"The Train Robbers" which will be presented by Carl Henry Lewis' company at the opera house Saturday is founded upon the recent hold up of the Pacific Railroad company's Air line, limited, but unlike any other play dealing with characters of this kind no attempt has been made to make a hero out of the leaders of the ou-av, nor in any way surround him with a glamor of romance. The fact of the robbery is but an incident in an admirably constructed play, the characters of which are in every way human, doing just those things which real people placed in the same position would do, and saying those things that real people would say. Simply told—richly embellished with scenery and staged with attention to small details, which always characterizes a perfect production, the performance of "The Train Robbers" is far above the average melodramatic entertainment and worthy of the patronage accorded it. Prices for this performance are as follows: Matinee 15 and 25 cents. Night 25, 35 and 50 cents.
