ARRESTED A NEGRO.

Believed That He Knows Something of Old Farmer's Murder.

Dover, Del., July 17.—In the arrest yesterday afternoon at Church, Maryland, of Caleb Watson, a negro farm hand, the authorities who are investigating the strange murder of William Williams, the aged farmer who lived just over the state line in Maryland and whose body was found hanging to a tree, the authorities who are investigating the case believe that they have made some progress. Interest is added to the arrest because the negro was employed by John Wessel, a son-in-law of Williams, as a farm hand, and because he assisted his employer in a search for Williams all day Monday.

He will be closely questioned in an attempt to ascertain his movements between Saturday night and Tuesday morning. On Williams' body was found a marriage license authorizing the ceremony between himself and Elizabeth Wells, aged 13 years, daughter of Samuel Wells, a tenant on Williams' farm.

In the investigation, the officials have met with contradictory statements, particularly as to the time Williams was last seen alive. John Wessel said that Williams was last seen on Saturday, but a neighbor today declared that he saw Williams on Wessel's farm on Monday.

Samuel Wells, father of the 13-year-old girl whom Williams desired to marry, was questioned today. He said that his daughter Elizabeth was not able to read or write and that Williams had never given her the girl anything but a brown wedding dress.

"My wife and I," he said, "were told some time ago that Williams was in love with Elizabeth and was going to steal her away. He met her down in the woods and he put his arms around her."

In telling about the wedding dress, Wells said that Williams took it into the house and hid it. The father said Williams told Elizabeth about it and she brought it and showed it to her mother.

The body of Williams was buried yesterday at Camben in the Odd Fellows' cemetery. Members of the Wells family and a great crowd of persons attended the interment.

Talking Up.
He was a well-meaning young man, but as a curate in a small village he had never had occasion to meet the class of people who frequented the fashionable parish to which he had just been appointed. His new rector, wishing to help him on to success, had been liberal with advice, and had duly impressed him with the importance of always taking the "tone" of the people with whom he mingled. Being invited to take dinner at the mansion of one of the members of the congregation and knowing that he would have to say grace, the young curate took his cue from the conversation overheard before dinner, and when his hostess nodded meaningfully in his direction, he delivered himself of the following: "O Lord, thanks awfully, jolly good feed, wot!" —Bellman.

All these contracts are in Woodbury gray granite, and a number of them are now going through the sheds.

In Woodbury pink the company has the contract for the Astoria church as Astoria, Long Island; while for their Bethel granite they have the contract for the Old Colony Trust company's building at Boston, Mass.

Futility of Our Wholesale Justice.
In our present system of wholesale justice to minor criminals futility does it involve huge injustice? A judge of the second greatest city in America tells how he reached these conclusions in the July McClure's.

"Persons were often brought before me," says Judge Cleland of Chicago, "who had been imprisoned many times and who were no better but obviously much worse as a result of such treatment. I found upon investigation that the city contained a very large number of these persons, who were known as 'repeaters,' and that the time of the police and the courts was much occupied in re-arresting and recommitting them to the house of correction. Upon examining the records of this institution, I found that of the nine thousand persons imprisoned the previous year because of their inability to pay the fines imposed, nearly one-half had been there from two to two hundred and one times each. Eighteen women had each served one hundred terms. I was therefore convinced that this method of 'correction' was not only harsh and unjust to the families of such persons, but was of no value as a corrective to the defendants themselves.

"Started by such disclosures, I resolved to study conditions at close range and went into the homes of some of these offenders against the law, taking with me interpreters, for the great majority of them were foreigners. In many of these homes poverty had done its worst. Every surrounding influence favored undesirable citizenship; even turned present flagrant violations of the law; the tumble-down stairways, the defective plumbing, the overflowing garbage boxes, the uncleaned streets and alleys, all suggested that laws were not made to be enforced.

"In one place there was a broken-down woman with six children. Two of the children had been arrested for stealing coal from a car. The mother explained that her 'man' was in the Bridgeway sobering up from one of his frequent drunks and that they had no money to buy coal, which was plainly apparent. Here were children forced to become criminals because the law was helpless to correct their father."

The Finish.
"What do you think the finish of the campaign will be?"
"I suppose," answered Mr. Sirius Barker, "it will be the usual finish, with one side talking about virtue triumphant and the other making dark hints about fraud."—Washington Star.

FISHERMEN'S SUPERSTITIONS.

Dancing for Salmon—Words to Be Avoided When Baiting a Hook.

In British Columbia the Indians ceremoniously went to meet the first salmon and in blustering voices tried to win their favor by calling them all chiefs.

Every spring in California the Karakua used to dance for salmon. Maenwhile one of their number secluded himself in the mountains and fasted for ten days. Upon his return he solemnly approached the river, took the first salmon of the catch, ate some of it and with the remainder lighted a sacrificial fire. The same Indians laboriously climbed to the mountain top after the poles for the spearing booth, being convinced that if they were gathered where the salmon were watching no fish would be caught.

Very widespread, in fact, is this native belief of the necessity of caution whenever Adam is on fishing bent.

In Japan among the primitive race of the Ainos even the women left at home at not allowed to talk lest the fish may hear and disapprove, while the first fish is always brought in through a window instead of a door so the other fish may not see.

The Eskimo women of Alaska never saw while the men are fishing, and should any mentioning be imperative they do it shut up in little tents out of sight of the sea.

Under no circumstances on the northeast coast of Scotland will a fisherman at sea mention certain objects on land, such as "minister," "kirk," "swine," "dog," etc., and the line will surely be lost if a pig is seen while baiting it. As on the land chickens must not be counted until they are hatched, so at sea fish must not be counted until they are all caught. It is good luck to find mice nibbling among the nets; a horse-shoe nailed to the mast will help, and a herring caught and salted down will produce wonders.

In the Shetland Islands a cat must not be mentioned before a man baiting his line, and among the Magyars of Hungary a fisherman will turn back and walk over a tide if he meets a woman wearing a white apron.

Every year the natives of the Duke of York Island decorate a canoe with flowers and fern, fill it with shell money and cast it adrift "to compensate the fish for their fellows caught and eaten."

It was always the custom of the Maoris, the primitive inhabitants of New Zealand, to put the first fish that they caught back into the sea with a prayer that it might tempt other fish to come and be caught.

If the fish did not come soon enough in British Columbia, the Indians used to employ a wizard, who made an image of a swimming fish and put it in the water to attract live fish to the bait.—Los Angeles Times.

THE PEOPLE ALL

In Chorus Cried, Give Us Newbro's Herpicide.

This word of late has been in everyone's mouth, and many are wondering what the word signifies, though no one has yet been found, who will deny that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE does the work. Well, for the information of thousands of people who like to know all about a good thing, we would say that HERPICIDE means, a destroyer or killer of "Herpes," "New Herpes" is the family name of a disease caused by various vegetable parasites. A similar microbe causes dandruff, itching scalp, and falling hair; it is the microbe that NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE promptly destroys; after which the hair grows again, by leading druggists, chemists, etc. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich.
