"The Mayor of Laughland."

Few Irish comedians have so large a following throughout the country as Tom Waters, who comes to the opera house tonight in his newest musical farce, "The Mayor of Laughland." Gradually, year after year, his vogue has been increasing, until now his advent in any city of fair size means an overflowing house and clamorous demands for a return engagement. Mr. Waters' popularity is based on actual worth. His methods are the kind that make success, and now that he has been taken under the Nixon & Zimmerman wing, his success is more than assured. This year he has been given a costly equipment and sent on the road with a large and efficient company. There are a dozen able fun-makers besides Mr. Waters, and an even score of merry coryphees, who caper nimbly through the dances that accompany the various musical numbers. Mr. Waters, by the way, writes all of his own songs and may be given credit for some of the catchiest selections of the seasons. Among the most pronounced hits may be mentioned "The Ghost of Davy Jones," "Black-Eyed Biddy Flynn," "Soldiers of the U. S. A.," and a quaint musical comic called "Esk!" During the action of the comedy the chorus has in less than eleven complete changes of costume.
