ANGORAS. They Thrive on All Kinds of Soil Except Wet Land. The Angora goat industry has developed remarkably during the last few years, and it is estimated that there are now in this country about 1,000,000 Angoras, distributed in all the states and territories. The largest flocks are in Texas and New Mexico, but the northwest has also successful flocks, and no part of the country is unfitted for them. Angoras endure extremes of heat and cold and thrive on all kinds of soil except wet land. They prefer rocky land covered with brush. By nature they are climbers and browsers. The densely covered rough lands of the south, the wornout farms of New England and the "straggles" districts of Michigan and Wisconsin are especially adapted to them. Their habit of browsing makes them valuable for clearing land of brush. Their chief value, however, lies in their long, silky fleece, which is known as mohair. Mohair is largely used in the manufacture of plush, imitation astrakhan and mohair dress goods (brilliantines).

There are twenty-six persons in Pittsford over 80 years of age and eight over 90 years. Mrs. Emeline Henden Smith is 90 years old, she being the oldest person and is very active for one of her years.

Three accidents occurred at the Frost Vener Co.'s plant in Newport last week. Peter Bernard suffered a jammed leg, Thomas Davidson was cut on a saw, and the tip of one of H. J. Wilcox's fingers was cut off.

In the Brattleboro incorporated school district are 976 children between the ages of 5 and 18, of whom 484 are males and 492 are females. Two hundred are between 5 and 8 years old; 534 between 8 and 15; and 242 between 15 and 18. This is practically the same as last year's enumeration.

The death of R. S. Styles, of Burlington, Vermont, March 18, 1907, is the oldest printer in the city and possibly in the state. Mr. Thompson is 75 years old and has been a printer for fifty-nine years. G. W. Scott, of Burlington, formerly of Barre, is 65 years old and has worked at his case fifty-two years.

O. F. Gerry, of Stowe, is the possessor of a Revolutionary relic in the form of a seven-dollar bill, printed in Philadelphia by Hall & Sellers, 1776, entitling the bearer to receive seven Spanish mill dollars or the value thereof in gold or silver according to a resolution passed in Philadelphia, February 17, 1776. Mrs. Gerry also possesses copies of Walton's Vermont Register every year from 1821 to 1877 inclusive.

The United States produced in 1903 961,364 pounds of mohair, worth $267,875, or 27.8 cents a pound. In 1905 our factories used 1,888,975 pounds of domestic mohair, showing a considerable increase in production, but in the same year the factories used 3,061,910 pounds of imported mohair. The total imports of mohair in 1905 were 2,025,575 pounds, with an average value of 28.5 cents a pound. The present import duty on mohair, subject to increase under certain conditions, is 12 cents a pound.

A bulletin (No. 27 of the bureau of animal industry) of information concerning the Angora goat has recently been published by the department of agriculture. It is a revision of the original bulletin by the late George Fayette Thompson. It is fully illustrated and includes many valuable details of the management of flocks, the uses of the fleece and the carcass, localities in the United States adapted to the goats and other points.

In the Greenhouse. In general treatment of the greenhouse during winter, watering, airing and temperature are three important items. Good judgment should be used in watering, especially during the short days, says a New Jersey grower in New England Homestead. Tomatoes and cucumbers can be grown in the same temperature—that is, 60 degrees at night, 70 to 75 degrees day. Some growers in solid beds, others on raised benches. For the winter months I prefer the raised benches, setting the plants eighteen inches apart and two feet between the rows, pinching off all the lateral growths, allowing just one stem to a plant. Then, when the plants get up six or seven feet high, pinch the top. This should allow at least seven good trusses of fruit.

A few points might be considered as to the best method of bringing on the crop. In the first place, tomatoes should be grown on the dry side, especially through the short days; otherwise they will make soft, long jointed, undesirable vines. Under these conditions it is a difficult matter to get a satisfactory set of fruit. It is also necessary to have the soil they are growing in fairly firm. Water when absolutely necessary—that is, give a thorough drenching, then allow the beds to go until fairly dried. Provided the plants do not wilt for need of water, there will be no damage. In fact, foliage is a good guide in regard to watering. The main point in being successful with all vegetable crops is close attention to all details. The vegetable house needs the same care and attention as the choice plant house.

Arabian Alfalfa. The most distinct of any of the alfalfas, according to the report of the secretary of agriculture, is the newly introduced Arabian, characterized by its large leaflets, bairness and vigorous growth. Its quick recovery after cutting renders an extra cutting possible in long seasons. It is proving of special value in the irrigated sections of California and the southwest, though its lack of hardiness makes it unsuited to the colder parts of the country.

A Good Word for Small Farms. One young farmer is sure that small farms pay best. Less hired help is needed, he says, and what work is done can be easily performed under the direction of the owner. The small farm can be kept clean, and what is undertaken can be carried through. It is better adapted to a specialty. Large farms, according to his observation, waste money in hiring labor, and even then the work is not done as it should be—American Cultivator.

Breeding For Quality. I would suggest that more emphasis be laid on the right breeding to improve the quality, size and quantity of the fruit produced as well as to put constitution into the trees to resist the frost. The old adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," applies in this case.—Phillip Lux.

High Priced Corn. The sweetstake ear of corn at the recent Iowa corn growers' show is reported to have broken the record of high prices by selling for $150. The best ten ears brought $30.

ABOUT THE STATE. Items of Interest Gleaned From Our Exchanges. Judge Lewis H. Hubbard, of Highland Park, Ill., formerly editor of The Vermont Tribune, at Ludlow, is a candidate for the mayoralty of that city.

CONSUMPTION NOT HOPELESS. A little book on this subject has recently been issued by the Los Angeles Olive Growers' Association. It tells some very interesting and startling things and furnishes strong evidence in favor of the use of pure cod liver oil. Will answer to the writer's address, Box No. 12, may be had on request. 28112 ead
