MONDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1907.

It's all over on the diamond but the shouting for the pennant winners, and a few more games that are not likely to deprive the Cubs and the Tigers of the championships of the two leagues. Speaking generally, it has been one of the most prosperous and interesting seasons in the history of the game. The achievements of the Boston club have been nothing to boast of, but they have at least done their share in contributing to the enjoyment of the thousands of spectators who take delight in witnessing the game when it is played with a reasonable degree of skill, whether it is the kind that wins championships or not. There is no doubt that baseball is still our leading national game in point of popularity, and that its grip on public favor is increasing rather than diminishing.—Boston Herald.

Massachusetts Democrats have always been noted for doing things out of the ordinary, and the action of Saturday's convention is so much of a surprise as it would have in the same party in some other state. The shutting out of the delegates favorable to one candidate in order that those favoring the other might control the convention and nominate their man may be "practical politics," but it is of a kind that doesn't promise well in results. The Whitney men, it seems, however, weren't wise in the political ways of their own party. In the days of Benj. F. Butler, that doughty general marched up to Worcester, Mass., and his delegates clambered up ladders and in through the windows and captured the convention. In the opinion of many politicians of the Bay state, General Bartlett could have been elected if he had been the nominee last year, but he would have none of it. This year when there were chances of electing a man like Whitney, Mr. Bartlett wants it. Result: Neither will get it, and although there are many Republicans who are dissatisfied with Governor Guild, the governor will get a re-election for a third term without much effort.

STANDARD OIL PROPERTY AND PROFITS.

That this concern is preparing to reorganize on the basis of greater publicity in its affairs than has ever obtained before, seems to be further indicated by a semi-official publication for the first time of its income account and balance sheet. Not before has the public been admitted to so deep a view into its affairs. The income account is for the calendar year 1906 and shows net profits on the business of the parent company, the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, of $9,571,906. Then from some 50 subsidiary companies, whose stocks are in whole or part owned by the Standard company of New Jersey, the latter received $53,227,387 in dividends. Then there is added and credited to uncollected earnings the net increase in value of corporate stocks, carried as investments, the sum of $20,222,869. Income for 1906 thus presents itself in the following form with deductions appended:

Net profit own business..... $9,571,906
Dividends from stock holdings 53,227,387
Increase in investment values 20,222,869

Totals profits for the year..... $83,122,232
Dividends paid (40 per cent.) 33,253,320

Balance, surplus..... $49,768,932
Previous accumulated surplus, 217,274,879

Total surplus to 1907..... $261,041,811
The dividends of 40 per cent. were paid, of course, on the capital stock of the Standard company of New Jersey. Even with the payment of such dividends, and making no account of the increase in investment values, the company divided less than two-thirds of the year's net profits. The balance sheet enters $15,289,451 as the value of the plant of the parent company; its security holdings are given a book value of $361,609,309; inventories of merchandise, $17,871,421; accounts receivable,

WE respectfully invite all those who desire to open a new bank account, or who contemplate making a change in their present banking arrangements, to call and talk the matter over with our officers.

It was a blind mine into which people have bought who have invested in Standard Oil stock; but very substantial riches evidently were to be found there.—Springfield Republican.

MONTPELIER

John McIver shipped his household goods Saturday to Megantic, P. Q., where he is to reside in the future.

Thomas Shortt is negotiating with a Groton man for the sale of his lunch cart. Mr. Shortt wishes to dispose of his business on account of Mrs. Shortt's ill health.

The first meeting of the creditors of the bankrupt estate of Herbert N. Cheney of Barre, a carpenter, will be held at the office of referee W. X. Theriault at 10 a. m. on Oct. 11th.

The National Life Insurance company, through S. S. Ballard, general agent, has just paid to Myra A. Norris, widow of the late Charles A. Norris of Williamstown, their check for $1,000, which was the amount of insurance carried by Mr. Norris.

The Rev. L. F. Reed leaves today for Cleveland, Ohio, to attend the national council of Congregational churches to be held in that city from October 8 to 17. Mrs. Helen F. Reed, his mother, who has been visiting him for several weeks, will accompany him as far as Cleveland on her way to her home at Weeping Water, Neb.

J. B. Williams, the decorator, who has had charge of re-ventilating several rooms in the State House, has suspended work for two weeks while he goes to Washington, D. C., and New York on business. While in the former city he will inspect several rooms at the national capital to get new ideas in regard to completing the work at the Vermont State House.

Several officials of the Orange County Telephone company were in town Saturday discussing the best manner to build over the Northfield lines. Among those present were G. R. Andrews of Northfield, president of the company, E. A. Covell of Montpelier, manager, and directors C. N. Barber of Barre Town and C. U. Lathrop of Williamstown.

W. A. Loyd closed the arguments for the defense Saturday in the malpractice case of Lawson vs. Hall & Crane and John H. Senter summed up for the plaintiff. A recess was taken until this afternoon at two o'clock when Judge E. L. Waterman delivered his charge to the jury. The next case for trial is that of Hiram B. Wedge, administrator of the estate of Israel Guilmette vs. the Central Vermont Railway company.

