There's music in the air at Rutland; the license commissioners have been accused of specific charges. John D. Spellman is turning the crank.

Beginning today the selectmen of Vermont towns can cut down the weeds from highways and charge the expense to the owners. However, a ten days' notice must be given. Better clip down those weeds.

Barre certainly needs better depot accommodations, and that hustling city hopes that the day is not far distant when a depot adequate to their needs will fall to their lot.—Bradford Opinion.

Expert opinion from a substantial and discerning source. We are prepared to swear to it.

President Darwin P. Kingsley of the New York Life Insurance company shows the bent of his early training by declaring for the "widest, fairest and fullest publicity" of his administration of the company's business.
President Kingsley was a newspaper man shortly after leaving the university of Vermont.

With the beginning of its thirteenth year the Enosburgh Standard comes to our desk in an entirely new form—eight pages, new type, new dress throughout —and moreover, printed on a new press and folded on a new folding machine.
Altogether the change is so complete that we at first failed to recognize the contemporary. That Messrs. Rose and Tyler have made a vast improvement in their journal goes without saying.
So good is it that the enterprising publishers deserve all that their field affords, and The Times trusts that a corresponding measure of success will come to them.

How to Succeed as a Bard.
"What," asked the beautiful maiden,
"is your idea of success?"

"Being able," replied the poet, "to write things in which even the clubs that are formed to study them can find no meaning."—Chicago Record-Herald.

No Homemade Things.
Mrs. Ascum—i see you're going in for society. Has your daughter made her debut yet?

Mrs. Nuritch—What! Well, I guess not! She got all them things made to order in Paris.—Philadelphia Press.

One Sort of Humor.
Jokeley—Our friend Dudley has a humor that's quite contagious.

Conkley—What, that dull fellow! He must have developed it very recently.
Jokeley—Yes; it's scarlet rash.—Philadelphia Press.

A BUSINESS PARABLE.

You Cannot Fail to Appreciate the Point in This Story.

Once a farmer had 1,800 bushels of wheat, which he sold not to a single grain merchant, but to 1,800 different dealers, a bushel each. A few of them paid him in cash, but far the greater number said it was not convenient then; they would pay later. A few months passed and the man's bank account ran low. "How is this?" he said. "My 1,800 bushels of grain should have kept me in affluence until another crop is raised, but I have parted with the grain and have instead only a vast number of accounts, so small and scattered that I cannot get around and collect fast enough to pay expenses."

So he posted up a public notice and asked all those who owed him to pay quickly. But few came. The rest said, "Mine is only a small matter, and I will go and pay one of these days," forgetting that, though each account was very small, when all were put together they meant a large sum to the man.
Things went on thus. The man got to feeling so bad that he fell out of bed and awoke and, running to his granary, found his 1,800 bushels of wheat still safe there. He had only been dreaming.

Moral—The next day the man went to the publisher of his paper and said:
"Here, sir, is the pay for your paper, and when next year's subscription is due you can depend on me to pay it promptly. I stood in the position of an editor last night, and I know how it feels to have one's honestly earned money scattered all over the country in small amounts."—Exchange.

His Mistake.
"Yes," said the musical young woman, "we spent the whole evening trying to play a new sort of polka."
"You don't say," replied Jack Potts.
"Was the limit?"—Houston Post.

Willing.
Mrs. Handout—If I give you your dinner will you carry a message over to the next village for me?
Tired Tim—Wid pleasure, mam.
Where is yer motor car?—Puck.

JINGLES AND JESTS

About the Size of It.
Little Willie—What's a bore, pa?
Pa—Everybody is a bore to somebody, my son.—Detroit Tribune.

The Summer Resort Mosquito.
The landlord views them with disdain.
Yet of the many there
'Fis they alone who ne'er complain >About the bill of fare.
—Washington Star.

Sterilized.
Knicker—Is his money tainted?
Bocker—No; it's all in convertible bonds.—New York Sun.

Can't Preserve Both.
The housewife views with failing nerve Preserving time's proximity.
She fears she can't at once preserve
Her fruits and equanimity.
—Judge.

The Omnipresent.
"Don't you ever play bridge nowadays, Mrs. Dean?"
"No. It takes all my time to play Bridget."—Puck.

A Notable Exception.
"Everything is rushed along nowadays. Nothing goes up by degrees."
"Ever notice a thermometer in the dog days?"—Baltimore American.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Liar's are often expert jugglers of figures, however.

When a child don't know what else to do it puts in a stirring time at wanting what it can't get.

A homely man isn't necessarily fond of home.

Forgiveness is largely a matter of perspective.

The biggest bore of them all is the one who makes a habit of dropping in informally.

Man has never been able to understand women, and that's where the graft comes in.

