LOOT MEYER HOME OF GEMS. Burglars Visit Summer Residence of the Postmaster-general and Make a Rich Haul. Hamilton, Mass., Sept. 1.—An investigation by a number of private detectives and police officials was begun in earnest yesterday, to locate, if possible, a collection of valuable jewelry stolen Sunday night from the summer home of Postmaster-general Von L. Meyer in this town. The articles included a number of family jewels much treasured, which were contained in a small box, a diamond necklace, a set of black pearls, a diamond pin and a number of other gems.

The theft was effected while the family was at supper Sunday evening and was discovered by Postmaster-general Meyer, who found an upstairs room in which the jewelry was kept rifled and disturbed. Later, Mrs. Meyer found the same state of affairs in her own room. No clue as to the identity of the thief has yet been found.

The hale, the hearty, the strong can afford to toss this paper to one side impatiently when they read the following, but any sufferer in Barre who has suffered hours of torture caused by kidney complaint will stand in his own light if he does not follow the valuable advice offered here.

L. H. Hooker, retired, of 101 Prospect street, Barre, Vt., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at E. A. Drown's, did me more good than all the prescriptions and other remedies I ever used. Over eight years ago I gave a statement for publication telling what they had done for me, and to-day I have even more confidence in them. I had suffered for a long time from kidney complaint, and my condition was finally considered serious. My back ached nearly all the time, and the action of my kidneys was disordered. I at last resorted to Doan's Kidney Pills and received wonderful relief. I use this remedy occasionally now, and have recommended it to dozens of people, many of whom have been so greatly benefited that they have come back and thanked me for telling them of this valuable medicine."

BEST JERSEY COW PRIZE.

Handsome Silver Cup to Be Given to Winner at Vermont State Fair.

The silver cup offered by Ed. Darling of East Burke, Vt. for the best Jersey cow exhibited on the grounds at the Vermont state fair at White River Junction, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Sept. 22, 23, 24, and 25, has been received by Secretary Davis and is now on exhibition at his office at the Junction. The cup is of handsome design, made of sterling silver and a prize well worth competing for. The premium book issued by the state fair commission in mentioning this prize says "the cup will be worth not less than $100. As a matter of fact the cup cost nearly $200. Mr. Darling, who offers the prize, is the president of the American Jersey Cattle club.

The commission offers prizes aggregating $40 for the best exhibit of garden vegetables given by the children not over 12 years of age from any school in Vermont. Mr. C. H. Dana of West Lebanon, N. H., believes there should be a prize to old men who make exhibits of vegetables grown by themselves. He is 77 years old and he offers a prize of $25 to the man as old as himself or older who makes a better exhibit of vegetables than he will make. He says the older boys are entitled to recognition fully as much as the really young fellows.

There will be a meeting of the state fair commission at White River Junction, Saturday, Sept. 12, to complete the final arrangements before the dates of the fair.

The state fish hatchery will make a much larger exhibit of the fish that grow in Vermont waters than were made a year ago.

Special arrangements have been made with the Pinkerton detective agency and experienced men will be on the grounds and on the trains to protect fair patrons from sneak thieves and pickpockets.

ON HIS WAY BACK TO PRISON. Vermont Prison Warden Had Escaped Prisoner, Who Had Been Caught in Ohio.

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 1.—Deputy Warden M. H. Loukes of the Vermont state prison at Windsor arrived in this city Sunday afternoon, having in his custody Oliver Germain, who escaped from the Windsor prison October 31, 1907. Officer Loukes had come through from Troy, O., where he arrested Germain last week, and the trip had been a hard one for the warden, because his prisoner had been sick all the way, which had prevented either of them from getting any sleep. They went from the railway station to the police station, where the warden put his prisoner in a cell and went to bed himself up on the third floor in one of the rooms that are kept furnished for officers or inspectors who are obliged to get some sleep at the station in times of long hours and much work. Officer Loukes left a "call" at the desk for 7:30 o'clock, and at that time he was awakened and soon after set out to take the 8:15 train north with his prisoner.

Officer Loukes said that Germain effected his escape from the prison at a time when one wing was being repaired and all of the prisoners had been doubled up in the other. He with his cellmate, after several months of planning and quiet work, succeeded in removing the bricks and masonry from an obscure corner of their cell and on the night of their escape broke up through to the roof, from which they let themselves down by a rope. They left the jail at about 10:30 o'clock at night, and it was not until the next morning that they were rolled up under the blankets of their cells so that the watchman, making his rounds, thought that they were both in the cell asleep. Warden Loukes, coming to the jail in the morning, saw the rope hanging from the roof and, thinking it looked like an escape, rushed into the jail and asked if all the prisoners were there. He was told by the watchman that they were, but soon the departure of Germain and his cellmate was discovered. Germain was serving a sentence of not more than 12 nor less than 10 years for rape and had already served two years. His home was in Burlington.

For many months all attempts to trace Germain and his cellmate were unavailing and the Vermont authorities had about given up expecting to recapture the two men when, in response to their numerous circulars, word came from Ohio that Germain was in the town of Troy in that state. Warden Loukes went out there at once and found Germain working there in a livery stable. He had been in that town since last December and had begun to feel quite secure. But when he saw Officer Loukes approaching him he put up a good front and said, "I'm glad to see you, warden. I couldn't have stood it much longer." According to the Vermont law, the amount of time, two years, that he had already served of his sentence, will now be disregarded and he will begin to serve over again the whole sentence. In addition to this an additional two to four years could be placed on his sentence for jail-breaking, but Warden Loukes said Sunday night that this extreme measure will not be resorted to in his case. His cellmate is still at liberty.

HIGH PRAISE.

"Went to Be Bored; Stayed to Applaud," Told of Howe's Pictures.

One of the most noted dramatic critics in America after seeing Lyman H. Howe's Lifeforms for the first time expressed himself thus: "I went to be bored and stayed to applaud enthusiastically" (and then in proof of his enthusiasm devoted over half a column of space to praising it in one of the most influential dailies of one of our largest cities). It was a spontaneous tribute to the finest program of moving pictures yet offered by Mr. Howe. It will be at opera house on Wednesday, Sept. 2. One of its features reveals the startling contrasts in ancient, unique, holy India. The practices, peculiarities, and strange life of a still stranger land make a picture of absorbing interest. The pictures reveal the marvelous ruins of a civilization that flourished many centuries before the dawn of ours. The scenes portray an astonishing variety of races, costumes, and architecture. Bombay is first visited, then Darjeeling, Calcutta; and finally the revered city of Benares. As the audience floats down the sacred Ganges, a panorama of ruins is unrolled which is indescribable. Myriads of natives are shown absorbed in bathing in the holy river to purify their souls, if not their bodies. Following this the Monkey Temple is shown. It is the abode of 500 Monkeys worshipped by the Hindus as divine. The intense religious devotion of the land is illustrated by the penance done by a native in sitting on a bed of nails for seven years.

FITZGERALD ARRAIGNED FOR THE THEFT OF $173,000

Preliminary Hearing in Case When U. S. Treasury Was Robbed.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—George W. Fitzgerald was arraigned yesterday before Judge Chetlain on the charge of stealing $173,000 from William Boldewick, assistant treasurer of the United States. Only enough evidence was presented to warrant the judge in holding the defendant. Col. H. C. Gano related the details of his conversation with Fitzgerald, in which the former assistant teller of the sub-treasury is said to have proposed to the colonel to get rid of at least one $1,000 bill for which Fitzgerald was willing to give him $500. Evidence of Fitzgerald's manner of living was introduced to establish if possible the fact that he has been spending money far in excess of his supposed income.
