The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was

4,570

Samuel Gompers also knows what it is to be a president and stand all the hard knocks.

William Fairbanks says that he feels that he has been granted a new lease of life, and he has—a life sentence.

The western college president who is living on peanuts and bonbons will be in good training for the circus next summer.

There wasn't so much "Hoeh der Kaiser-ing" in England yesterday, but what Sir Percy Scott's silly little fling could be heard above the din.

The burglar who broke into a Barre house, ransacked all the rooms and then stole thirty dollars, "capped the climax" by appropriating a hat.

The native cunning of the Indian finds its best chance to work in the new style of foot ball, which permits of more trick plays than ever before. Hence this success that has thus far crowned the efforts of the Carlisle foot ball eleven this season. With one exception, the Pale Faces have gone down to ignominious defeat.

The $40,000,000 in gold that is being brought to the United States from Europe to relieve the money stringency is simply returning to its own; with this difference, that when our hussies carried it over they charged no interest to the titled folk, and now we are compelled to pay a good-sized rate of discount. That was scarcely a fair reciprocity, to be sure, but so long as American girls of wealth are lured by foreign titles we shall continue to have the same business balance against us.

Says the St. Albans Messenger: "The verdict of guilt of murder in the second degree in the Fairbanks case and the swift sentence of the respondent to imprisonment for life that followed it appear to have been accepted by public opinion as sufficient vindication of the law. In other words, there has been no demand for the gallows. Indirectly, perhaps, but the Messenger believes none the less certainly, the steadily growing popular abhorrence of capital punishment is reflected in just such instances as this." Look at the Niles case in Orleans county court also. A second degree murder verdict was readily accepted by the prosecution.

BOOMING IRISH INDUSTRIES.

There will be a wave of sympathy for Ireland in her efforts at industrial re-awakening, the first steps of which are being taken. One of the means to that end is the stirring up of the American market for Irish goods, particularly Irish lace, and the work is now being allotted to Fr. O'Flanagan of Sligo, Ireland. That there is need for his work is shown by the tremendous decline of exports from Ireland to the United States. In 1891 the total exports were $68,000,000, and in 1904 they were only $12,000,000. This may be laid to the tariff, but Fr. O'Flanagan points out that the tariff is not responsible for the falling-off, as the exports from Scotland to the United States have been steadily increasing, while all the time the Irish exports were going down hill. The fault lies elsewhere.

An attempt is also being made in Ireland to develop a home market for home products. For instance, take the seemingly small product, matches. Heretofore, the Irish have been largely using matches which were manufactured in some other country. But latterly a spirit of patriotism to home industries has sprung up, and the Irish are pushing the sale of matches manufactured in their own country. Buy a box of matches in Ireland now, and you are pretty certain to find inscribed in large letters on the box, "Made in Dublin," or some other city of Erin's Isle. The stranger is at once struck by the oddness of the inscription, but he realizes then that it is only a phase of the industrial reawakening of the country, the developing of a patriotism to home industries which is destined to wonderfully help in the general upbuilding. By impressing upon the consumer that the goods are a product of their own land, the manufacturers feel certain that the Irishman's loyalty will prompt him afterwards to buy none but the Irish make. Hence, the purpose underlying the inscription on the match box. Such a little thing will go a long way toward developing the home market. Meanwhile, the foreign market is being worked up, by such agents as Fr. O'Flanagan, who has been in Boston the first of the present week.

VERMONT'S MINERAL EXHIBIT. Just now, when criticism is being heaped upon nearly everything that Vermont has done or attempted to do at the exposition which is passing into history, it is pleasing to have opportunity to deviate from the general trend and put in a word of satisfaction, or as near satisfaction as possible. The Times informed its readers last week that the Vermont collective mineral exhibit at Jamestown had been granted a silver medal for excellence, there being over one hundred specimens of work in marble, granite, slate, and other products of these hills. Vermonters who have been realizing that they put $10,000 in a hole in the ground when their legislature appropriated that amount of money for state representation, will therefore find some measure of relief in the thought that they have something for their money.

