The Saddest Fact About New York.

William Allen White, the famous Kansas editor and novelist, writes of New York City and Empire (his home town) in the January number of The American Magazine. Following is Mr. White's account of the saddest thing he sees in New York.

"Country-dwelling American men and most of the women are instinctively democratic. And being democratic the cities sadden us country people. For the city and New York is typical of urban America—fosters too much of the sham relation between men that one finds where class lines are set. The eternal presence of a serving class, whose manners may some day petrify into servility, the continual discovery that the man who brings the food, or sweeps the streets, or drives the cab, considers wholesome conversation with him from his patrons as a sign of low breeding, the presence of the man who fawns for a quarter, all these make the countryman in New York desire to rush home and organize a Sitting Bull Lodge of Ancient and Amiable Anarchists!

It is not the extravagance of the rich, but the miserliness of too many of the poor, that disgust the countryman in New York. The saddest thing in that great city, to one who comes from the frank, wholesome, clean, happy faces of the country, is not the painted lady's face, with its glassy eyes, not the overfed, puff-bellied figures of the lazy, respectable hotel-dwelling women, who get no more exercise than stuffed geese, not the bespotted faces of the men about the barrel houses—though a merciful God knows they are sad enough; but sadder than they are the loathsome wooden faces of the men who stand decked out like human manikins in purples and greens and what-not of modish silliness and, for a price, surrender themselves to be made part of the landscape. For years Mickle the painter was the lowest form of humanity we had in Empire. He was the town drunkard, and once they fined him for beating his wife; drink made him a loafer and a brute. But some way one felt down in Mickle there was the soul of a man; some way one knew that he would not do certain things for money some way one always understood that Mickle could still look into depths of personal degradation below him, and tell whoever tempted him there to go to hell! But, on the other hand, some way the funkiness is just as funkny, and he seems to have given up the right to resent personal insult when he assumes the miserable part. And for a man to commercialize his American birthright seems a heart-breaking tragedy."

A new grate has been invented by the prince of Wales and placed in Pond house municipal dwellings, Chelsea. By a simple movement the housekeeper can transfer the fire in the kitchen grate to the sitting room grate. Having cooked the dinner the housewife raises a slide at the back of the kitchen grate. The slide is flush with the wall which separates kitchen from sitting room, and by simply raising a lever the fire of the kitchen grate is tilted into the sitting room grate.

LAW POINTS.

The right of a wife to defeat a conveyance by her husband of all his personal property when ill, shortly before death, as a fraud on her marital rights is denied in Robertson versus Robertson (Ala.), 5 L. R. A. (N. S.), 774.

A sale under a power in a chattel mortgage while the property was in the custody of the sheriff, under a levy made after advertisement of the mortgage sale, is held in Fulghum versus J. P. Williams company (Ga.), 1 L. R. A. (N. S.), 1055, to be void and ineffectual.
