Pa., one evening not long ago a travel stained and weary looking man stepped off a train which had arrived from New York. He carried an ordinary looking grip—such as might be unearthed in any farmhouse—in one hand, while with the other he fanned his face with his dusty Panama hat. The stranger meditatively scratched one leg with the toe of the boot on the other, gazed at his watch, then manuevered up to the main street of the town. He was on his way to Schwenksville, and had an hour to wait for the trolley car. The tired man looked across the street to the inviting looking steps of the Penn Trust company building and, taking a seat on the granite stairway, buried his head in his hands. A few minutes later a policeman came along. He saw the lone figure on the steps and, touching the stranger on the shoulder, said:

"See here, you must move on. We don't permit loafers on these steps."
"All right," replied the stranger with a quizzical smile. "As I don't want to be run in I guess I'll move."

"Governor Pennypacker!" exclaimed the startled policeman, recognizing the chief executive of the Keystone State.

"The same," replied the governor, smiling at the policeman's confusion. An apology was tendered by the policeman, who said that complaints had been made by the bank officers, but Governor Pennypacker complimented the policeman upon his performance of duty.

Paul O. Stensland, president of the wrecked Milwaukee Avenue State bank of Chicago, has had a meteoric career. It might have been called a brilliant career until a few weeks ago. Stensland was the son of a poor Norwegian farmer. When a lad he was both energetic and ambitious, but farming was distasteful to him. The only variation offered from such a life was to become a sailor. Young Stensland shipped before the mast and during several voyages visited many parts of the world. He had not been ashore in this country many times when he decided that his future lay here.

Stensland settled in Chicago shortly before the big fire. He had saved a little money and went into the dry goods business. After the fire he was carried on the top of the wonderful boom that came to Chicago in those days. He made money fast and went into the real estate and insurance business. In time he was recognized as one of Chicago's leading citizens. He founded the Milwaukee Avenue bank. Then came a time of injudicious speculation, followed by reckless efforts to recoup his losses, including extensive race track gambling. Now hundreds of depositors are mourning the fact that such a man as Stensland was ever in the banking business.

Archduke Karl Franz Josef, heir to the Austrian throne, will need a long head and a firm hand when the time comes for him to take up the golden scepter. That the young man—he is now only nineteen—may some day rule Austria is due to a combination of unusual circumstances. The Crown Prince Franz Ferdinand, by his marriage to a woman not of royal birth, was obliged to renounce the claim of his future children to the purple. His younger brother, Otto, a dissolute fellow, found it necessary to renounce his rights in favor of his son, Karl Franz Josef, because of pressure brought to bear by his uncle, Emperor Francis Joseph, and the attitude of the Austrian people. That seems to give Franz Josef a pretty clear field, but it would complicate things if Franz Ferdinand's wife died and the crown prince should take a wife of royal blood. The people are anxious for Franz Ferdinand to renounce his own rights to the throne because they hate him almost as much as they do Otto. How much trouble will be provoked when Francis Joseph II. dies only time can tell, but some say the great empire is ready to crumble to pieces in the event of disputes as to the succession.

Aurel Batonyi, whose marriage to Mrs. Frances Burke-Roche caused great surprise in the social circles in which they move, is best known as one of the leading whips of the country. Batonyi was for several years a driving and riding master in a fashionable New York riding and driving academy. It was in that way that he became acquainted with many members of the "Four Hundred." He had undoubted ability as a horseman, some qualities that were pleasing to his patrons and a well defined purpose to force himself to their social level. In this attempt he met with more or less success. It is said that some years ago Mr. Batonyi assumed the title of count, later explaining that he did so at the request of his first wife, from whom he was afterward divorced. In January, 1905, a report came from Vienna that Batonyi had received a bullet in the left arm in a duel with Count Szechenyi. Mr. Batonyi has probably taken more prizes driving horses at shows in this country than any other man.

Harry Payne Whitney, the young multimillionaire, tells of a horse owner of very luxurious tastes who, wherever he may be, is satisfied with no less than the best.

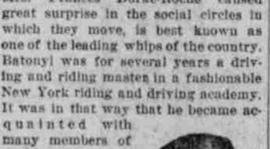

During the racing season in the west this horseman once invited a friend in humble circumstances to dine with him at a very expensive hostelry.

The guest was much impressed by his surroundings and made frequent inquiries touching the cost of the various luxuries there to be obtained. As the dinner neared its close he asked the horseman as to the amount of the tip he usually gave the waiter.

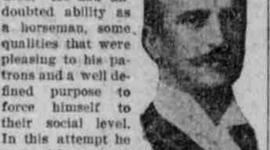

"Well," said the horse owner, "if he serves me well I generally give him a dollar. If the service is bad, why, I give him a tip on the scales."

Adorned With Sculptures.
A suit of apartments was advertised at a fashionable watering place as having among its attractions "a splendid view over its fine garden adorned with numerous sculptures." It was found on applying at the address that the garden adorned with sculptures was a cemetery.