One of our customers complained that the new Fall Shirts he bought from us are so attractive that he wastes valuable time trying to decide which one to put on. A full assortment is now on our counter, stiff bosoms or the new soft bosoms, all new designs. Agents in Barre for Elgin Union-made Shirts.

This medal was gained, too, in the face of the serious difficulties which the Vermont commissioners experienced in getting the manufacturers of the state to do anything. Nothing short of the highest award for a collective mineral exhibit should have come to Vermont if we were going to exhibit at all. No state in the union stands in the same class with Vermont in the production of marble. Only one turns out more granite and not one equals us in the superiority of granite as to quality and workmanship. In slate, Vermont stands well to the front.

In view of these facts, why should not Vermont have taken the highest award instead of the silver medal (we take it there was a higher award than a silver medal) as she did? Nothing except the backwardness of her manufacturers in co-operating with the commission stood in the way of complete supremacy in this classification. If producers of these three stones, with what few others Vermont can present, had joined hands they would have swept the blue ribbon from any and all states.

So, instead of continuing to throw all the criticism on the commissioners and their little bungalow, let's turn a few of the shafts of criticism on ourselves. Here was a chance for Vermont to shine, whereas we never could have shone with such empire states as New York in the grandeur of buildings; and we let it slip. It's better to build a reputation for progress in industry than to build a house, whether a bungalow or palace. The paltry sum which the legislature tell once a fire gets started in your building or home where it will stop or how much damage will result. But if insured, you can tell your builder to begin rebuilding at once—and your fire insurance will foot the bills. See us about your policy.

appropriated could have done real service in advertising the resources of the state, with the co-operation of those who would have been directly and grandly benefited. Another time, if we feel constrained to loose our pocket strings to the seductive call of the advance agent of an exposition, let's be more circumspect in the manner of its expenditure and put it where it will count for something.

CURRENT COMMENT.

That Exhibit.

We believed that $10,000 was ample considering the size and scope of the exposition to have reasonably well advertised the resources, business and attractions of the state had not the commissioners foolishly spent half the appropriation in erecting a building which has proved a Jonah on their hands.

The Banner has perhaps criticized the commission as severely as anybody but we have never doubted the honesty and good intentions of Mr. Prouty and his colleagues. They did what seemed to them best and have never undertaken to dodge the responsibility for their acts. The Banner believed from the start that the commission was too large to handle such a matter to the best advantage and that commission made its great mistake at the very beginning by deciding to build a Vermont building.

It would have been much wiser, it seems to us, to have used all the money available in showing up state products to the best advantage and advertising the resources and attractions of the state. As it has turned out the commission has fallen between two stools, the building erected was not satisfactory and after the money for it was spent there was not enough left to do the other part of the work in a manner creditable to the state, in other words the theory adopted by the Vermont commission failed to work out.

As to Mr. Prouty's wall that the criticism of the commission was an un-derhand method of getting in a slap at his political aspirations, it is unworthy of him. As far as the Banner is concerned it simply isn't true. Nor do we believe that any considerable number of the thousands of other Vermonters who have criticized the work of the commission have had any thought in mind other than the credit and good name of Vermont. We are surprised and shocked that a man of Mr. Prouty's age and experience should cry-baby in any such childish way.

If this is the way Mr. Prouty is measuring himself up before the state of Vermont—first to take a leading part in diverting half the Vermont appropriation from the legitimate channel for which it was intended and then to squeal when the responsibility is brought home to him—we are more than ever convinced that it is the duty of Governor Proctor to consent to a renomination and give our clever and well meaning lieutenant governor two years more to broaden out before he is given charge of the rudder of the ship of state.—Dennington Banner.

"The Heart of Maryland."

The revival of a sterling, perfectly constructed play to the stage of its former triumphs is always in order and welcome, however familiar it may have become by its frequent repetitions and long "runs" to the playgoing public. So it is safe to record that David Belasco's "The Heart of Maryland," will be greeted with demonstrations of favor by a large and gratified audience at the opera house on Wednesday evening.