Freeman Hayden has applied for a license to peddle milk under the new city ordinance, and one other dealer made application before the blanks were received, but has not called at the office since their arrival. Harrison Lombard says he is going to comply with the law. He has made application to have his cows tested and when that is done he wants to have the health officer visit his stable and look it over to see that it is up to the sanitary requirements. He wants to and will furnish pure milk, he says, and all his efforts will be in that direction, but if he cannot succeed he wants to be given a chance of going out of business before the city fines him. He, however, believes that the whole matter will work out right in the end. While the milk dealers cannot agree unanimously on this matter any more than they have on others in the past, yet among a large share of them there is a disposition to obey the ordinance, and it is not believed there will be any trouble when the time comes for the by-laws to become operative.

RANDOLPH.

Mr. Webster of Burlington is in town, the guest of his sister, Mrs. H. A. Leonard.

Mrs. Besse Dupuy of Barre is visiting her mother, Mrs. Gertrude Farnsworth, in Randolph avenue.

Mrs. Messer and her daughter went to Boston on Monday and Miss Mary Lamson accompanied them.

Mr. Church, who is employed by Mr. Pantou in the market, has moved to the Peabody house on Dudley street.

There was a service of the Junior League at the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon. Miss Bessie Davenport being the leader.

A quartet composed of Misses Bailey and Howard and A. H. Besse and Edwin Martin went to East Randolph to sing at the funeral of Maud Hall, on Sunday afternoon.

Rev. and Mrs. George Howe leave here on the 10th for California. Their first stop of a few days will be in Chicago and from there will continue their journey to Denver, and Colorado Springs taking time to visit other points of interest. At Oakland and San Francisco a longer time will be spent, after which they will go to Pasadena for several weeks, where they will visit the family of Henson Bailey, who formerly lived here. After a stay possibly two or three months they come by the southern route to Southern Pines in North Carolina, where they remain through the entire winter.

LAUGHED AT FEARS.

But Was Killed By Fiery Steed Which He Drove.

New York, Oct. 7.—William Francis Coxford, 50 years old, a gun dealer and a member of the Old Guard, was killed and his wife was seriously injured in a runaway yesterday. The Coxfords had left the Narragansett hotel, their home, for a drive on Riverside drive. They occupied a light road cart drawn by a big bay horse the spirited behavior of which, before the start, caused friends of the couple to plead with them to forego the ride.

Mr. Coxford laughingly replied that he had driven the animal before and could again. But no sooner had the Coxfords turned into the drive than the horse took the bit in its teeth and ran away for nine blocks. The cart was finally dashed against a tree by the roadside and the Coxfords were thrown out. Mr. Coxford's head striking the tree, he died without regaining consciousness. Mrs. Coxford will probably recover.

The Interesting Love.

My darling, when we two were wed and pledged to be true, 'Tis certain that my vows were said to less than half of you. I swore to "have you and to hold" In love a supreme enfolding. But now, to let the truth be told, I cannot do the holding.

I cannot place mine arms around With an encircling clasp. For when I try there still is found Some more than I can grasp. However ample my ideal, The vision of my darling, I still discover that the real Surpasses my embracing.

Some tell us love is sure to wane As years and troubles grow; My love has made an annual gain Of half a stone or so. Time was I nursed the burden eye Upon my knees ecstatic. But now I find the weight of joy Is something too emphatic.

Some speak of idols falling short, But mine is falling great. You may have foibles, but your forte Exceeds with rapid rate. I dream about the years to come As weights, for you to do them; For some are born to greatness—some Have greatness thrust upon them. —Puck.

No Consolation.

"Yes, it must be a terrible thing to go through life without your limb, but you must remember it will be restored to you in the next world."
"I know it will, mum, but dat don't encourage me, for it wuz cut off when I wuz a baby an' it won't come within a couple of foot of de ground."—Life.

To Sophia's Eyes.

Sweet Sophia's wondrous eyes! Help, oh Muse, to point them truly, As they are, and not unduly Land their beauty to the skies, Blue, bewitching, deep, unriely— Sweet Sophia's wondrous eyes!

Sparkling, dreamy, mystic, wise— Complex with a myriad fancies, Evagant with love-compelling glances Eyes that tell a million lies! Help, oh Muse, I'm taking chances— Paint out Sweet Sophia's eyes!

Not So Brave.

"Yes," said Meekly, "I'm told that we're going to move to Swamphurst."
"But," said the old doctor, "the climate there may disagree with your wife."
"It wouldn't dare!"—Philadelphia Press.

THREE AUTHORS.

Prolific authors, noble three, I do my derby off to ye.

"Selected," dear old chap, who knows The quantity of verse and prose That you have signed in all these years! You've dulled how many thousand hours! You've filled, at a tremendous rate, A million miles of "boller plate"— A wreath of laurel for your brow! A stirrup-cup to you—here's how!

And you, dear "Did," Ah, you wrote Too many things for me to quote, Though Bartlett, of quotation fame, Plays up your unpoetic name. More than he did to Avon's bard, Your stuff's on every page, old pard. Bouquets to you the writer flings; You wrote a lot of dandy things.

And you, O last, O greatest one, A word with you, and I have done. You, dear "Exchange," that ever floats Around with verses, anecdotes And jokes. Oh, what a lot you sign! (Quite frequently a thing of mine). Why, it would not be very strange If I should see this signed—Exchange. I do my derby off to ye!

—Franklin P. Adams, in Century.
