Whitney's latest edition of the piquant musical mixture, "Isle of Spice," which will be presented to the patrons of the opera house to-night, was staged under the personal direction of the greatest master of stage-craft in America, Mr. Gus Solko, is a result something decidedly novel is promised in conceivable pictures, dances, poses and marches. This delightful mixture of mirth, melody and beauty enjoys an enviable record as an entertainment. In every city in which it has been presented the press and theatre-goers have united in extolling it as the greatest attraction of its kind. A return engagement is invariably greeted by a capacity house and theatre patrons seem to grow more enthusiastic over it each time they see it. The many excellent musical numbers are said to be of the variety that are not intended for the rare individual alone, but for the great good-natured public which goes to the theatre for entertainment and relaxation from the cares and worries of this busy world.
