

Out of the maze of manufacturers of Clothing we step with samples of the finest garments. In the U. S. there are about 1900 Clothing manufacturers, so it's not so easy to pick out the best. For some years we have kept pace with the improvements and we know where the best products in Suits, in Overcoats, in special Trousers and in fancy Vests are to be had and have secured 'em. We have a Made-to-Order Department second to none in Barre.

THE VALUE OF COLLEGE ATHLETICS.

The reason why Miss Anna T. Jeanes made elimination of athletic contests a condition precedent to the deliverance of her fortune to Swarthmore college is that she was a Quakeress, and so opposed by her belief to strife. In her mind and creed athletic contests, as at present carried on in the colleges, differ not in any essential quality from the wars in which men kill each other. The idea is a false one, but unfortunately it is not confined to Quaker minds.

A successful athletic trainer, who had experience with every sort of athletics known to the colleges, once gave valuable testimony to a virtue of foot ball generally overlooked. "The fellow who can't keep his temper," he used to say, "can never make a football player. When I began to play the game I was quick tempered. I used to get angry when an antagonist stopped me roughly. But I very soon found that to give way to that anger lost me ground, if it did not show me up as a fool before the fellows. Playing football cured me of getting mad. I can control my temper now."

While this is more particularly true of football, it illustrates strikingly the difference between the healthy and sportsmanlike strife of the colleges in their athletic sports and the sort of strife to which the Quaker creed object. The contests which try young men's muscles, properly conducted, do their spirits good, teach them that wisdom and self-control, that calmness and level-headedness, which are the best possible preventatives against the strife that is really destructive. Miss Jeanes would have much better advanced her

PLAYING HUGHES VS. ROOSEVELT.

One of the astonishing features of the Hughes strength as a presidential candidate is the heterogeneity of the ranks in his support. Gov. Hughes has made his opinions fairly well known. Maintaining silence as to his "boom," he has not hesitated to put himself before the people as governor in fact and in spirit, and no one can fail to understand the principle for which he stands. Yet we find Benjamin Odel in the front ranks of those urging his name; Gruber is hardly less ardent. The Foraker who have put Hughes above Taft. Interest is being lined up for him. Why? The explanation is evident. There is a more or less concerted attempt to read into Gov. Hughes' attitude and politics an antagonism to President Roosevelt. The Brooklyn Eagle, approaching the matter from the other end, claims to see a positive Roosevelt antipathy to Hughes. At all events, it is clear that certain political and business interests are seeking to groom Gov. Hughes for a race not so much for the presidency as to be an opponent to President Roosevelt. The situation is so developing that Gov. Hughes may suffer severely from it. He has stood, in New York state for much the same things that President Roosevelt has stood for in the nation. If they have differed it has been only as to method, and the difference has been inspired by temperament, not by motive. Gov. Hughes could not win the nomination or the election as an anti-Roosevelt republican. It is safe to say that he realizes this fact and that he is averse to appearing in that role, whether he has presidential aspirations or not. Just at present he is handicapped more by his supporters than he ever was by his opportunity.—Boston Advertiser.

RANDOLPH.

Mrs. Sarah Thompson has been quite ill for a few days. Mrs. Russell Martin, from Los Angeles, is shortly to visit friends in Randolph. Mrs. B. L. Lombard, who has been very ill at her home on Randolph avenue, is now improving. H. D. Martin left here Friday for his home in Woodstock, Ohio, after remaining in town three weeks.

A meeting of the stockholders of the Hingham company was held at the store of W. E. Lamson on Friday evening, Oct. 4, at 7:30 o'clock. Miss Mary Hedwood goes to Manchester, N. H., next week to enter a library there for study, with the idea of making that her work in the future. The meeting of the Randolph Woman's Literary club with Mrs. Belle D. DuBois on Saturday was postponed on account of the funeral services of Mrs. William H. DuBois.

Madam Jacoby Concert company in Music Hall Thursday night drew a fair audience, who were richly repaid for their attendance, the entire company being link skilled artists, and the concert given by them was of a high order.

The people of Randolph are pleased to know that the sanatorium is not to be closed, as was feared, on account of the prospect of financial embarrassment. A meeting of the directors has been held and an arrangement made whereby it is hoped that a more substantial basis will be made in the future. The position of head nurse and superintendent are to be combined, and a visiting board of physicians, six of them to serve free of charge, two months each, in rotation. The ones who have consented to this plan are Dr. Gifford, who goes soon to New York for study, and Drs. Scott, Angell, Houston, Rumrill and Bailey. W. H. Gladding has been appointed agent, and is to superintend the purchasing of supplies, look after accounts, the hiring or dismissing of help, and like duties, and the company feels confident that under his skillful management, affairs may be adjusted satisfactorily. Two hundred dollars have been given by the Sanatorium Aid society, and $400 by others, which will relieve the present condition. A committee on raising or soliciting a fund has also been appointed.