An undertaker by any other name would be just as grim.

An aggressive disposition is actively stimulated by lack of size in the other fellow.

Don't criticize another's conduct till you have been in the same situation yourself and then the chances are that you will want to resign.

The first thing you notice about some people is that their voices are not constructed for singing lullabies.

Had Read About Them.
"You say you prefer country girls?"
"Yes; they have such sweet simplicity."

"Do they, indeed?"
"And are so unsophisticated."
"Really? Say, you haven't been in the country lately. The farmer's daughter these days is a graduate of at least one university, a music college and a school of acting. You have to go to the city for your sweet simplicity."

A Sad Blow.
"SORRY, DUKE,
BUT WE CAN'T AFFORD YOU NOW!"

"Was he hit in the Wall street durry?"
"Well, I should say he was. His fortune melted away like a fat bluffer when the policemen are coming."
"Then he will have to economize in his way of living."
"He will that. Why, he had planned to buy his daughter a duke, and now she will have to be satisfied with a plain American."

The Bright Side.

"After all, the life of the horny handed son of toil has its recompenses," a bit grimly remarked the honest but eminently astute agriculturalist. "It is true that as angular agriculturalists are cartooned in the comic papers, lampooned and occasionally babooned on the stage and are frequently run over by automobiles, and the poets sing, sing-hey and a ron-dely without any special provocation as far as I can see about us, and we are kept pretty busy hawking off agents of various kinds and being everlastingly tickled for our impudence in the best magazines by clean limbed young college men with pale, dissipated faces and are considerably kicked by the lolling line, stung by the busy bee and are forever losing our wallets and our equilibrium every time we get as far as seven miles from home, but still I admire to say that I believe we are about as well off as the city men, who, according to what I read in the papers, suffer from the social ambitions of their women folks, the slings and arrows of them they elect to office, the wiles of adventuresses, biots and all such as that on their escutcheons and the thousand and one fads, follies and foibles that afflict people who feel that they must keep up appearances and a lifelong warfare with first mortgage bonds, second mortgage bonds, improvement bonds, refunding bonds, blanket mortgage bonds, common stock, preferred stock, treasury stock, watered stock, the old Knickerbocker stock, consolidated first, second and third mortgage bonds and incidentally in a good many cases the galling bonds of wedlock.

"I believe I'll stick to the old farm for a spell yet. It ain't near as picturesque as the city, but it also lacks quite a good deal of being as strenuous."—Tom P. Morgan in Puck.

Compromise.

"And you will give us your blessing?" asked the eloping bride, returned to the parental roof.

"Freely," replied the old man. "No trouble about the blessing, but board and lodging will be at regular rates."— Philadelphia Ledger.

Awake on the Tip Question.
The regular patron was indignant as the waiter spilled the soup.
"You're tipsy!" he exclaimed.
"Couldn't be on your tips! See?" responded the waiter, at least not so inebriated as to impede his mental processes.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Most Interesting.
"Is her husband so unendurably stupid?"
"Oh, dreadful! The only time he brightens up is when she talks of divorce!"—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Equal to the Occasion.
The Countess Waldgrave was married four times. One evening she appeared at the opera in Dublin during her fourth husband's occupancy of the post of chief secretary for Ireland.
An audacious Celt, catching sight of her ladyship in one of the boxes, shouted out with real Irish temerity, "Lady Waldgrave, which of the four did you like best?"
The countess was equal to the occasion. Without a moment's hesitation she rose from her seat and exclaimed enthusiastically, "Why, the Irishman, of course"—a remark which naturally "brought down the house."

Paradoxically enough when the dove of peace sits brooding mischief is apt to hatch out directly.
Some of our most innocuous citizens carry around a look tragical enough to belong to the Russian dooms.

One reason for the outbreak of many lithero quiet citizens may be that they think that one way to get attention is to need it badly.
Everybody admires the honest workingman and thanks God that there is none of him in them.

Nobody minds being a fool if he can keep from being found out.
Hopeful.
I sit around in comfort
And doze the time away.
Regardless of the warning
That such things do not pay.
Though busy men, my grumbles
That resting is a sin.
I'm waiting till my strapin Comes in.

Sometimes I find a hammock Where lookout I can keep
To see if it is coming.
Unless I fall asleep.
Then I am sure to see it.
Unless my dreams get mixed;
It settles down and leaves me
Well fixed.

I know some people argue
If I should work a spell
At hard and useful labor
That I could not as well.
Such methods may be suited To mortals who are blessed With something like abhorrence For rest.

Of course I am not certain
That it will ever come
And had me in a fortune
That totals quite a sum.
I will not go in mourning
If it I never see,
Because this state of waiting Suits me.

An advertisement in the Times will bring sure results.
