West Derry, N. H., Oct. 8.—When Cyril Legrolean, 612, was ordered from his home about 6:15 o'clock last evening by his son, Fred Legrolean, 29, and his daughter-in-law, his gun sent a charge of shot into the abdomen of the son, fatally wounding him.

Cyril Legrolean, who is a carpenter in the Montgomery district, about three miles from Derry village, had been at work all day. Upon returning to his home he was met by his son, who, with the latter's wife, ordered him from the house.

An altercation ensued between the men, and the elder Legrolean, who claims to have had a gun and a bundle of clothes in his arms, says that as he turned to one side the butt of the weapon hit the side of a door and was discharged, the contents entering his son's abdomen and inflicting a frightful wound.

The old man immediately started for the village for a priest, that the latter might administer the last rites of the church in case the wound should prove fatal, but his horse gave out and Tax Collector John E. Webster carried the priest to the house and then returned and notified Chief of Police A. B. Roberts, who, with special officer Frank Dumont, went to the scene of the shooting and placed Cyril Legrolean under arrest.

Edward Curtis, son-in-law of Legrolean, was held as a witness and both were brought to town and locked up. Dr. S. J. Cogswell attended the wounded man, and at 10 o'clock it was stated that death was only a matter of a short time.

Neighbors say the father and son have had frequent quarrels, and Fred, it is stated, had been drinking heavily. He has figured in police courts during the past two years.
