OF UNTOLD VALUE.

The Information Contained in This Citizen's Statement Is Priceless.

The hale, hearty, the strong can afford to toss this paper to one side impatiently when they read the following, but any sufferer in Barre who has suffered hours of torture caused by kidney complaint will stand in his own light if he does not follow the valuable advice offered here.

L. H. Hooker, retired, of 101 Prospect street, Barre, Vt., says: "Doan's Kidney Pills, which I procured at E. A. Drown's, did me more good than all the prescriptions and other remedies I ever used. Over eight years ago I gave a statement for publication telling what they had done for me, and to-day I have even more confidence in them. I had suffered for a long time from kidney complaint, and my condition was finally considered serious. My back ached nearly all the time, and the action of my kidneys was disordered. I at last resorted to Doan's Kidney Pills and received wonderful relief. I use this remedy occasionally now, and have recommended it to dozens of people, many of whom have been so greatly benefited that they have come back and thanked me for telling them of this valuable medicine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

MONTPELIER WEDDINGS.

Marriage of Miss Ida Hughes to Royal L. McIntyre.

The marriage of Miss Ida Elizabeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Hughes, of Montpelier, to Royal L. McIntyre of Biddford, Me., was performed at the St. Augustine's church yesterday. Nuptial mass was said by the Rev. W. J. O'Sullivan. The ceremony was performed at 9 o'clock in the presence of many relatives and acquaintances of the contracting parties. The bride on the arm of the groom passed up the center aisle of the church to strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Florence Cashen. They were attended by Miss Agnes Connors, maid of honor, and Harry Hughes, brother of the bride. The bride was becomingly dressed in a blue traveling suit with hat to match and carried a bouquet of roses, while the maid of honor was gowned in a suit of green and carried pink roses. Miss Mary Mack sung Ave Maria and O Salutaris. The ushers were William Trombley and Louis Drake, cousins of the bride. As the wedding party were passing out of the church, Miss Cashen played Lohengrin's wedding march. Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride. They left on the afternoon train for a wedding trip after which they make their home in Biddford, Me., where the groom has employment. The bride has lived most of her life in this city. She has been leader of St. Augustine's choir and sang difficult parts in operas presented by local talent. She has recently been singing for Daniel Roach in the theatre in Barre. The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred McIntyre of Biddford, Me., where he has passed much of his life.

A very quiet wedding occurred at 7 o'clock yesterday morning in St. Augustine's church, when T. E. Corcoran of Northfield and Charlotte Clark of Ansonia, Conn., were married by Rev. W. J. O'Sullivan. After a short wedding trip they will reside in this city.

Edward Byrne of this city and Miss Helen Fitzgerald of Rutland were married at the Catholic church in Rutland yesterday morning. They left for a wedding trip through New York, after which they will make their home in the room in the Langdon block from which William Connors removed. The bride has been employed as bookkeeper in the office of a large lumber concern in Rutland, while the groom is well known in this city and is employed in the National Life Insurance company's offices. He is a member of the local lodges of Elks and Knights of Columbus.

AMUSEMENT NOTES

"THE DEVIL"

Savage Says Moving Pictures Do Not Show a Clear Version.

Henry W. Savage, whose authorized version of "The Devil" to be seen here, tonight has sent out a warning to opera house managers to beware of untruthful unauthorized and objectionable moving pictures, purporting to give correct scenes from Franz Molnar's remarkable Hungarian play. As a matter of fact, it is declared, these pictures give no idea of the play and are simply an imposition on the public. Motion pictures of the Savage production of "The Devil" have never been authorized and the pictures shown are cheap, crude and altogether misleading. This, however, would not be so objectionable and dis-

WHAT COLORS TELL.

The Way the Spectroscope Reads the Sun and Stars.

When one lights a common sulphur match in the dark it is worth while to notice what happens. First, its phosphorus gives out faint yellow rays, and almost at the same time the sulphur begins to burn with bluish beams.

As yet the flame yields little light. In a moment or two the wood of the match takes fire, and then a stream of clear white light pours forth. Each of the materials of the match—its phosphorus, sulphur and wood—has shone in burning with a color of its own.

In a street lighted by electricity and gas the eye detects at once the difference between the white rays of the one and the yellow beams of the other. If nitrate of strontia is set on fire we have a splendid red flame. Filings of copper burn with a glow of greenish blue, and a fine, pure blue is had when filings of zinc are ignited. These and other such substances furnish the maker of fireworks with his materials.

Rockets, roman candles and bombs all derive their beauty from the special tints which attend the combustion of their ingredients. And any one who has once seen the colors peculiar to common salt, iron or antimony as they trace themselves on the evening sky will always know what is aflame when he sees those colors again.

Sir John Herschel was the first to understand that colors of this kind tell a wonderful story. He will know how the stars varied in tint—that Aldebaran was ruddy, Arcturus yellow and Sirius, the most glorious of all, white. Might not the colors of a body aflame, whether on earth or in the sky, really be telling us of what that body was composed?

His suggestion was taken up, and its fruit is that marvel of ingenuity, the spectroscope. One of its principal parts is a prism employed to break up the hues. These hues, which are divided by many dark lines, make known to us that the sun and stars are built of such materials as compose our own globe.

