GO RIGHT AT IT.

Friends and Neighbors in Barre Will Show You How. Rubbing an aching back may relieve it. But it won't cure it. You must reach the root of it—the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills go right at it! Reach the cause; relieve the pain. They cure, too, so Barre people say. Mrs. Annie Gibb, of 21 Brooklyn street, Barre, Vt., says: "For over a year I had more or less backache, brought on by a disordered condition of my kidneys. If I brought too much strain on the muscles of my back, sharp pains would catch me, and I also suffered from headache and spells of dizziness. When I overworked or caught cold it always made the trouble worse. I read a good deal about Doan's Kidney Pills and finally went to E. A. Down's drug store for a box. Before I had taken the contents of this one box my backache was relieved, and when I had finished a second box the pains had ceased and I felt better in every way. I am glad to recommend such a reliable remedy as Doan's Kidney Pills proved to be in my case." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

Edgar Selwyn in "Pierre of the Plains" Wednesday Evening. Edgar Selwyn appears to be decently surprised that he is a successful star; and there is something peculiarly likable about people who are capable of being decently surprised at their own successes. So far Mr. Selwyn in "Pierre" is to appear at the opera house on Wednesday evening under the managerial direction of Henry B. Harris in "Pierre of the Plains" written by himself from Sir Gilbert Parker's "Pierre and His People," but he has the good grace to look upon it as a sort of accident, and smiles when he thinks of his good luck. Actors as a rule are not modest, and as a matter of fact there are very few men in any profession who are. But there are foolish actors and wise actors, and there are foolish men and wise men who are not acting. But there are no modest men though there are both men and actors who impress us as being modest. Edgar Selwyn is the author of some fourteen plays. He has never appeared in a part in any play either by himself or some other person in which he has not scored a personal triumph, no matter whether it was a bit of five lines or as star of the piece. Mr. Selwyn is one of the main directors of the very successful playbrokers firm of Selwyn & company of New York and besides all this he has an independent fortune of his own, and yet if you asked Selwyn if he was not proud of the monetary and artistic success he has achieved so far in life he would probably answer—"It's simply a matter of luck." Selwyn is not a big man in stature, but he is a big man in brain. He is a modest man and what is more he is a modest actor.

"Human Hearts," Next Saturday.

"Human Hearts" the melodramatic success announced at the opera house Saturday, October 10, matinee and night appeal to every class of play-goers. It deals with a story that tears the heart in pieces, an honest man, Tom Logan, an honest young blacksmith in the Arkansas hills, falls in love and marries a reformed confidence woman. The dull country life soon falls on her. She accidentally meets her former lover and "pal." Without any just cause they conspire together to ruin Tom and kill him if necessary. The woman calls him while her accomplice conceals himself. The father of Tom responds and is mistaken for the young blacksmith. He is fatally stabbed by the ambushed man. Tom, coming out to see where his father is, is accused by the adventures and her "pal" of the murder. He is finally sentenced on that charge. But his friends ultimately establish his innocence and he is released. Retribution overtakes his villainous and murderous accusers. No play of its kind possesses a stronger plot or more sensational incidents. The serious element is mingled with comedy, forming a combination that never fails to touch a responsive chord in the hearts of play-goers.

WASHINGTON

The husking at the home of G. L. Dwinell last Thursday evening was well attended, and an enjoyable time was participated in by all. "Special" the races on the meadow afterwards. The many friends of Mrs. J. Berton Pike will be glad to learn of the slow, yet steady improvement in her condition since her operation September 25 at the Mary Fletcher hospital at Burlington. B. R. Nouns has leased the cider mill of George Wooster for the season and is prepared to do custom work for the public. "Ben" is neat and nice about his work, so everyone may feel perfectly at ease to leave their work in his hands. Fish and Game Warden J. D. Burton Pike is in possession of license for killing deer and removing same from our state. Any non-resident hunter can obtain one of these upon application and the fee of $15. Thus avoiding unnecessary trouble and fines. Ira Ormsbee is in a pique, a remarkable gardener, he having picked a mess of fresh green peas October 3. These same peas gave up to him a cup of peas September 13. Ira's garden was planted in May, no new seed having been put into the ground since that date.

Dainty Morsels for Afternoon Tea.

