PUT HIS TRUST IN ALL MEN

John J. McMillan Lost Everything But Pants, Shirt, Shoes AND THEN GOT ARRESTED

Gold Watch and Chain, a Sum of Money, Coat, Hat, Vest and His Reliance on Mankind Gone at One Stroke--Visit.

The next time that John J. McMillan, who says that he hails from Bethel, hears a hard luck story he will certainly be in a position to appreciate all the harrowing details, having had considerable of an experience with hard luck and incidentally with rum during the past few days.

John drifted into town last Friday, with perhaps the avowed intention of hatching up all the red liquor in sight. If so, he made a good start, and that was the beginning of his trouble. He had progressed so far Friday night that he became trustful of any and all. That was his mistake, which he discovered soon.

To cap the climax, McMillan had, on arriving in Barre, left his valise, containing clothes, etc., on a seat in the Central Vermont depot. When he thought of the valise again, it with its extra clothing was gone. McMillan may have started in to drown his sorrow then, for Saturday night he was found by Patrolman Carle lying in a new cellar on Cottage street.

FOUND A REVOLVER.

But It Was Not on the Person Who Was Arrested.

Montpelier, June 10.—Cosimo Selliotti, who is said to have cleaned out a gang of workmen on the Barre & Montpelier Traction company's road recently, was lodged in the county jail Saturday night. When arrested Selliotti's pockets did not disclose any weapons, but some cartridges were found on him.

The officers say that they saw him slip some articles over to a man nearby. When that person was searched a revolver, of the same size as the cartridges, was found.

COBBLE STONES, GOLD NUGGETS.

Strange Acting Man is Being Held For Examination.

A small middle-aged man, giving his name as Alex Hanson, was in the police station at 7 o'clock last evening and asked for lodging over night. The strange actions and talk of the man aroused the suspicion of Chief Faulkner as to his being in his right mind and this morning the chief notified Overseer of the Poor O. D. Sturtevant, who will have Hanson examined as to his sanity.

In talking with the chief Hanson said that he had been working in a lumber camp in the northern part of Maine and afterwards, that he had worked two hours and a half in a lumber camp in New Hampshire. He was carrying with him several large pieces of stone down up in a bran sack and paper. His pockets were filled with cobble stones which he said were gold nuggets and he said that the large stones in the bundle were "coming all right."

LAW WAS REPEALED.

Discriminating Between Resident and Non-Resident Taxpayers.

The law which made discrimination between resident and non-resident taxpayers in the matter of estate tax debts owing, and which was declared illegal by the Vermont Supreme court, was repealed by the Vermont legislature of 1906.

At the hearing before the board of civil authority on appeals from assessors' appraisals, held Friday evening, Attorney Richard A. Hunt, appearing for C. N. Field, called attention to the fact that the law had been found illegal. Since that meeting Mr. Hunt and members of the board of civil authority have discovered that the legislature of 1906 wiped out the law. Whether or not this knowledge will have any effect on Mr. Field's appeal will be decided at to-night's meeting of the board of civil authority.
