

BATTLE FLEET AT TRINIDAD

Official Announcement Received To-day

AT THE NAVY DEPARTMENT

Admiral Evans Cabled That His Fleet Had Reached the North Coast of South America on the Way to the Pacific.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 24.—Official announcement of the arrival of the battleship fleet at Trinidad Island was received by cable from Admiral Evans at the navy department early today.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 24.—In a copyrighted article, prepared for the United Press, Richard E. Hobson, representative from Alabama, and former naval constructor, replied to recent criticisms of the navy by Henry Reuterthal and others.

Reuterthal and others, he says, are doing a public service in turning the searchlights upon the element of inefficiency. The question of armor belt is largely technical. While the belt may be submerged when the ships are heavily laden, he says that ships are not supposed to be in deep laden condition in a fight.

He agrees with Reuterthal regarding the faults of magazine construction and open turret ports. The lack of torpedoes and destroyers is worful. We have been too late in preparing for their manufacture by the government.

The article concludes: "Mr. Reuterthal has certainly rendered a distinct service. But this criticism should not shake the confidence of American people in their navy. In the last analysis a battle is the only test. I fully concur in his statement that battles are won long before they are fought, but so far as my meagre acquaintance and knowledge of our navy extends I believe if it were put to a supreme test of battle it would give the same good account of itself that it gave in wars of the past."

CAPTAIN AND WIFE DROWNED.

They Tried to Row Ashore From Sinking Barge.

New Haven, Dec. 24.—Refusing to take the advice of the captain of the tugboat James McWilliams, Capt. Henry Seaborn of the barge New Haven and his wife were drowned in the sound yesterday off Woodmont, while six others were rescued by the McWilliams just before the last barge in tow of the tug was holed.

The McWilliams with its string of esquadron scows was making slow headway on its run from New York to New Haven and met heavy seas off Woodmont. One of the barges broke away and soon the McWilliams was separated from its tow. The captain of the tugboat started to pull for the shore. After going a few yards their boat was capsized and both were drowned.

The crew on the McWilliams a few minutes later rescued the six men just before the barge went down, this one being the last of the seven to remain afloat.

SEVERE WIND STORM.

Chatham, Mass., and Vicinity Had Quite a Blow.

Chatham, Mass., Dec. 24.—For a short time yesterday afternoon (Chatham and its immediate neighborhood) experienced the most severe wind storm that can be remembered here. The wind, which had been only a moderate breeze, suddenly veered from south to southwest about 5 o'clock and swept along the shores so furiously that small boats on the beach were overturned, while further inland trees were uprooted, fences and chimneys blown over, and other movable things were knocked about in all directions.

The hurricane lasted not over five minutes. Then the wind died out and almost a calm prevailed for half an hour, when it freshened to a light westerly wind with rain, which continued at sunset.

While the wind was at its height a tug towing three light barges was sighted by the Old Harbor life savers passing south, but as she was outside the shoals and the wind was of shore, it is believed that she was able to reach a safe anchorage.

Voegelé, a 20-year-old youth, who pleaded guilty yesterday to an indictment charging him with black-mailing Raymond Hitchcock, the actor, was paroled to-day in custody of the Gerry society and sentence was suspended by Judge Rosalsky. His counsel presented a letter from President Taft in support of the young man, urging that the boy be let go and stating: "Although his methods were wrong, he has reason to believe that his sister had been ruined by this actor." The letter then declared that the district attorney's office seemed strangely lax in the prosecution of the Hitchcock case. This brought a long protest from Assistant District Attorney Garvan, and Judge Rosalsky had to end the discussion.

WILL GIVE DINNER TO 250 PEOPLE

Local Salvation Army Corps to Dispense Cheer in the Form of Basket Dinner To-morrow.

The local Salvation Army corps will to-morrow deliver to the homes of various people a free basket dinner, for which efforts have been put forth during the past week. They are now busily engaged in getting the baskets ready. They expect to be able to give dinners to 250 people. Each basket will contain a chicken, potatoes, apples, cranberries, coffee, sugar, bread, butter, and a few onions. The larger families will also receive vegetables of various kinds, such as carrots, beets, cabbage and squash.

Thus they will bring joy and sunshine into the homes of those who are unfortunate or who through sickness may be deprived of the chance to have a Christmas dinner. This basket dinner takes the place of the public dinner served in the Army barracks usually. The Salvationists think they can do more good in this way.

Any who have as yet failed to send in their contribution, either in food, clothing or cash, would confer a favor by doing so at once. On Christmas evening at the Salvation Army hall there will be a Christmas tree and treat for the poor children, and any having toys or presents they wish given to the poor can send them at any time on Christmas day and the articles will be thankfully received and given out to the poor.

WARE LOADED DOWN WITH CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Postmen and Expressmen in the Midst of Their Busy Times Just Now, Particularly the Former.

It could easily be seen to-day that the great gift-giving season was at hand by a glance at the crowds of shoppers. But more conclusively was it shown by the loads of packages carried by postmen and expressmen. This year these Barre dispensers of good cheer decided to be fore-handed, rather than to be compelled to dig themselves out from under the accumulations during the busiest period. So they worked overtime. In the express office, the employees were kept on the move all day Sunday, delivering the articles sent by the early gift-givers. By so doing they saved themselves much of the usual rush and confusion of to-day and to-morrow.

Uncle Sam's men got things assorted at odd times, and were able to start out on their deliveries on fairly good time. Most of them had assistants to-day, and one of them started out on the morning delivery with two helpers. They drew a basket of articles. There was, of course, the usual pleasure wherever the postman stopped.