Yet more, they tell us what kind of atmosphere surrounds them, and most astonishing of all, give us the rate at which a remote star is moving toward or from the tiny orb we inhabit.—New York Herald.

"THE THIEF"

Something About Charles Frohman's Play Coming to Barre.

"The Thief," which Charles Frohman will bring to this city for the first time at Barre opera house, Oct. 26, is from the pen of Henri Bernstein, one of the most ingenious and successful of contemporary playwrights. Mr. Bernstein is already known for several plays similar in construction, very similar in ingenuity and composition, to "The Thief," but it is probable that for many a year to come he will be known in this country, as he still is in France, as the author of "The Thief," despite his more recent plays.

"The Thief" is in three acts. It observes all the unities of time, place and incident. The action takes place within twenty-four hours. First produced at the Renaissance theatre in Paris in December, 1907, "The Thief" made an immediate sensation. It ran through the entire season with M. Guitry and Mme. LeBarry in the chief roles. About the fables, the ambition, the cunning, the love as deep as human passion and as wide as human frailty of a woman, "The Thief" is a woman's play. But side with the great lesson it contains for every wife, it contains rich food for thought for every husband. It is the most startling human dramatic document put on the stage in years.

The company which will perform "The Thief" in Barre is sufficiently well known not to need detailed introduction. Every performer in "The Thief" is already generally recognized as an actor or actress of great strength of emotion and sure dramatic appeal.

No play put on in the last twenty-five years has created the stir and received such general approbation as this play from the French, whose story runs as follows:

The Vovsins, husband and wife, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Legardes at their country home. The Legardes have a son, Fernand, who is smitten with Mrs. Vovsin, and writes her the most ardent love letters. Mrs. Vovsin, who is young and charming, and who loves her husband with an unwavering devotion, treats the young man's amatory attitude lightly as a sort of romantic flutter that will soon pass away. She is good-natured and good-hearted toward Fernand, but his attentions have made no other impression upon her than that they are the outbreak of a silly sentimentality on his part. He writes her love letters which he places under the pillow of the bed in her boudoir and leaves them around in other places where he knows she will find them. This letter writing leads him into a serious difficulty on which he has not at all reckoned. For Mrs. Legardes had money stolen from her bureau drawer, and as a detective named Zambanitzky, who is in the house masquerading as a friend of Mr. Legardes, has seen Fernand quietly creeping up the stairs to the bed-room and has also seen him take something from the drawer in question, he openly accuses him of being the thief. It is known that Fernand has had an affair with a pretty actress to whom he has made presents, and it looks as if he had stolen the money to meet the financial requirements of the case. The Legardes are astonished at the revelation. They refuse to believe the detective. He unfolds, bit by bit, however, his evidence, and the father at last is convinced. He sends for his son. Fernand has gone into the grounds to recover the letters he wrote to Mrs. Vovsin, she having told him where he would find them, unopened and unread. Mrs. Vovsin volunteers to go after Fernand when the father demands his presence. She returns in a moment with him. To the amazement of everybody but the detective, Fernand confesses his guilt. His father, furious at the young man's disgrace, decides to send him away for a period to a distant country, where he can earn and repay the stolen money. Of course Fernand is not the thief. The discovery of the real culprit and the boy's exculpation come later on. Meanwhile the preparations for Fernand's banishment proceed. Mrs. Vovsin's niece, kindly talk, in which she told him how futile his passion for her was, as she loved her husband too dearly to care for anyone else, has not had the effect of quenching or in any way subduing his love for her. The relations between husband and wife become painfully strained, and continue so until the moment set for Fernand's departure. Here disclosures are made that put an astonishing but satisfactory complexion upon all the circumstances, and the dramatist is permitted to carry his story to a happy conclusion.

NEW YORK WAITERS.

They Spoiled the Appetite of the Transplanted Citizen.

"These New York waiters have got on my nerves," said a transplanted citizen from a smaller town. "Dining in the magnificent hotels and restaurants would be a joy if some one would kindly remove the waiters while you ate. I can think of nothing but the big, black buzzards that hover over your head in Florida."

"There are so many waiters standing around, all in black, and they look so big and get their faces or their hands so close to you and your dinner that you feel like throwing the china at them. When your waiter has disappeared a smaller edition keeps right after you, filling your glass, removing dishes, giving you more butter, and if you look away from him the head waiter has his eye on you."

"The most maddening thing of all to me is the way the waiter orders your dinner for you. One took me in hand the other night, and I let him have his way just to see what he would do to me. I hate fish, but he averred that fish was the best thing I could eat and one particular dish was the chef's masterpiece. He brought it and, ye gods, it was fish all greasy with a dope made of cheese and mushrooms that about finished me; but, fortunately, he only let me take two bites when he whisked my plate away and set down a salad that had several kinds of fruit laced to lettuce leaves, with strips of red and green peppers and French dressing over that. I barely looked at that when he took it away in triumph and gave me an ice cream thick with chestnuts and fruits."

"Now, I dine on rare roast beef, plain lettuce and never take dessert, so you see how near he came to sullying me. 'Come again, sir,' said he. 'Not if I'm conscious,' said I."—New York Times.