Add a piece of rock candy to afternoon tea in place of sugar. Served with Nabisco Sugar Wafers, this will indeed be a revelation. A simple tin will prove how admirably these wafers coincide with the daintiness their name suggests. They are rich, crisp, appetizing, especially for the invalid, and delicately flavored. When these Nabisco Sugar Wafers are served, watch the faces around the table brighten. Gracefully Turned. Young Wife (rather nervously)—Oh, cook, I must really speak to you. Your master is always complaining. One day it is the soup, the second day it is the fish, the third day it is the joint—in fact, it is always something or other. Cook (with feeling)—Well, m'm, I'm sorry for you. It must be quite lawful to live with a gentleman of that sort.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

All are welcome to attend the services and hear these famous preachers. Admission free to all. Services will begin every evening during the mission at 7.30.

A Discovery

(Original.) Last summer I went to the seashore with a party of young people, my intimate friends. Among them was Virginia McGregor, for whom I had long had a fancy. I did not consider myself good enough for Virginia, and there was a fellow about her all the while with whom she seemed especially pleased. At least whenever I saw them together she looked at him with her big eyes in a way she never looked at any other man, certainly not at me.

One morning at the bathing house we went down to the beach for a bath. Virginia had on a pretty shade of brown mohair that suited exactly the tint of her Titian hair. She certainly looked entrancing, and I couldn't keep my eyes off her. She didn't appear to notice my admiration, and I fancied that, being absorbed in thought with the other fellow, she was not likely to notice any admiration but his. There was one thing about her that attracted my especial attention. About her neck was a gold chain to which hung a tiny brass key. I wished to know what the treasure was that it locked, but I don't consider curious questions well bred.

Virginia was a good swimmer, I a fair one. She stepped lightly into the surf, jumped over the first two waves and took a header under the third. When she came up she swam like a mermaid straight out beyond the roped inclosure. I was talking to one of the girls of the party at the time and as soon as I could get away went in after Virginia. The wind was blowing up the coast from the south, crossing the waves rolling in from the east, a condition productive of sea poisons. From the top of a wave I saw that Virginia had been caught in one of these whirlpools and was being carried out. At the same time she gave a shriek. The bathing master heard it and plunged in, while two men standing on the beach, seeing her danger, pulled the lifeboat to the surf, launched it and hastened to the rescue.

Meanwhile I swam for Virginia and by a vigorous effort succeeded in reaching her. She had become paralyzed by fright and could do nothing whatever for herself. While trying to get my hand on something by which to support her my fingers got caught in the gold chain about her neck. I grasped it and held her up by it till a moment before the simultaneous arrival of the lifeboat and the bathing master, when it broke. I held on to it while we were both being pulled into the boat.

Virginia was too exhausted and excited to notice her loss then, and I said nothing about it. As soon as we were safe ashore she thanked me for my effort, but there was no warmth in her gratitude. She then left the beach, and I saw no more of her till the evening. I should have given her the broken chain and the key still attached, but I did not. I thought I would wait awhile. She did not mention them, and finally I asked her if she had them on. She said regretfully that she had lost them in the ocean. I sympathized with her in her loss, remarking that she seemed to prize them. The only reply I received was a blush.

I kept the articles, thinking every day that I would return them, but somehow I couldn't make up my mind to do so. The truth is I coveted Virginia, though I scarcely realized it. When a fellow covets a girl he is apt to hold on to anything of hers he can get his hands on. I have known a lover to carry a shoestring next his heart. I couldn't give up the chain that had clasped Virginia's neck nor the key which I fancied might lock some man's love letters.

That winter I was made much of by the McGregor family, they considering that they owed me Virginia's life. One evening, being at their house at a social gathering, the premises being thrown open, I concluded to reconnoiter with a view to getting a sight of the mysterious inclosure that contained—I was curious to know what. Passing a bedroom the door of which was open, I saw a curious box of brass and mosaic on a dresser. I listened, and not hearing any one on the floor stepped in and, taking my key from my vest pocket, put it to the keyhole of the box. It slipped in as though it had been made for the lock. I hesitated, bushed at the dishonorable act I was tempted to perform, remembered that all's fair in love and war and turned the key. A tiny click and I raised the lid. There was a faded rose falling to pieces. Indeed, it was but scattered stems and petals. There was a bit of folded paper. I opened it.

To say I was astonished expresses nothing. First I recognized my own handwriting. Next I saw that it was a message I had passed to Virginia long before when a lot of us boys and girls were amusing ourselves together with bits of nonsense. The only other thing in the box was a photograph face down. I turned it, and, behold, it was my own honest face when I was half a dozen years younger. I had just time to put the articles back in the box, lock it and get out when I heard Virginia's voice at the foot of the stairway. I met her halfway down.

I didn't propose to Virginia right off. Oh, no. I played with her as a cat would tease a mouse. Why should the girls have all the fun? I made love to her confidentially, knowing her secret, occasionally pressing her to tell me what the key locked. But not till after our marriage did I confess that I knew as well as she.
